AMONG REAL ESTATE OWNERS AND DEALERS.

A DECIDEDLY BUOYANT FEELING NOTED AMONG OPERATORS.

Good Purchases of Prospective Business Properties on Broadway, on Spring and on Main Street—Healthy State of Activity in Other Districts.

There is something exhilerating connected with the expansion and growth incidental to the building up of a great city. Those who take part in the work, and contribute to the development probably realize this more fully than others, but those who merely note the progress of events share somewhat in this feeling. With the progress that Los Angeles has already made, and the bright prospects ahead of it, which are as absolutely certain of realization as any events of the future can be, it is safe to say that it is now entering upon such a period of growth as will make it in time, and probably in a comparatively short time as such things are estimated, one of the large cities of the country. The steadily increasing volume of real estate sales, the steady increase of real estate values, under the stimulating influence of large cash purchases of business properties, and the substantial, business blocks which are going up on those properties, and in which all the space is oftener than otherwise rented before they are finished, mark the sure beginning of metropolitan proportions for this municipality. The sales on Broadway, on Spring and on Main streets, noted during the past week show that the trend of investment continues to be encouraging. The feeling is general that the action of the Mayor in vetoing the street railway franchises, about which so much has been said, will result in securing for this city the benefit of competition in this respect, and the market is decidedly bouyant. But while trading is active, and sales are mostly for cash, there is practically no disposition to advance prices beyond conservative figures.

Investment in Ranch Property.

One of the purchases of ranch properties noted last week was that by which Mrs. Nancy Foster secured from James C. McCall a forty-acre tract of land lying about two miles north of the town of Etiwanda, in San Bernardino county, for $15,000. Twenty-three acres of the tract are set out in navel and Thompson Improved oranges, four acres are in Royal apricots, four in Villa Franca lemons, and six acres are in Sultana grapes. A modern six-room cottage that cost about $1800 stands upon the place, together with good barns, outbuildings and packing houses. Six carloads of oranges were shipped from the place last year. The purchaser is a resident of Syracuse, N. Y., who is spending the winter in this city, and, being pleased with the outlook, buys this property as an investment.

The deal, which was a cash transaction, was negotiated through the agency of Sexton Bros. & Co.

Sought by Home-seekers.

Strong and Dickinson secured another subdivision last week and placed the same upon the market. This is the fourth tract this firm has handled within the last few months. It is to be known as Strong and Dickinson's Maple-Avenue tract, and it extends from Thirty-seventh street on the north to Thirty-ninth street on the south, and from San Julian street on the East to Maple avenue on the West. Sixty-eight lots, with an average frontage of 40 by a depth of 110 feet, are comprised in this subdivision. The firm paid $10,000 for the property. The streets are to be graded, curbed, and sidewalked at the expense of the present owners. The lots are offered to the public at $250 apiece, and as showing the demand for well-located lots at such figures it may be stated that twenty of them were sold, mostly to homeseekers, within five days after the tract was placed upon the market.

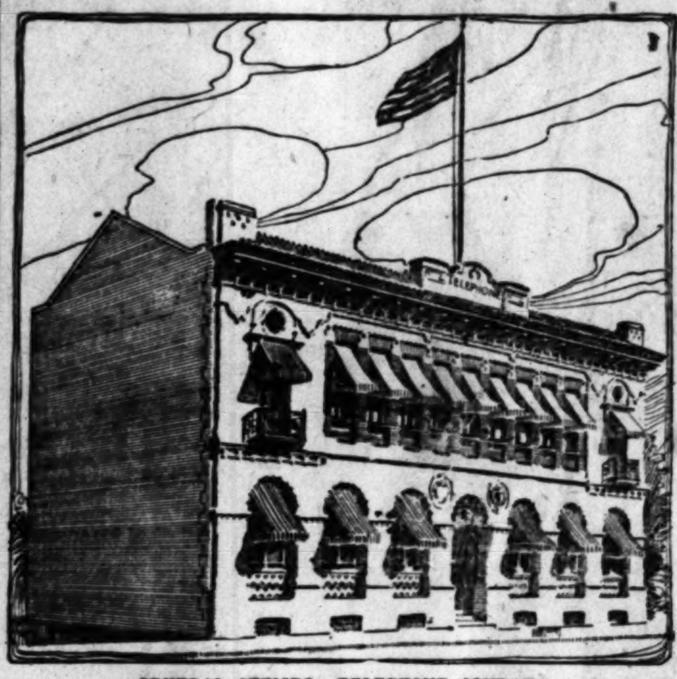
Broadway, Between Sixth and Seventh.

One of the important purchases of prospective business property made last week, and reported exclusively in The Times of Thursday, was that by which W. B. Glidden secured from Mrs. M. R. Sinsabaugh, through the agency of S. K. Lindley, a lot, 35½x145 feet, on the west side of Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets and near the center of the block. It extends to a forty-foot paved street, known as St. Vincents Place, and is unimproved. The property was bought for $40,000, which is at the rate of $1126 per front foot. The buyer is a wholesale jeweler of San Francisco. The purchase was made as an investment.



GENERAL OFFICES, TELEPHONE COMPANY.

On Main, Just Below Third.

Mrs. Marie A. Ballerino purchased of the estate of William Passmore, deceased, last week, through the agency of I. L. Clark, as previously reported in The Times, 40x165 feet, on the west side of Main street, 131 feet south of Third, with a two-story brick business building, the lower floor of which is used for stores and the upper floor as a rooming-house, for $37,500. The property yields a good income on the investment. Mrs. Ballerino was one of the grantors in the sale of the Ballerino homestead to M. T. Allen of Chicago, which was made some months ago for something over $100,000; and in reinvesting a portion of her part of the proceeds of that sale in good business property she displays good business judgment.

Corner Fifth and Spring.

One of the largest sales of Spring-street property noted last week was that which is reported to have been made by A. B. Gates of Pasadena, to a syndicate composed of four local investors. The property is 86x152 feet, on the northeast corner of Fifth and Spring streets, and is improved with a two-story brick business building. The consideration is placed at $163,000, or a little less than $2000 per front foot. The negotiations were through the agency of Bradshaw Bros.

On Broadway, Below Sixth.

A. C. Bilicke sells to a local investor, through R. A. Rowan, 62½x154 feet on the east side of Broadway, about 120 feet south of Sixth street, improved with a two-story brick building, known as the Columbia Hotel, for $65,000. Mr. Bilicke purchased the property from Thomas Haverty only a few weeks ago for $56,000.

On Main, Below Ninth.

Among the investments in prospective business properties closed up last week, as noted exclusively in The Times, was that made by William and Ferdinand Thum of Pasadena. They bought of Miss E. A. Brown, through Merrill & Huntsberger, lots 8 and 9 of the John G. Downey tract, 122x140 feet, on the east side of Main street, 304 feet south of Ninth, with a twelve-room two-story frame dwelling, for $31,000. The house is worth about $5000, leaving $26,000 as the price paid for the frontage. This is at the rate of $213 per front foot, a pretty fair price, as property has heretofore been held, for frontage on Main street below Ninth, but a continuation of present developments will soon cause it to be considered decidedly cheap. The purchasers are men of considerable business experience, being interested in manufacturing enterprises in the East, and they show their faith in the future of this city by picking up a good piece of prospective business property whenever the opportunity to do so occurs. This is the third purchase they have made through the agents named within the last few months, and they now own about $100,000 worth of Los Angeles realty.

Other Sales.

Other sales made last week some of which have already been reported in The Times, include the following:

Frank Irving to Mrs. Isabella J. Barrett, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., who buys for a home, through Merrill & Huntsberger, 50x150 feet on the south side of Seventh between Coronado and Rampart streets, with eight-room modern dwelling, for $6000.

For H. L. Horton to Carl F. Schader, who buys as an investment, 73½x130 feet, on the northeast corner of Main and Twenty-first streets, with a substantial eight-room dwelling, for $8500. The property was bought by the present grantor from Hugh Smith a little over sixty days ago for $7000. The present purchaser is an Arizona mining man whose home is in this city.

The Swedish Church to Abe Haas, 60x145 feet, on the northeast corner of Grand avenue and Tenth streets, for $13,500. A small store building, frame dwelling and church building are on the property.

Real Estate Notes.

W. C. Norman has purchased of R. W. Poindexter, through the agency of C. F. W. Palmer & Co., lots 3, 4 and 5, in Poindexter's subdivision of the Fitzgerald tract, 50x120 feet each, on the west side of Valencia, between Ninth and Tenth streets, unimproved, for $4000, and will erect a handsome residence upon the property, to be used as the home of himself and family.

F. W. Fuller has sold to Boaz Duncan, through Frank M. Kelsey, lot 8, in block 16, of Ord's survey, 50x135 feet, on the east side of Spring street, about 230 feet north of Seventh, with small cottage of nominal value, for $26,000. The tendency of investment seems to be southward on business thoroughfares.

Mrs. Anna E. Drane buys of Mrs. Laura M. Foster, through the agency of Merrill & Huntsberger, 50x118 feet, on the north side of Twenty-fifth street, between Magnolia avenue and Thornton street, with a ten-room, two-story frame residence, for $4000. The purchase was made as an investment. The same agency sells for a customer to Mrs. Alice M. Morley, a lot, 60x225 feet, on the east side of Moline avenue, 600 feet north of California street, in Pasadena, with a ten-room, single-story dwelling, for $3500. The property was bought as an investment, and it is rented, partly furnished, for $40 per month.

Prentice Lebus has purchased as an investment of William H. Ross, through the agencies of Lockhart & Son and George A. Cortelyou, a lot, 37½x85 feet, located on the north side of Fifth, between Los Angeles and Wall streets, with five-room cottage, for $3000, and contemplates erecting a frame store building on the property.

Among the transfers placed on the records last week was that by which S. K. Lindley and Martha L. Lindley conveyed to the executrix of the estate of William Passmore, deceased, as trustee, part lot 2, in block 29, of the Huber tract, for $16,000. The property is located on the west side of Hope street, between Seventh and Eighth, and is improved with a two-story frame apartment building, containing six modern flats.

The Los Angeles Loan and Trust Company, which is making considerable investments in this city, comprises among its stockholders, John B. Miller, W. R. Staats, John S. Cravens, A. K. Macomer, and other wealthy men of this city and Pasadena.

H. K. and Francis C. Shields sell to Mrs. Carrie M. Williamson lot 18 in block G of the Jones tract, located on the east side of Bush street, between Fourteenth and Pico streets, and improved with a two-story frame dwelling, for $5000; and they purchase of Mrs. Carrie M. Williamson and George W. Williamson, for $11,000, lot 15 of the Green tract, which lies on the east side of Green avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets, and is improved with a handsome two-story modern residence. Both sales made by Bassett & Smith.

Ida V. Olshausen buys, through the agency of Bradshaw Bros., lots 1 and 2, in block 6, of the W. G. Nevin tract, 73x178 feet each, on the southwest corner of Dorchester street, and St. Andrew's place, for $3100, and will build residence on premises that will cost about $8000.

Frank S. Hicks buys of D. R. Brearley and Joseph Burkhard, through John D. Foster & Co., part of block 59 of the Arlington tract, 173x500 feet, on the south side of Adams street, between Arlington street and Sixth avenue, unimproved, for $5200. Property bought as site for a home and will be improved at some time in the near future.

C. N. Brundage buys of Charles R. Markham, through W. G. Young & Co., a twenty-acre improved orange ranch, near Covina, for $10,000; and J. L. Eigholtz sells, through same firm, to W. McGinnis, a fourteen-acre lemon ranch at Hollywood, for $15,000.

Chester W. Thompson has purchased through Henry B. Spencer, ten unimproved lots of the Ross & Dixon tract, 40x120 feet each, on Dixon street, between Washington and Cambridge streets, for $5000, and will build modern cottages on lots as an investment.

Edward D. Silent & Co. have moved to larger and more commodious quarters on Second street, two doors west of their former location.

John T. Allen & Co. have bought of Ida and Rose Clark, 60x140 feet, on the southeast corner of Ninth and Los Angeles street, with a brick business building, for $10,800.

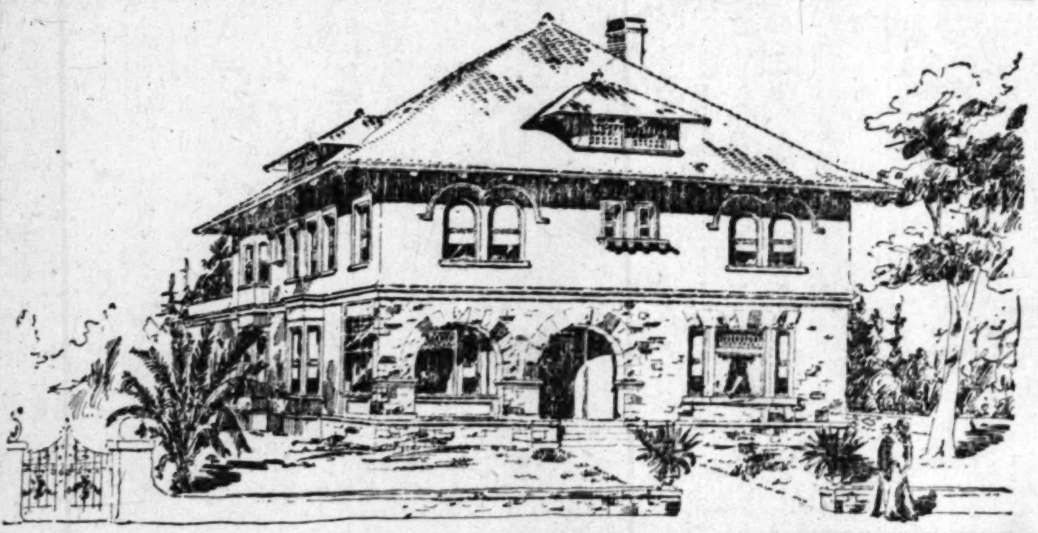
Dr. F. J. Newberry, recently of Iowa City, Iowa, buys of C. A. Boyle, through Drew & Lapworth, 50x150 feet on the east side of Westlake avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, with a nine-room two-story frame residence, for $6500, and will occupy the place as a home.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Phillips sells to Frank A. Knox, 60x118 feet, on the west side of North Broadway, between California street and Ft. Moore place, with twelve-room double dwelling-house, for a little less than $5000 cash. The property is a short distance above the new tunnel, and is certainly a bargain at the price at which it was secured.

Ben E. Ward has sold to E. H. Barmore 105x250 feet, north-east corner Adams and Hermosa streets, unimproved, for $4500.

Mrs. Nathan Diamond conveys to L. Kleinberger, who buys as an investment, through Edward D. Silent & Co., 50x150 feet, on the east side of Bonnie Brae street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, with nine-room residence, for $4500. The same agency sells for I. L. Lowman to S. P. Tressler, for $900, a lot 50x150 feet, unimproved, on the west side of Hoover, between Twelfth and Pico streets, and purchaser will erect a home for himself upon the premises, which will cost between $3000 and $4000.

Thomas W. Burns sells to J. H. Graham, through Davison & Longe, a six-room cottage and lot at 716 East Twenty-third street, for $2250, and purchaser will occupy the place as a home.



RESIDENCE OF RICHARD GREEN.

DOINGS OF BUILDERS AND ARCHITECTS.

INCREASING ACTIVITY MARKS CONDITIONS IN THIS LINE.

Buildings Begun and Completed in Various Parts of the City—Sketches of a New Telephone Building and of a Private Residence.

During the week forty new buildings were completed, as follows:

In the First Ward	2
Second Ward	1
Third Ward	7
Fourth Ward	8
Fifth Ward	8
Sixth Ward	6
Seventh Ward	5
Eighth Ward	1
Ninth Ward	2

Of these thirty-eight were dwellings and two business buildings.

The number of buildings begun was forty-nine, two of them being business buildings, and the remainder dwellings, distributed as follows:

In the First Ward	10
Second Ward	5
Third Ward	2
Fourth Ward	8
Fifth Ward	3
Sixth Ward	13
Seventh Ward	4
Ninth Ward	2

More new buildings in all parts of the city, and good, substantial structures being put up in all cases, whether the buildings be business blocks, houses of worship, apartment buildings, mansions or cottages, is certainly a very satisfactory record for any municipality. This is the report that can truthfully be made of conditions in the building line in this city, week after week. A steady, gradual increase of activity in this field is also noted, which is undoubtedly indicative of healthy growth.

The total number of permits issued by Julius W. Krause, City Superintendent of Buildings, from February 17 to February 21, inclusive, was sixty-six. The improvements authorized amounted to $72,795, and were distributed as follows:

Ward.	Number of Permits.	Valuations.
First	12	$12,025
Second	7	7,900
Third	4	8,480
Fourth	12	14,125
Fifth	4	7,450
Sixth	17	14,470
Seventh	5	4,645
Eighth	2	1,600
Ninth	3	2,100

New Telephone Offices.

On another part of this page will be found a cut showing the general office building of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, which is soon to be enlarged by an additional building that will be erected on the eastern portion of the lot of the company, which has a frontage of 75 feet on the east side of Hill, between Sixth and Seventh streets, and extends eastwards 150 feet to St. Vincent's Place. The latter is a forty-foot paved street, or alley, that runs parallel with Broadway and Hill streets, from a point on Seventh street, about midway between the thoroughfares named, toward Sixth street.

A permit for the erection of the new structure has been taken out, and the work of construction will begin at an early date. It will have a frontage of 75 feet, and in that respect will be a duplicate of the present building. Its depth will be 80 feet, which is double that of the parent building that now stands upon the ground and faces westwardly on Hill street. The new structure will face eastwardly. It will front on St. Vincent's Place and will be a three-story brick. It will be erected under the supervision of the company's engineering department, and will cost about $20,000. A space of twenty-four feet, which will be left between the new building and the present structure, will serve as an open court and afford light and ventilation to the two houses. The present building will continue to be used as the headquarters of this division, and in it the general offices of the company will be located, while the new building will be used partly as a supply department and partly as an operating exchange for the telephones of a certain section of the city. The first floor will be on a level with the street, and will be used for the storage of supplies. Two large doors opening on St. Vincent's Place will permit of a truck driving in, turning around and passing out.

The second floor will be used as the headquarters of the construction department, and it will also contain dining and reading rooms for the telephone girls employed in the building. The third floor will be used entirely as an operating room.

This will be the central exchange for all that portion of the city lying between Fourth and Ninth streets, and it will be known as the "South Office," to distinguish it from other telephone exchanges. The office on Second and Hill streets, known as the "Main Office," will still be used as an exchange station, and all the telephones north of Fourth street will center there. Everything south of Ninth street will go to the "West Office," as a central exchange. In addition to these, there is a branch exchange at the corner of Downey avenue and Avenue 23, in East Los Angeles, which is known as the "East Office," and another in the Boyle Heights district, known as the "Boyle Office." There are about twelve thousand telephones now in use in this city, and new ones are being put in at the rate of several hundred per month. The company is now laying additional underground conduits on Seventh street, St. Vincent Place and Hill street, to connect the new office with the present conduit system of the company, which already extends over the principal streets of the city. The wires on Hill street have been underground for some time, and others are being placed underground as rapidly as circumstances permit.

Resideice of Richard Green.

On another part of this page is shown a picture of the dwelling that is now being erected for Richard Green on the west side of Bonnie Brae street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. It is from the architect's perspective, and gives the impression of massiveness and repose, rather than of unique features in architecture. It is to be a ten-room, two-story stone and cement building, with basement and attic. The exterior treatment, while made purposely simple, is modeled on the lines of the Spanish style of architecture. The material used in the exterior work is Santa Barbara sandstone, plaster on expanded metal lath, and red clay tiling for the roof.

On the first floor of the building is found a [illegible] reception hall, drawing-room, sitting-room, dining-room and servants' room. On the second floor are bed chambers and bathrooms. The rooms are all large and commodious. The interior finish of the drawing-room is in white cedar, that of the other rooms on the lower floor is in oak. The floors of the principal rooms will all be polished. The attic will contain a recreation-room, storage-room, servants' room and bath. In the basement are a furnace-room, laundry and cellar. The building will be heated by steam, and provided with modern conveniences.

Beamed ceilings, rich mantels, cozy nooks and seats, and pier glass mirrors have been cleverly planned by the designers to lend beauty to this elegant home. When finished it will be a model of substantial comfort and convenience.

The plans are from the office of Architects Marsh & Russell, and the building is being erected under their supervision. It will cost about $10,000.

Building Notes.

I. C. Goodridge is having plans prepared for the building of an addition to the Spaulding House, on East Colorado street, near Los Robles avenue, Pasadena. It will be erected on a lot just west of the present hotel building, will contain seventy-five rooms and will cost about $25,000. Work is to begin about May 1, and the house is to be finished for use by fall.

Following are among the plans for new buildings from the Builder and Contractor:

H. P. Davidson has had plans prepared by Architects Dennis & Farwell for a two-story seven-room frame residence to be built at Hermosa Beach.

H. Newmark has had plans prepared by Architect A. M. Edelman for a one-story brick office building to be built on Commercial street, near Alameda street.

William O. Rybolt is having plans prepared by Architects Marsh & Russell for a two-story eight-room frame residence to be built in the Raymond Villa tract at South Pasadena.

A. P. Fleming has had plans prepared for a two-story nine-room frame residence to be erected on the east side of Westlake avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets.

H. R. Maurer has had plans prepared by Architect C. E. Wolfe for a story-and-a-half cottage to be built on Holt avenue near White avenue, Pomona.

Victor Marsh is having plans prepared for a three-story brick building to be erected on the northeast corner of Raymond avenue and Green street, Pasadena.

F. L. Greeley is having plans prepared by Architect G. F. Costerisan for a one-and-a-half-story residence to be built at No. 937 Wall street.

Dr. Broughton is having plans prepared by Architect John P. Krempel for a two-story frame building to be erected at Oxnard.

Architect C. H. Brown has received instructions, from the City Trustees of Santa Monica, to prepare the working drawings for the proposed new town hall, which is to be erected there.

H. M. Sale has had plans prepared by Architects Garrett & Bixby for a two-story attic and basement residence to be built on the southeast corner of Ninth street and Union avenue.

E. E. Bostwick is having plans prepared for a two-story ten-room frame residence to be built on Union avenue, between First and Temple streets.

The notices of street work will be found on page following the classified advertisements.

THE WEATHER.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—[Reported by George E. Franklin, Local Forecast Official.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.98; at 5 p.m., 30.02. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 48 deg. and 57 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 90 per cent.; 5 p.m., 81 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 2 miles; 5 p.m., west, velocity 8 miles. Maximum temperature, 59 deg.; minimum, 47 deg. Rainfall past twenty-four hours, 1.62 inches; rainfall for season, 5.76 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—Weather conditions and general forecast. The following are the seasonal rainfalls to date, as compared with those of the same date last season, and rainfall in the last twenty-four hours:

Stations—	Last twenty-four hours.	This season.	Last season.
Eureka	....	31.60	37.10
Red Bluff	.62	19.40	21.30
Sacramento	.48	10.63	16.92
San Francisco	.30	12.42	16.02
Fresno	.42	3.38	9.88
Independence	....	1.39	5.51
San Luis Obispo	2.14	10.38	27.04
Los Angeles	1.60	5.82	13.68
San Diego	.29	2.66	8.58

San Francisco data: Maximum temperature, 53 deg.; minimum, 48 deg.; mean, 52 deg.

The storm off the Oregon and Northern California coast last night has moved rapidly southeastward and now overlies Arizona and Northern Utah. Generous rains have fallen throughout California, the heaviest being along the coast from San Francisco to Los Angeles. The pressure has risen rapidly over the Pacific Slope during the past twenty-four hours. The rise has been very slight along the coast during the past few hours, and there are indications of the approach of another storm off the Oregon coast. The temperature is about normal in most districts, and the changes have been slight. Conditions are favorable for showers Sunday in California. Forecast:

For Northern California: Cloudy Sunday; probably showers; light to fresh southerly wind.

Southern California: Cloudy Sunday; probably showers; light southwest wind.

San Francisco: Cloudy Sunday, probably with showers; light to fresh southerly wind.

TEMPERATURES AT 7 A.M. YESTERDAY.

HER DEVELOPMENT BEING

THE GREATEST

POSSIBLE OF ATTAINMENT

BY MORTAL.

The planetary conditions prevailing at the birth of Olga Nedwah were both peculiar and interesting, and were such as to endow her with the gift of prophecy to a degree possessed by but few others on this globe today. The development of her psychological powers have been the aim of her life.

Being of an intensely nervous and sensitive nature, she feels, responds to, and correctly interprets influences that it is only possible for one of her high order of ability and development to accomplish.

Her powers of divination are past comprehension; her ability for

WANTED— To Purchase Real Estate.

WANTED — NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE Building Company of Los Angeles, 127 West First street, rooms 7 and 8.

Home for all. Question from applicant. What will it cost me to obtain one or more contracts of one thousand dollars each in your company?

Answer. It will cost you $3 for each contract on making application. Then after it will cost you $1.40 on each contract, payable on or before the 15th of each month at the office of the company, until your contract matures.

Thereafter you will pay $5.40 per month on each contract until you have repaid the company the money advanced for you.

When your contract matures, you will designate the property you wish to purchase and the company will appraise, build or purchase it by paying fifty dollars per month on cost price on each contract for twenty consecutive months, when the property will be fully paid.

Question. When will applicant get possession of the property?

Answer. As soon as the purchase is made, which will enable you to pay for your property, thereby saving to yourself the rent and interest you would otherwise pay the landlord.

You pay no interest; no fines; no forfeitures.

Call or write for further information. Agents wanted in all cities of California and the United States. 23

FOR SALE—
A SERIOUS QUESTION

That is being asked by many who are looking for choice lots, is, where can I find one that is close in, and fulfills the conditions of desirability, good neighborhood, and still does not require a small fortune to buy.

READ THIS FOR ANSWER.

In the locality bounded by Third, Sixth, Boylston and Lucas streets, just west of the business center, ten minutes' walk from Third and Broadway. I have over one hundred lots in that territory. Have sold a number, and only a very nice class of improvements are being made. Street-car service is assured and prices are bound to advance. Everything considered, they are the cheapest lots to be had anywhere in town.

F. W. FLINT, JR.,
356 S. BROADWAY. 23

If so, you are the man we would like to see, for say, reader, we have been dealing extensively in country property for the past 15 years, and know whereof we speak; now we want to say that if you buy right you will not make a mistake in purchasing groves of oranges, lemons, walnut or alfalfa lands; we repeat the above classes of property is all right if you are careful in buying.
SAY, ABOUT 5 MILES FROM TOWN
we have a model California home, right on the lower foothills; fine climate, beautiful view; never any frost to do any damage; all in oranges, lemons and some grape fruit; fine crop now on the trees; there is a good 9-room house on the property, large rooms, 4 large verandas, cement cellar, etc.; house completely furnished, ready for immediate occupancy; now this we repeat is a model California home; we would be pleased to show it to you.
WE HAVE 4¾ ACRES
of good land near the Raymond Hotel, about two-thirds in fruit trees; now the owner wants and considers the property worth $2100, but he wants to use some money right away and wants an offer. Come and see us about it.
ALFALFA PROPOSITION.
Say, reader, some people are worried about the shortage, so far, of rain; let us say to any such person that if they want to get a good paying proposition that does not depend on rain, in fact, if we have dry times alfalfa pays all the better; when the alfalfa grower has plenty of water from artesian wells; now we have a proposition where there is an abundance of water, there are 40 acres; part in bearing orchard; most of the balance in alfalfa; there are 3 good flowing artesian wells on the place; an abundance of water for the property and water to sell; the property is 10 minutes' walk from a good town; only 10 or 12 miles from Los Angeles; owner will sell from 10 acres up; this property will pay good interest on the investment.

FOR SALE—
Country Property.

FOR SALE—FOOTHILL HOME FOR SALE.
$8000—75 acres of the Wildwood Ranch in and near the low Sierra Madre foothills, 2½ miles east of Glendora; 5 acres very fine 4-year-old navel orange trees with double water right; 10 acres of hay land, 10 or 12 acres of woodland, pasture for 8 or 10 head of stock the year around; a most attractive little canyon (Wildwood,) whose dense shade, perennial verdure and other romantic features have made it a favorite and much-frequented pleasure resort for the family and friends of the owner.
The remarkable richness of soil and mildness of climate are abundantly attested by the phenomenal growth of the orange trees and the very superior quality of the fruit, while the luxuriant vegetation, bloom-laden carnations, wild flowers and tender plants now on exhibition would indicate that the unusually rough weather of the present winter had kindly given this favored locality the go-by.
Buildings are new and commodious, and all improvements, including reservoir and pipe lines, are in first-class condition.
The Sierra Madres on the north and the great San Gabriel Valley, with its numerous towns and cities, orchards and vineyards extending 30 miles southwesterly toward the ocean, afford a view of unrivaled magnificence.
If anything need be said of the healthfulness of this locality, it may be remarked that the genial softness of the air in winter and summer, the varied opportunities for recreation whether following the cultivator in the orchard, in the wood lot with ax and saw, strolling among the hills, or in the saddle rounding up the Jerseys, are among the many inducements to health and longevity. Other larger or smaller tracts with most desirable building sites, orchard of 2½, 5 or 7 acres with each tract and plenty of water. Time if desired. Address F. D. JOY, Glendora, Cal. 23

MENLO PARK.
We have only one left of the new six-room modern houses now nearing completion. It is situated on 21st st., near Griffith, on a lot 50x150 to a 15-ft. alley. It has six large rooms, besides a stairway to upper floor which is amply large for three additional rooms. The plan is at our office and is sure to please you. The price is low and the terms are for you to name. The house will be completed in two weeks, but will be sold before that time. Do not delay, but call Monday morning.

WE BUILD TO ORDER.
We are soon to commence work on over fifteen new houses; we would like to add your name to our list of customers. Our plan of payment is the best in the world, and as we loan you the money for the building as well as build it, you can readily see that the house must be thoroughly built; our plan of payment provides for a five, six, seven, eight, nine or ten year term, with the option of paying off any part or all of it at any time. The easiest and best way of securing a home; come in and let's talk it over.

An Incorruptible Official.

M. Munchel, a magistrate at St. Sauveur le Vicomte, department of Les Manches, has posted a notice on the walls of the commune warning the inhabitants that if they continue to importune him to accept presents of poultry, game and provisions, etc., "with an intention easy to define," and stop him in the street to request him to use his influence in favor of their friends, he will proceed against them with the utmost rigor of the law.—[London Daily Mail.

MARKET LETTER.

INTERNATIONAL INVESTMENTS COMPANY'S WEEKLY MARKET LETTER.

NO. 90.

As was stated in Friday's Times, the writer of these letters expressed his doubts as to the genuineness of the alleged sales of Reed Crude on the washing-machine, at buyer 30 and 30. A buyer 30 sale means that the buyer contracts to purchase the stock and pay cash within 30 days of date of making contract. If these sales were genuine, there would be money in them; for when a stock can be bought at 36 cash and sold at 40, buyer 30 days, it means that the cash buyer today puts up $360 per thousand shares and at the end of 30 days sells them (according to contract) for $400 in money; and makes a profit of eleven (11) per cent. per month by the turn. As thousands of shares of Reed have recently been sold at and around 36 cents, off the exchange, these alleged buyer 30 and 90 sales looked queer to us; and we quietly had the matter looked up. A laundryman-broker was asked if he could sell a few thousand Reed, but he replied that the market was not active enough to take up much stock. The inquirer mentioned that it was selling freely on the "exchange" at from 39 to 42½ cents; and said he would be willing to sell at that figure if the broker would guarantee the trade; as he would make money by waiting. He was told, by the broker, that these sales were not really what is understood as buyer 30, but "more of options, or calls," on the stock.

This seems to be confirmed by the fact that one of the brokers is advertising and urging the public to buy Reed; all of which suggests a desire to boost the stock, that it may meet the price at 30 days' time.

Of course, buying and selling "calls" is simply bucket-shop work. It is gambling in margins. It is a return to the old-time, shameful methods that disgraced the exchange; and would continue to be openly practiced but for the lambasting and trouncing the outfit received from the Los Angeles Times.

And, by the way, we are pleased to see that Saturday's Times does not hesitate to talk out plainly about these alleged sales, for it says, "The only sale on the Los Angeles Exchange yesterday was 994 shares of Reed at 37. Other brokers borrowed 4000 shares of the same stock for 30 days, agreeing to pay 40 cents for it in case it is sold."

We are pleased to be able to report continued progress in the work on the Loma Verde properties, as well as on the Pozo group. In both cases, active work is being done, and the treasuries are amply supplied with capital for further exploration and development.

The matter of the gold stock spoken of by us recently has been delayed because the owner of the property that we decided upon was taken ill just when we were ready to close the deal, and is not yet able to attend to business. This will delay us a little, but we think the stock is well worth waiting for.

THE WINNER.

He eats potatoes with his knife,
He speaks of "the old woman" when
He makes a reference to his wife,
But he receives salutes from men
Who have no time to notice me;
His speech is rude and rough, he's cut
From coarse material, and he Has done the world no service—but
He's making money.

Art is to him an empty word,
To him the bard is just a jest;
No graceful sonnet ever stirred
Responsive chords within his breast;
With elbows squared he crowds along,
All ignorant of culture's laws,
And gentle people in the throng
Stand back and bow to him—because
He's making money.

In Moderation.

"I'm worried about that young man," said Col. Stillwell, confidentially, to the hostess, who had introduced him to a rising young astronomer.

"Why?"

"He looked up at the sky and commenced talking about seeing dragons and great bears, and a lot of things, till I took the liberty of telling him that people who can't use things in moderation ought to let 'em alone."—[Washington Star.

The Way to Fix It.

"Isn't it disgraceful the way our people are looting in China?"

"I should say so! Really, I think persons who are so crazy about vases oughtn't to be allowed to go as missionaries."—[Puck.

An Expert.

Lem Bloom: Hank Tuttle plays a purty good game uv checkers, don't he?

Philander Dolittle: Wa-al, I should say he does! Why, wunst I seen him take twenty-five minutes to make one move!—[Puck.

HAY-WHITNEY NUPTIALS.

A MOST SUPERB FUNCTION IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

BY MRS. OLIVE LOGAN.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—There are three factors which never fail to achieve results of beauty; these are first, the social note of Washington; second, the taste of the American workman, and, third, the ability to pay for the first two. All these were utilized at the Hay-Whitney wedding, one of the most superb functions which ever delighted the eyes of mortal man. Never since Oberon blessed the trio of lovers of "Midsummer Night's Dream," and promised them that their offspring should be exempt from the sorrows contingent upon a residence upon this mundane sphere, has anything approaching it, in splendor and in apparent joy for the future, transpired upon the footstool.

In the first place the bride is a beauty, a genius, and an immense prospective heiress; the groom is fairly her mate in respect of good looks and wealth, and is said to be a very brainy young fellow, as well. Then their social position is the highest among our American aristocracy; the father of the lady is Secretary of State of this great nation, and the father of the gentleman is one of the richest and most cultivated men of the time; if ever there was an occasion when the quotation, "Youth at the prow, and pleasure at the helm," seemed suitable, it is herein.

The church selected for the ceremony was that of the covenant, whose minister, Rev. Teunis S. Hamlin, is one of the most admired men of the cloth in the capital. In officiating at this renowned wedding Mr. Hamlin was assisted by the Rev. H. C. Hayden, of the Stone Presbyterian Church of Cleveland, O., an edifice which was built by the munificence of the bride's grandfather, Amasa Stone, from whose very large estate the bride derives the main part of her extensive fortune.

Beautiful beyond the power of mere language to express looked this fair girl, as she modestly proceeded to the altar, leaning upon the arm of her distinguished father. Her dress was as simple as could, under the requirements, be devised; a plain Princess robe of rich white satin, falling in folds such as sculptors love to arrange about their statues; sprays of orange blossoms garlanded the front, and a fragrant coronet of the same symbolic bloom bedecked her radiant brow. In her tiny hands she carried a "shower bouquet," a floral novelty which created quite a sensation, falling as it did over her hands, in the manner of a cascade, and sweeping to the hem of her gown.

The groom is a grand specimen of young America of today; tall, broad-shouldered, comely of feature, with the limbs of the athlete and the polished manner of a man of the best "world;" he is indeed the ideal of a young maid's day-dream.

The decoration of the church was a revelation of what may be performed in this wise, by clever florists, acting upon a given plan, like architects constructing a building; all parti-colored flowers were excluded, giving place to a multitude of white arum lilies, draped with southern smilax. Every point of vantage was decked with these, and in addition, there were scores of standards, upon whose tips and along whose length bunches of lilies, tied with white ribbons, were pressed into service as a sort of triumphal passage to the altar.

President Roosevelt and his charming wife attracted almost as much attention as the lovely bride. Our popular Chief Magistrate looked in the most magnificent state of health, despite the pressure of business and his kindly habit of seeing all callers who have a show of business with him. But evidently President Roosevelt knows how to preserve a balance in the matter of work and recreation. His long drives and rapid walks in the country every day are accomplishing wonders in the way of keeping the brightness of his eye, the healthy glow on his cheek.

To enumerate the guests would be to give a catalogue of the most distinguished personages in the society of all our finest cities. The church was so crowded that the father of the groom, Mr. Whitney, had trouble in making his way through the throng, until he had established his identity to the satisfaction of the policemen who stood on guard. Lord and Lady Pauncefote were much observed, and the question of the moment, towit, did England help us, or did she try to hinder us in the Spanish War, passed current freely, giving rise to some pointed allusions to the desire of everybody to be "it" now, in the matter of America's friendship; a sort of international exemplification of the familiar quotation, "Laugh, and the powers of Europe laugh with you; weep, and John Bull, Russia, France, and the whole diplomatic lot of them, don't care a continental what becomes of you."

The wedding breakfast was a chef d'oeuvre of our greatest restaurateur, and the select company who partook of it, also admired the beautiful and appropriate display of floral sweetness; in every room in the house that was open to visitors the decoration of white roses was a thing of beauty and a joy. The President toasted the bride, who was as fair a subject for such a polished gallantry as ever beamed on mortal eyes.

But what says the poet? tout lasse, tout casse, tout passe, and the moment for this event to pass from actuality into history came in its own due course. Then adieux—or, rather aux revoirs—were said; the bride donned her going-away dress, the groom decked himself out in the latest fashion for en voyage, and amid showers of rice and a Niagara of satin slippers, the espousals of Miss Hay and Payne Whitney passed into the category of things that were.

GOD'S WORLD.

He thought he loved the world God made,
He thought he stood for brotherhood;
He heard the little winds that played
Among the reeds and said: "'Tis good."

He preached good cheer to all mankind,
He heard the birds sing hopeful songs,
And thought that most men who repined
Were merely nursing fancied wrongs.

He sang of fair, blue skies above,
And bade the weeping ones be gay;
He preached of universal love
And of a coming glorious day.

A foolish maiden fled, one night,
From one o'er whom she'd cast a spell,
And with another took her flight
Who knew the art of wooing well.

One who erst thought that wrongs were rare,
And that the world God made was good
Now sees wrong spreading everywhere,
And scoffs at pleas for brotherhood.

"Some men never can take a joke," remarked Poeticus. "Yes," assented Scribbler, "and those men most always get to be editors."—[Philadelphia Record.

San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange Counties.

[NEWS REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.]

UNIFORMED PYTHIANS GATHER BY THOUSANDS.

NEW COMPANY MUSTERED IN IN SAN BERNARDINO.

Host of Plumed Knights of Southern California There for the Happy Event. Ceremonies in the Pavilion Day and Evening.

SAN BERNARDINO, Feb. 22.—The rain put little damper on the several thousand Knights of Pythias from Los Angeles and other cities, who assembled in San Bernardino today to witness the mustering-in of the new local company of the Uniform Rank.

Seldom, if ever, has there been such a Pythian rally in Southern California. The Riverside, Redlands and Pomona companies arrived in the morning, and early in the afternoon, accompanied by the San Bernardino company and a band, they marched to the Santa Fé station, where they met a special train, bearing two companies from Los Angeles, one from Pasadena, one from San Diego, one from Santa Ana, one from Santa Monica and one from Long Beach. Owing to the rain, no outside maneuvers were attempted, the procession moving directly to the pavilion.

CITY'S WELCOME.

The address of welcome was made by J. J. Hanford, president of the City Board of Trustees, who said, in part: "It affords me much pleasure as presiding officer of our city government to have the privilege of extending to you a most cordial welcome to our city. You are here today in the performance of a very important duty, a duty that marks an epoch not only in the history of your organization, but also that of San Bernardino. You are here to muster into the Third Regiment of the Uniform Rank of your order a company of San Bernardinans composed of the best blood, the brightest intellects, the most active and energetic young men within the confines of our city, many of them professional men, others of them holding positions of trust and responsibility both in the city and county governments. We hope that you will never have cause to regret the step you are about to take. And, in conclusion, I desire to say that when your labors are completed and you are about to depart for your respective homes, that you will have no occasion to carry away with you feelings of malice or ill will either against our city or its people, for the treatment and attention paid to you, our visitors, today. I again take pleasure in extending a very warm welcome."

COLORS PRESENTED.

Judge J. D. K. Trask of Los Angeles responded with appropriate remarks. Then followed the presentation by the Rathbone Sisters of a beautiful stand of colors to the Third Regiment, to which Col. Scarborough made an appropriate response. The regimental dress parade followed. The splendid drill work was a revelation to the hundreds of spectators present, the work of the new company eliciting special applause.

A public reception followed, after which the regimental officers met at Armory Hall and elected Capt. Craw of Long Beach, major of the Third Battalion.

In the evening at Odd Fellows Hall the Rathbone Sisters gave an exemplification of work, and at Armory Hall the new company was mustered in with an exemplification of initiatory ceremonies. A dance followed at the Pavilion.

During the evening there was an exhibition drill by Los Angeles Co., No. 25, and Riverside Co., No. 30, together with a sword manual.

THE NEW COMPANY.

The officers for San Bernardino Co., No. 52, for the coming year are: Captain, W. D. Wagner; first lieutenant, Henry M. Willis; second lieutenant, A. L. King; guard, William J. Hanford; sentinel, E. C. McKinney; recorder, Thomas Phillips; treasurer, R. F. Allen; chaplain, L. M. Sprecher. The roster of the company is as follows: C. E. Allen, R. F. Allen, J. F. Brown, J. A. Corcoran, J. W. Davidson, B. F. Erzinger, P. Galligan, H. W. Hager, H. B. Hall, C. M. Hanf, W. J. Hanford, Alex. Keirr, A. L. King, C. F. Kidwell, William Lemon, C. H. Lindner, C. A. Lothrop, C. A. More, E. C. McKinney, Al. McRae, R. B. Paragette, Thomas Phillips, W. H. Ruvane, J. W. Shumate, C. Skirn, F. O. Smith, E. L. Smith, L. M. Sprecher, H. J. Thomas, W. D. Wagner, H. M. Willis, Joseph Winkler, C. F. and W. A. Wilson, James Waters, O. Whitlock.

The committee in charge, to whom the success of the rally was largely due, consisted of H. M. Willis, chairman; Arthur Palmer, secretary; H. B. Ham, treasurer; Russ McGillivry, Valley Lodge, No. 27; R. H. Curtis, Valley Lodge, No. 27; W. J. Hanford, San Bernardino Co., No. 27; Mrs. S. T. Whitlock, Mrs. S. H. Smith, Mrs. Ollie Allen, Charity Temple, No. 39, Rathbone Sisters.

REDLANDS.

GOODS DEMANDED.

REDLANDS, Feb. 22.—Yesterday evening the Constable made a demand on Leipsic & Israel for the goods which were taken from the New York store on Thursday and stored. After a consultation with their attorney they declined to give the goods up, without bond. The demand for the goods was signed by the secretary of the Wholesalers' Board of Trade of Los Angeles, who has charge of the bankrupt stock of Mrs. E. H. Reid.

ORANGE ACTIVITY.

The week was another one of great activity in orange shipping, all packers being kept busy to fill their orders. The output for the week was 119 carloads, as compared with 116 carloads last week. For the corresponding week last year 156 carloads were shipped. The total shipments to date amount to 1017 carloads. Shipments to the same date last season were 1105.

There are now not more than 600 carloads of oranges in sight, at the very most, while last season at this time only about one-half of the crop had been picked. Last season's shipments were about 2500 carloads, this season's will not be over 1800. The fruit has been fine and prices better than last year, so that the growers have realized fully as much for their crop.

CONDITION CRITICAL.

The condition of Mrs. Orson Van Leuven, who was so seriously hurt on Saturday last as a result of a runaway accident, is very critical today. She has been unconscious ever since Monday, and it is thought that there is very little hope of her recovery. Miss Olah Hicks, the young lady hurt at the same time, is rapidly improving and, although still under a physician's care, will probably be able to get out next week.

Spoor's Drug Store employs registered pharmacists only. Take your prescriptions there.

When you contemplate giving a party or reception, always see the Vienna Bakery.

F. B. King always carries an attractive line of goods suitable for bridal presents.

Hight & Dunn do a general insurance business in connection with real estate.

Alexander's candies are always fresh. Call, try them, and be convinced.

Hight & Dunn have several bargains in orange groves. Call on them.

Leipsic and Israel are now showing the new shirt waists of Spring, 1902.

Hight & Dunn are the leading real-estate dealers in Redlands.

ONTARIO.

GAS FRANCHISE GRANTED.

ONTARIO, Feb. 22.—A franchise has been granted to F. P. Braden to operate a gas plant for furnishing heat and light in Ontario, with mains and literals in the streets.

ONTARIO BREVITIES.

Rev. T. C. Diff, one of the secretaries of the Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, lectured last evening on "Thirty Years Among the Mormons."

The members of Ontario Post, G.A.R., the Woman's Relief Corps, and their families, observed Washington's birthday this afternoon in Odd Fellows' Hall.

The game of baseball played here yesterday between the baseball team of the Ontario High School and the baseball team of the San Antonio Heights school, ended in a score of 35 to 4 in favor of the High School team.

W. L. Malone, I. S. Watson and C. L. Meacham left last evening for the Bullion Mountain mines, to look after the interests of the company.

CORONA.

NEWS NOTES.

CORONA, Feb. 22.—The St. Louis and South Riverside Fruit and Investment Association, owning 116 acres of lemons in this colony, has incorporated as the Corona Lemon Company, with F. E. Kauffman, president; B. B. Howard, vice-president, and A. F. Eaton, secretary, all of St. Louis. T. P. Drinkwater is treasurer and resident manager.

Last evening the City Trustees made the price of water for domestic service $1.50 a month, a raise of 25 per cent.

Adjt. B. E. Savery installed officers at the last meeting of the Carleton Post, G.A.R.

Fourteen carloads of oranges and thirteen of lemons were shipped this week.

The home of D. J. Dawson, who lives in a cañon near Temescal, was burglarized yesterday.

H. A. Wood has sold his interest in the firm of Wood & Grow, to his partner, W. D. Grow. I. Feldman has purchased the billiard hall of the S. M. Barber, and Maj. Grant Kirby has bought George Sargent's interest in the firm of Sargent & Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kos of Buffalo, N. Y., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Terpening.

Charles H. Wade of Golden, Colo., was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Todd this week.

Miss Aimee Daniels of Pasadena is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Turner.

Miss M. Wright went to Pasadena today and will visit Arizona and Chicago until autumn.

A tallyho load of nineteen young people from Riverside was entertained at the home of T. O. Andrews last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Packard of Brockton, Mass., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Drinkwater. Mr. Packard is a shoe manufacturer.

Miss Myrtle Miller of San Francisco is the guest of Mrs. E. B. Collier.

SANTA ANA.

CASH HARVEY NEAR DEATH.

SANTA ANA, Feb. 22.—Cash Harvey, a prominent resident of this county, and one of the Republican workers in the State, is lying at death's door at his home two miles southwest of this city, as a result of cancer of the bowels. He submitted to an operation at a Los Angeles hospital a few months ago, and while the operation, from a surgical standpoint, was a success, the disease could not be forestalled, and he has been gradually growing weaker. A few days ago his decline became more rapid, and today he has lapsed into unconsciousness. The end is expected at any moment. Mr. Harvey is well known in political circles, not only throughout Southern California, but up and down the Coast from San Francisco to San Diego.

THAT LIBRARY QUESTION.

The library trustees last night rejected all bids for a site for the new library, and the city will readvertise. The new bids will be opened next Monday evening at 7 o'clock. By this action, it is believed by the board, the city will probably get better offers. The question now seems to rest between the offer of W. B. Hervey, for 75x125 feet at Fourth and French streets, and the Granville Spurgeon property, Main and Sixth streets.

Residents of the West End have about given up hope of getting the building there, and now favor the Spurgeon property.

OPP INQUEST.

This afternoon the Coroner's jury found that Hermann Opp, the young man found dead by the railroad track, half a mile north of Orange, was killed by being struck by freight train No. 33 of the Southern California Railroad, and that no blame attaches to the company. The funeral service will be held Sunday at 2 p.m., at Smith & Sons undertaking-rooms.

SANTA ANA BREVITIES.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Turner are visiting in Los Angeles.

Hon. and Mrs. J. W. Ballard are the guests of Los Angeles friends.

Miss Clara Adams is visiting friends in Los Angeles.

R. H. People of Long Beach is the guest of D. Coban of Tustin.

The families of W. L. and V. V. Tubbs have gone to Laguna Beach for an outing.

Mrs. H. H. Witter has returned from Los Angeles, where she has been the guest of friends.

Mrs. J. C. Galloway and Miss Eleanor Grimes went to Laguna Beach today to remain for a week.

Miss Mabel McFadden entertained friends Friday evening at her home at No. 909 North Main street.

Funeral services were held here this afternoon over the remains of William Perle Huffman, who died suddenly Thursday evening at McPherson.

FULLERTON.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

FULLERTON, Feb. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nicoulin and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nicoulin of Algona, Iowa, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Dunne this week.

The A.O.U.W. Lodge gave a pleasant ball in Bank Hall last night, forty-eight couples being present.

P. G. Garlick left this week for Northern California to resume his studies in a university.

Miss Irene Cargill of Anaheim has secured a position here as cashier of the department stores.

Mrs. D. Bastanchury was in Los Angeles this week for business and pleasure.

Rev. F. R. Holcomb and wife have returned from Indio, where they visited their son, C. E. Holcomb, and daughter, Mrs. George Case.

A reception will be held in Bank Hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Free Reading Room.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Launer of La Habra have been entertaining friends from North Ontario.

Miss Mabel Hodson of La Habra Valley has entered the Fullerton High School.

ANAHEIM.

WATER MEETING.

ANAHEIM, Feb. 22.—A special meeting of stockholders of the Anaheim Union Water Company will be held in the City Hall, Saturday, March 8, at 2 p.m. to discuss the proposition of building the Yorba reservoir, which will cost about $20,000.

A large crowd is expected tomorrow afternoon to witness the baseball between the Fullerton Oil Well nine and the Norwalk team.

Permission has been granted to move the postoffice one door east, and the change will be made in a few days.

Miss Alice Carver left this week on a business trip to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

BUENA PARK.

HOLIDAY CELEBRATION.

BUENA PARK, Feb. 22.—Centralia school celebrated Washington's birthday yesterday with an appropriate and interesting programme, participated in by many pupils, which terminated in a grand flag march, in which all the children took part. About sixty of the school's patrons were present and enjoyed the proceedings. After the exercises the school was photographed. There were thirty numbers on the programme.

VENTURA COUNTY.

OUT FOR TEMPERANCE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VENTURA, Feb. 22.—The temperance element has a paper. The first issue appeared today, and it is known as the Young People's Herald, with headquarters at Santa Paula, where temperance is exceedingly strong. This paper will have considerable to say in the immediate future regarding political candidates and nominees, according to the editorial salutary. It says: "Whatever eruptions may occur in the political world within the reach of the publication will be experienced later. The Herald will stand emphatically for good citizenship and a more united service for Christ on the part of the various religious bodies of the county. Its political sympathies and aid will always be with the candidate who is an open and avowed enemy of the saloon, be he Democrat, Republican, Populist, goldbug or silverite. The only ratio the Herald will recognize is that of 16 to 1 against the saloons and its supporters in public or private life. Its editorial utterances, while not impeded by party gags, yet will be characterized by judgment, by conservative and sober speech, but also by fearless presentation of facts as they are, regardless of whose corns are stepped on. The Herald will be published under the auspices of the W.C.T.U., the B.Y.P.U., the Epworth League and the Christian Endeavor bodies, and its management will be in the hands of a committee of the whole. It will be published monthly." With this paper fighting fearlessly for the temperance cause in the coming campaign, political matters should be interesting.

THE RAIN.

At 7 o'clock last night a heavy rain began to fall, and continued for over two hours. During the night there were showers at intervals, which continued until about 10 o'clock this morning. The precipitation was 1.02 inches; season to date, 6.65 inches; same date last season, 8.96 inches. The rain will be of great value to this county. The stockmen will be greatly benefited at once. Early-sown grain will be revived, beet and bean land will also be benefited, as well as the orchards.

The rainfall at Nordhoff was 2 inches; Santa Paula, 1.50 inches; Oxnard, 1.25 inches; Simi, .82 inch.

VENTURA BREVITIES.

The drillers on the mysterious beach well are working rapidly. The hole has been sunk about 150 feet.

The steamer Bonita was unable to dock at the wharf this afternoon. There is over 100 tons of freight for this city which seems to be traveling from Port Hartford to San Pedro with considerable regularity. The oil steamer George Loomis docked yesterday and took a full cargo.

Miss Edna Robinson was graduated this week from the Caldwell School of Oratory of San Francisco. Miss Robinson will return to this city next week.

Miss Alice Colle, 22 years of age, a prominent society woman of Buffalo, has disappeared. It is said that a pocketbook belonging to Miss Colle was found on Goat Island, Niagara Falls.

SANTA PAULA.

ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

SANTA PAULA, Feb. 22.—The tenth annual convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of this city was opened last night in the Presbyterian Church with a large attendance of delegates and friends. The event of the evening was an address by John Willis Baer international secretary of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, who spoke interestingly on "Christ—Coöperation—Conquest." Following the address a reception to visiting delegates was held.

This morning was taken up with addresses by the State officers and others. In the afternoon Dr. Chapman, superintendent of the State Anti-Saloon League, spoke for an hour on the prohibition issue.

Secretary Baer and the State officers left for Santa Barbara before the close of the convention, where they will speak before the Santa Barbara Christian Endeavor Convention.

SIMI.

MOCK BULLFIGHT.

SIMI, Feb. 22.—A few weeks ago there were less than a score of persons in Santa Susana, but now there are 250. Most of them belong to the Southern Pacific ballasting force, which recently reached this point. They are Mexicans, and bring their families with them. The men are doing excellent work in ballasting the track. Last Sunday afternoon the young men made sport for themselves and the others with a mock bullfight. A little wooden animal was mounted on the head of one of the young Spaniards, who charged upon several that wore red sashes and waved red bandanas. The game was watched by the entire population.

Rev. C. B. Allen, pastor of Cameron Memorial Church of Denver, Colo., on a three months' vacation, is holding evangelistic services. He came last Saturday, and Sunday morning began meetings, which have been continued every evening this week, except this. The meetings have been well attended and interesting, many being present who had not been in a church for a long time. There have been many conversions, and the meetings will probably continue another week.

The Presbyterians are almost ready to begin building a new church. The Simi Land and Water Company has given them three lots in the colony.

Lee Lynn went to Los Angeles to visit his father, who recently came from the East.

SANTA BARBARA.

YOUNG THIEF SENTENCED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 22.—Eugene Bowen, the young man who stole clothing from the residence of Grant Dewlaney at Goleta, and was captured at Paso Robles, appeared yesterday before the Superior Court, waived the right to secure an attorney, and made no defense. Judge Day sentenced him to three years in San Quentin.

SANTA BARBARA BREVITIES.

The County Christian Endeavor Convention opened here this morning in the Presbyterian Church. Delegates from all parts of the county are present. General Secretary Baer of Boston addressed the convention this afternoon. State Secretary J. O. Smith of Los Angeles, and State Statistical Secretary R. R. Patterson of San Francisco, are here.

County officials have indorsed the Boys' Industrial Home, and the Santa Barbara cottage feature of the home. Rev. Mr. Forbes has raised over $600 toward the $5000 needed for the erection of the cottage.

Contractors are building a handsome $4000 cottage for Miss Mary Parmelee on East Victoria street.

J. E. Bell, a Minnesota banker, and family arrived today. For about forty years in succession, Mr. Bell has been a visitor in this city.

William F. Dreer and party arrived yesterday, and will be at the George Voorhees residence for a time.

GERMANY.

GERMAN BAITING NOT AMERICAN SPORT.

AMBASSADOR WHITE ENLIGHTENS KAISER'S SUBJECTS.

He also Takes Occasion to Correct Impression that German Government Was Unfriendly to the United States During Spanish War.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Andrew D. White, the American Ambassador here, presiding last night at an assemblage of 300 Americans who celebrated Washington's birthday at the Kaiserhof by a musical entertainment followed by a supper and dance, said in an address:

"Sunday writers on this side of the Atlantic have been especially eloquent in denouncing the general hatred of Germany and the Germans which they insist obtains in the United States. Much has been said of "Deutschen hetz" (German baiting,) and this has been placed in such a lurid light that one would almost believe that on the appearance of our German-American fellow-citizens upon the streets of an American city the citizens of American birth were ready to cry havoc and let loose on him the dogs of war. It has been my duty for years to read with considerable conscientiousness a number of the foremost American newspapers representing the dominant thought in various parts of the Union, and I can most truthfully say that I have failed to find the slightest trace of such 'Deutschen hetz.' I could not discover anything like hatred or a persecuting spirit toward the German-Americans on the American continent. Even if there were no other reasons, the Americans are too busy and too good-natured for an amusement of that kind.

"On the other side, it has been insisted by more or less well-meaning people in the United States that a dark cloud between the two countries really exists, and that in the time of which ancient history makes mention, and especially during our Spanish War, the German government was somewhat hostile to the United States, or in some manner which nobody seems to be able to give with precision, the German government did something which it ought not to have done, and left undone something which it ought to have done. To this answer has been given, if I may be allowed here to refer to it, by myself as the one competent to express opinion on the subject, with the declaration that the conduct of the German government toward us during the Spanish War was excellent. The German government observed a strict neutrality and showed no unfriendly spirit. From first to last it never made any suggestions or proposals that embarrassed us in the slightest degree. In fact, the conduct of the German government was all that we could desire it to be."

KAISER RUNS MACHINE.

MINISTERS DO HIS BIDDING.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—[By Atlantic Cable.] During the course of today's discussion in the lower house of the Prussian Diet of the non-confirmation by the Emperor of the election of Herr Kauffman as second burgomaster of Berlin, the Minister of the Interior, Baron Von Hammerstein, practically admitted his personal disapproval of the Emperor's action. Herr Richter, the Radical leader, had kept the house in roars of laughter by a caustic attack on the Minister of the Interior, whose speech of yesterday he declared to be full of contradictions, and demonstrating that he did not know his own mind, much less that of the Emperor. Ministerial responsibility, Herr Richter said, was a Prussian tradition, but Baron Hammerstein was desirous of escaping therefrom. If the ministers had nothing to do but countersign royal decrees, they did not differ from ordinary clerks.

Referring to a remark by the Minister yesterday, Herr Richter said he thanked God that the Radicals had not reached the point of matching their strength against that of the King. He also thanked God that the country had so valiant a Minister of the Interior. But recent incidents between the municipality and the crown had made bad blood, and had only improved the prospects of social democracy.

In a lame rejoinder, the Minister of the Interior refused to be drawn into the discussion, but he committed himself to the somewhat unexpected statement that he was "prepared, in accordance with Prussian tradition, to take the odium of a royal decision which was not agreeable to himself," and that he would "leave the house to draw its own conclusions" of his conduct.

SPAIN.

THEIR AIM WAS CHAOS.

Spanish Riots Part of Anarchist Plot.

Hoped to Overthrow the Government.

Failure Due to Opposition of Labor Unions and Socialists.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Readers of The Times should not be surprised at the desperate so-called labor riots in Spain, for they were predicted here months ago. The information then made public was obtained in anarchist quarters in London, a fact which, among others, proves that this bad business in Barcelona and elsewhere is not the outcome of genuine industrial discontent, but is an organized revolutionary movement.

Nobody doubts the capacity of the Spanish government to suppress the revolt. The only fear is that the Carlists may take advantage of the present unhappy situation, and this dread is an explanation of the decision to call out the army reserves.

Carlist leaders in France have lately been very active, but Don Carlos himself, when last heard of, was displaying about as much activity and enterprise as a tortoise. He was then in Venice, after paying a visit to his sick son at Nice. There are still thousands of honest Spanish peasants ready to take up arms for Don Carlos, but this degenerate son of kings has strong objections to incurring any personal risks, even when a crown is dangling before his nose.

CONSPIRATORS FOILED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MADRID, Feb. 22.—According to the best available information, the movement for a general strike throughout Spain has failed. The leaders of this movement counted upon the fact that the strength of the army had been reduced by the recent disbandment of 35,000 trained troops, who have been replaced by conscripts, and upon the expected support from the trades unions throughout the country. The prompt measures taken by Gen. Weyler, however, had a deterrent effect, and the emissaries sent from Barcelona to all the leading industrial towns did not meet with the expected response, except in a comparatively few cases. The bulk of the trades unions declined to join the general strike, on the ground that their financial resources were not sufficient to hold out any length of time, and further that the Republican and opposition political parties deprecated a general strike, and the socialists were equally averse thereto.

Advices from Valencia say the strike there has been suppressed, but that the workmen are clamoring for the release of their arrested comrades.

More factories have reopened at Saragossa, and Sabadell.

SITUATION AT BARCELONA.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BARCELONA, Feb. 22.—Although there was some resuscitation of ordinary life in this city yesterday, it was largely artificial. A few public establishments reopened under the compulsion of the authorities, but practically no business was transacted. The street cars ceased running at 8 o'clock last evening, and the newspapers were unable to publish because the compositors refused to work. The Captain-General authorized the managers of the papers to seek for printers outside of Barcelona.

There were some isolated affrays and attempts to sack bakeries, during which five persons were wounded.

It was reported this morning that a number of workmen had been caught in the act of preparing bombs.

The Captain-General has allowed the rioters three days in which to deliver up all their arms. After the expiration of that time any person found in possession of arms will be tried by drumhead courtmartial.

Orders have been issued to all the saloons to close at 7 o'clock in the evening, and citizens are not allowed to be out of their residences after 8 p.m.

SITUATION VERY GRAVE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MADRID, Feb. 22.—The nearest approach to truth that it is possible to glean from the mass of conflicting official and private dispatches from Barcelona indicates that the situation is still of the gravest character.

AGREEMENT REACHED ON CUBAN TARIFF.

WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE ADOPTS COMPROMISE.

Measure to Be Submitted to House Republican Caucus—Cuba Must Adopt Our Immigration Laws Before She Can Have Reciprocity.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, who have been considering the question of concessions to Cuba at several meetings during the week, finally reached an agreement this afternoon, which is considered a victory for those who have favored tariff concessions to that island. The action taken was the adoption of the following resolutions:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of the majority members of this committee (subject to the approval of the Republican members of the House, in caucus assembled, to be held as soon as practicable,) that the committee report a bill in substance authorizing the President to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the Cuban republic when established, providing for the entry of our products into Cuba upon such terms as shall be deemed by him to be advantageous to us; provided, however, that such treaty shall secure for our products going into Cuba duties less than those allowed to the other countries substantially equivalent to the concession made by us; that the consideration upon our part for such treaty shall be a concession of 20 per cent. of our tariff duties upon imports of the products of Cuba upon this condition: That Cuba shall first enact our immigration laws."

By the terms of this resolution, the proposition agreed on by the Republican members of the committee will be submitted to a Republican caucus to be held next Tuesday. This action is practically the proposition submitted a few days ago by Representative Long of Kansas, except that the amount of the concession is cut in half and the condition precedent, that Cuba enact our immigration laws is added.

The action by the committee this afternoon was preceded by a conference at the White House between the President and Representatives Grosvenor of Ohio, Russell of Connecticut and Dalzell of Pennsylvania, all of whom have heretofore stood out against any form of reciprocity provisions. The action of the Republican members was unanimous.

SANG "TRAVIATA."

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Miss Rose Beida of San Francisco sang "Traviata" at the Theatre Des Westens here last night. This was her first appearance in Germany, and she was most favorably received.

After three weeks here she will go to Milan to sing in grand opera there.

Exciting Baseball Game.

SAN JOSE, Feb. 22.—Santa Clara College won a hotly-contested baseball game from the State Normal School this afternoon at Cyclers' Park. The score was 5 to 3.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Henderson Grimett of this place was stricken with partial paralysis and completely lost the use of one arm and side. After being treated by an eminent physician for quite awhile without relief, my wife recommended Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and after using two bottles of it he is almost entirely cured.—George R. McDonald, Man, Logan county, W. Va. Several other very remarkable cures of partial paralysis have been effected by the use of this liniment. It is most widely known, however, as a cure for rheumatism, sprains and bruises.—Adv.

STOVE GOES LIKE BOMB.

Giant Powder Fuel Plays Smash in a Store at Covina.

COVINA, Feb. 22.—Charles Tate, a carpenter, threw a large bunch of excelsior in the stove in B. S. Webb's hardware store today, and about two seconds later there was no stove. There happened to be several sticks of giant powder or dynamite in the excelsior used to replenish the fire, and that material is not a success as a fuel.

There was a terrific explosion, and the stove burst like a bomb, the fragments flying in all directions, many piercing the woodwork like bullets. Several jagged pieces struck Tate and inflicted serious injury.

Tate was knocked unconscious by the force of the explosion and the flying missiles. William Goodrich and B. S. Webb were seriously hurt.

On the counter not far away lay several pounds of the explosive, and 100 caps of high power, but these, strange to say, were not affected. Otherwise there would be little left of the store where the singular accident occurred.

tee on Roads, of the grand jury, in company with Supervisor P. J. Wilson, paid an official visit to the home on Friday. Their time, though limited, afforded them an opportunity to view that specimen of model road building which forms part of the county boulevard passing through the home.

William McKevitt and wife of Los Angeles, with friends from Vacaville, visited the home on Thursday, with the object (on the part of the men) of obtaining information regarding the sewer system.

Among the more prominent visitors to the home on Friday were Gen. E. M. Rodgers, Viroqua, Wis.; Hon. Philip Cheek, ex-State Insurance Commissioner of Wisconsin, of Baraboo, and Capt. G. A. Barry of Eau Claire, who are spending the winter in Southern California.

The revival services in the great tent continue attractive. Afternoon and evening the capacity of the tent is insufficient. Mrs. Hill seems a genius at providing attractions of a character to sufficiently relieve the strain of religious fervor among her veteran converts. Miss Springer and Miss Campbell have been acceptable for their vocal music throughout the revival season thus far, and during all the coming week that gifted exponent of gospel music, Mrs. Emma Moffatt, will add to the attractiveness of these meetings. Mrs. Hill states that the conversions already number 155, and she feels that the work is not much more than begun.

Mrs. M. T. Boyd, well known in Los Angeles as a Christian Temperance worker, has secured Assembly Hall for Monday afternoons for gospel meetings. Monday next will be devoted to patriotic services in honor of the anniversary of Washington's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bilhorn assisted at the afternoon services of Mrs. Fish on Wednesday. There was an unusually large attendance of veterans.

Alice Morley, an old-time favorite at the home, gave a "farewell concert" in Memorial Hall Thursday evening, and the house was crowded. The bill was unusually attractive.

POMONA'S LIBRARIAN TURNS LAST PAGE.

DEATH OF MRS. E. P. BARTLETT, PUBLIC-SPIRITED WOMAN.

James T. Walls Run Over by Coal Wagon and Fatally Injured on Road Near Chino—Pythians Go to San Bernardino.

POMONA, Feb. 22.—Mrs. E. P. Bartlett, who has been librarian of the Pomona Public Library since its inception in 1887, died at her home on North Gordon street this afternoon. The deceased was 65 years old, and her health had been failing for over a year, so that she was not at the library. Mrs. Bartlett was a public-spirited woman, greatly interested in the literary club work and educational betterment of the city, and had hosts of friends who mourn her death. Funeral services will be conducted at her late residence on Monday, Rev. C. J. French officiating.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

James T. Walls died at his home east of the cemetery this afternoon, as the result of internal abdominal injuries from being run over last night by a wagon heavily loaded with coal. It is not known just how the accident occurred. Walls was returning from Elsinore with the fuel, and when, at 10 o'clock, his team came home without him, search was made, and he was found unconscious on the road north of Chino, where he had evidently fallen. The deceased was 43 years old, and leaves a family. He was well thought of here.

Edith Humphries is home from Pomona College, recovering from a severe illness.

LONG BEACH.

TWO CITY TICKETS.

LONG BEACH, Feb. 22.—The second ticket to be launched in the municipal campaign was placed in nomination at the meeting at the City Hall Friday night. Mr. Heller presided and A. M. Goodhue acted as secretary. The nominees are: For City Trustees, J. V. Bartow, A. B. Caldwell (incumbent,) and E. L. Wingard; for City Clerk, W. B. Julian (incumbent;) for City Treasurer, C. L. Heartwell (incumbent;) for City Marshal, J. C. Baker (incumbent.)

One of the chief promoters of that ticket said today that it is not the purpose of those who made the nominations to reëstablish saloons in Long Beach. It is admitted, however, that the nominees, if elected, will be disposed to deal pretty liberally with the liquor question. Some of the nominees for offices other than trusteeships are counted as belonging to the Prohibition party, but, if elected, they will have to deal with the city ordinances only in an executive capacity.

The other list of nominees now in the field is self-styled as the "citizens'" ticket, but its nominations for City Trustees are by people about town classed as belonging to the Walker following. The Walker whose name is applied to them is Mayor Walker.

The make-up of that ticket is: For City Trustees, W. L. Campbell, C. D. Hendrickson and H. Cates; for City Clerk, W. B. Julian (incumbent;) for City Treasurer, C. L. Heartwell (incumbent;) for City Marshall, T. M. Williams. The nominees for City Clerk and City Treasurer are the same on moth the "Citizens'" and the liberal liquor ticket.

The fact that one or more of those who have been actively associated with the Walker administration are now counted among the chief promoters of the ticket placed in apparent competition with the "Walker" ticket is the cause of considerable comment.

There is another municipal ticket in prospect.

SANTA CATALINA ISLAND.

SCHOOL OF LEAPING TUNA.

AVALON, Feb. 22.—A roving band of tuna were seen Thursday and again yesterday. They were leaping from the water and feeding on the schools of smelt and sardines just as in the "tuna season," and some of the anglers were fired with a desire to do the unusual, and went after them. J. Jay Nestell spent most of the day trolling, but caught none.

ISLAND BREVITIES.

Clark Reeve yesterday launched one of the most complete and elegant little fishing craft yet put into the water here. It is 20 feet long, 5.6 beam and equipped with four-horse-power Union engine of the latest pattern, and side exhaust. It was built by Mathewson at the Avalon ship yard.

J. C. Morrell and wife of Superior, Wis., are here to escape the cold of their northern winter, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Smith. This is their third winter at Avalon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Perry and Henry P. Perry of New York are guests at Hotel Metropole.

Mrs. Edmund Ocumpaugh, wife of one of the most prominent clothiers of Rochester, N. Y., with her daughters, Misses L. L. and Grace Ocumpaugh, are at the Metropole.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Wells, Miss A. E. Brearley and S. R. Brearley of Chicago are at the Metropole.

Dr. E. A. Schofield and wife and Mrs. Cella Rose of Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., are registered at the Catalina House.

O. C. Darling and J. W. Nesbitt of Riverside; J. S. Corbin of Chicago, John O'Reilley of St. Louis, and C. W. Brown of Saginaw, Mich., are among those registering at the Grand View today.

A Salt Lake excursion in charge of L. A. Monroe, embracing seventy-five persons, forty-nine of whom were members of the Convention of Supervisors visiting Southern California, came over today.

One day in July of last year the visitors at Avalon were electrified by a "whale story" which sounded very "fishy," but which was proved to be true. Three men, W. D. Turk, J. B. Shepardson and Jeddy Van Leuven of Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., were fishing from a rowboat, when a big whale came up to investigate them. They were just off Pebbly Beach and, thinking they would feel safer on shore, they headed in. Their lines were still out, when the whale came up within a couple of boat lengths from them, and in a moment more they felt themselves being irresistibly borne out to sea. One of their hooks had caught the leviathan and they were in for it! Faster and faster they went, till the pace was getting dizzy, when the line snapped, and the race ended. Mr. Turk, who matched his strength at the oars with the big monster on that occasion, is again here with his wife, guests at the Catalina House.

The Catalina House is the best place to stop for the money.

LORDSBURG.

CEMETERY PROJECT.

LORDSBURG, Feb. 22.—Several of the leading citizens of Lordsburg, La Verne and San Dimas have for some time been agitating for a cemetery. Heretofore the only cemetery available was the millionaire's burying ground, six miles east, and the poor man's cemetery, seven miles west. It is now proposed to have a cemetery, centrally located, for the three communities, so that when a rancher shuffles off this mortal coil his widow will not have to sell all her available assets in order to buy a lot in a cemetery. It is proposed to have the price of the lots in the new cemetery within the reach of all. An association will soon be formed and the location decided upon.

LA VERNE.

RANCH OBJECT LESSON.

LA VERNE, Feb. 22.—Two ranches have been sold in La Verne within the past few days, which are an object lesson to orchardists generally and investors in particular. As stated in The Times about ten days ago, D. C. McQuitty sold his twelve-acre orange grove for $20,000, while yesterday ten acres across the way was sold to J. Lincoln of Pomona for $3500. There is a good residence, worth $2500 on each ranch, but on the former fumigation, fertilization, irrigation and cultivation have produced the perfection of valuation, while on the latter, for so-called economy's sake, a lack of fumigation, no fertilization, poor irrigation and light cultivation have combined to cause depression in valuation.

Opposite the McQuitty ranch is the well-known orchard of M. L. Suarks, from whose ten acres he realized $6000 for this year's orange crop.

Goats Make Good Farm Hands.

Goats make successful farm hands in Missouri. G. A. B. Ellis, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, draws his conclusion from the results of a twelve months' experiment with goats in the capacity of laborers. When put to graze on bad lands a herd of Angora goats will consume all the weeds and undesirable shrubbery, eating close to the roots and saving the expense of having the land cleared by hard work. Secretary Ellis advises farmers to invest in goats, and says that much land can be redeemed in this manner. The experiments will be conducted on a larger scale in the future, as Missouri farmers have now taken up the goat question in earnest.—[Chicago Record-Herald.

ENGLISH SOLUTION OF SERVANT PROBLEM.

LONDON'S IMPROVEMENT ON A BOSTON ENTERPRISE.

A Company Now Delivering Meals Ready Cooked at Houses of Customers for Less Than They Would Cost if Prepared at Home.

[New York Sun:] The London housewife is seeing a great light upon her domestic horizon. It emanates from traveling kitchens and irradiates even the murky gloom of the domestic service problem.

It is only fair to say that the idea of the London distributing kitchen was borrowed from Boston, but the English syndicate that imported it has improved upon it until it glows in a fashion that makes the original Boston sunrise look like a tallow dip.

Presumably, families able to hire competent cooks and satisfactory staffs of servants will continue to have their cooking done in their homes. The woman whose soul firmly cleaves to the delights of marketing and ordering and cooking will go on with her home programme, but for the dwellers in flats and chambers, for the housewife whose soul is harassed by struggles with ignorant or bad-tempered cooks and the depressing problem of catering for thee meals a day, the time of deliverance seems to be at hand.

Her salvation arrives in up-to-date fashion on a motor car. She may sleep peacefully o' mornings, undisturbed by wonderings as to whether the cook came home the night before or has overslept or has left with morning light.

At the appointed hour a motor delivery wagon will stop at the door. A uniformed man will deliver the hottest and most appetizing of breakfasts, carefully packed in a food carrier, warranted to keep hot things hot and cold things cold.

All that remains to be done is to serve the food upon the home table. The entrées come on shining silver-plated dishes piping hot, the coffee in a silver pot as hot.

If the housewife prefers using her own linen, cutlery and china, well and good. If not, the caterer supplies everything of good quality.

Of course, while the experiment is new, it is natural enough that the silver should be brilliant, the china without nicks, the linen immaculate. Possibly when the work has gone on longer, the service will be less dainty, but the company promises the reverse. A large corps of servants at the distributing kitchens does nothing save polish silver, and it is said that china, linen, etc., will be replenished as fast as it shows signs of wear.

The central kitchens are well worth a visit, and the enthusiasm of Mrs. Daubeny, the manager, is contagious when taken in connection with the visit. Guests are welcomed at any time and demonstration dinners have frequently been given to invite criticism.

The great kitchens are scrupulously clean, and nowhere else in England, says the manager, can be seen such a complete installation of all improved and labor-saving kitchen contrivances. Some of the equipment comes from America, but the largest part of the plant hails from Paris, home of cooking utensils and of cookery.

A large percentage of the cooking utensils are of nickel, that metal being more easily cleaned than the old-time brass or copper. There are innumerable devices for special cooking details, a host of utensils whose names and missions would be a sealed book to the ordinary cook.

The cooking is done by gas, with an occasional lapse into charcoal. The gas is more expensive than coal; but it is infinitely cleaner, quite as satisfactory, and saves labor.

There are specially-constructed gas stoves for heating the silver dishes in which the food is to be sent out. The fact that already hundreds of luncheons, dinners and breakfasts are sent out each day gives one who has not seen the kitchens some idea of the number of service dishes needed and of the size of the plant.

There are cooks enough to spoil any broth; but, fortunately, each cook is detailed to some one special detail of the cuisine and only a few are turned loose upon the broth. The sauce chef sticks to his sauce; the pudding chef has no soul beyond his puddings.

There are East Indian experts among the cooks, men who can prepare curries of all sorts in a fashion to rejoice the souls and palates of that large class in London called Anglo-Indian. Col. Herbert trained these cooks. He himself was long head of the vice-regal household in India and what he does not know about eastern cookery is not within the knowledge of epicures.

So here in the distributing kitchens are pantries and storerooms stocked with queer seeds and spices and powders and nuts and fruits and dried leaves—all the paraphernalia of the Indian chef; and here are concocted kubab curries, dry curries, deviled pine kernels, chutneys, all the weird and spicy dishes dear to the Anglo-Indian and the Englishman who has been introduced to them by relatives and friends.

Italian dishes are a specialty, too, and Italian cooks are prepared to open the eyes and tickle the palates of the Englishman who doesn't know his Italy. The ways of cooking macaroni are legion.

The kitchen menu offers eggs cooked in any one of a hundred ways, many of them Italian; for, though the French chef is a wizard handler of eggs, the Italian cook knows certain tricks of serving eggs with nut sauces that should rouse envy even in the heart of the Frenchman.

While the menu offered for selection is under discussion it might be mentioned that to offset the 100 styles of eggs there are sixty varieties of soups from which the diner may pick and choose—soups of all nations, soups made from materials which the ordinary Englishman would never remotely associate with soup.

Another dietetic point in which the English are sadly in need of education concerns the cooking of vegetables. Nowhere in the world is vegetable cookery so neglected as in Great Britain. The vegetable entrée of the continent is practically unknown there. The distributing kitchen's propaganda may gradually change all this.

One of the big separate kitchens is given over entirely to the preparation of vegetables, and there, as in the soup kitchen, the best recipes from all lands are put into practice by cooks trained especially for that work. Fifty vegetable entrées are on the list of dishes served to order.

In salads, too, England is lacking, and the common variety of English cook knows no more about salads than she does about sanskrit, but the distributing kitchens offer ninety-eight salads. A special department is devoted to meats and poultry, another to fish.

When the ordered dinner has been prepared, it is put in very best silver dishes and packed in patent carriers. Each carrier is heavily lined with green baize and a hot water tin covers the bottom. The covered dishes are set on this tin and three thicknesses of green baize are laid over them.

The carrier closes with an airtight lid, and is put into an electric motor wagon on shelves heated by charcoal fires. The car whirls away, delivers its cases and returns to the kitchen. The company now runs 400 of these cars.

Later the same car collects the dishes. Orders may be pinned to the baize cover, sent by card or telephoned. In case of unexpected guests a telephone message will bring the motor car and an extra service whirling to the rescue, in the shortest possible time. Telephones will be put up in any shareholder's home free of charge for one year.

And the cost of all this? If the manager's estimates may be accepted, and there are statistics to back them, the cost of the meals is less than that of the same style of meals prepared at home.

In the first place one may live as simply or as lavishly as one pleases. It all depends upon the menus ordered. Whichever way one lives, says the manager, one saves money.

Setting aside the fact that even if one orders only simple dishes, those dishes are prepared in a fashion impossible to the average cook, the mere cost of wages, fuel, materials, kitchen equipment, breakage, waste, will bring the price of the home meal up to that of the meal sent from the kitchens.

The company says that it can supply a family of three grown-ups with breakfast, luncheon, afternoon tea and dinner in excellent style for 21 shillings a week, each. It also says that the cost of the same menu prepared at home, inclusive of the cook's wages, keep, fuel, etc., could not possibly be less than 25 shillings a week for each person. If this is true there is a money saving of 12 shillings, to say nothing of the incalculable saving in wear and tear upon the housewife's nerves and temper.

Under this system one maid could do all the work of the ordinary apartment or small house, including the serving of the meals. Home china, etc., could be used, and the food would certainly be better prepared than that served by the ordinary cheap cook.

For the benefit of those families, young married couples, or bachelor men or maids who do not want to keep even one maid, the company intends to organize a corps of maids who will put in an appearance with the meal and serve it, spending as much time as required at the house.

The new idea is certainly catching on in London. The kitchens are having a trade that already overtaxes their resources and makes it necessary to open branches in the different quarters and suburbs of London.

It will be interesting to watch the development of the scheme, its staying qualities, and its effect upon the problem of city life.

If success does perch permanently upon its banners New York would do well to reclaim this American idea with its London improvements. A vast number of weary flat dwellers would doubtless rise up and call the innovator blessed.

RIVAL TONGS IN CONFLICT.

Big New Year Banquet Causes Strife.

Bow Ons Engage All the Available Girls.

Scheme of Gee Quongs to Abduct Them Foiled by the Police.

The Bow On Tong scored a victory over the Gee Quong Tong last night and the jealousy then aroused may grow into hate, and maybe into one of the sanguinary highbinder feuds which are so common among Pacific Coast Chinamen.

It was all because the two tongs, members of the same Chinese Masonic body, could not agree on the date of a grand banquet which was to be a fitting termination of the long-drawn-out celebration of the Chinese New Year.

The Gee Quong Tong wanted to hold the banquet next week at Tsoy Far Low's restaurant, corner Marchessault and Alameda streets. They would have a gorgeous spread of all the imported delicacies that could be got together. And they would have music, and, above all, the fifteen or twenty Chinese women singers and dancers would be there to entertain the banqueters.

The Bow On Tong didn't like this arrangement. They already had engaged the services of the women for last night, and they would brook no delay. They agreed that Tsoy Far Low's restaurant was the proper place for the banquet, but the holiday festivities would die out in a smudge instead of in a blaze of glory if the date were postponed until some time next week.

"Anyhow," said the Bow On Tong, "we have the girls, and your party won't be worth a stick of punk without them."

While all this parleying was going on, a wily member of the Gee Quong Tong engaged the big banquet room of Tsoy Far Low's restaurant for last night, and when the rival tong made overtures for the same room it could not be had. Low would furnish the edibles for both banquets, but he couldn't break his word with the Gee Quongs.

Then the Bow Ons found they would have to make their spread in their somewhat crowded lodge rooms, which are reached through a stuffy little stairway at No. 343 Apablasa street. They had the girls and unlimited funds with which to pay for the best "chow" that Far Low's cooks could concoct, and they could get along without the big banquet room.

It was noised about, however, that the Gee Quongs would have the girls, anyway. They would steal them right out of their rivals' camp, and blood would be spilled if necessary. The girls must be had at the Gee Quong banquet.

The Bow Ons are not afraid of the Quongs, but they didn't want the party spoiled, so they notified Chief of Police Elton, who had issued permits for both banquets, that there might be trouble. A number of officers accordingly were stationed on the muddy and dimly-lighted streets of the Chinese quarter, and as the cooks and the laundrymen and the merchants from Los Angeles and Pasadena made their way to either one of the banquet halls they saw the bluecoats and the detectives in plain clothes were there to preserve peace.

Though the Bow Ons promised the best entertainment, the Gee Quongs were supposed to spread the best dinner, and it was at the latter banquet that the greatest number of little red admission tickets were sold at the rate of $2.50 for the use of a pair of chopsticks.

The girls made their appearance at the Bow On lodgerooms at 9:30 o'clock. Their heads of black hair were as glossy as hard brushing and a liberal use of pomade could make them, and they were resplendent in gorgeous robes, the long sleeves of which seemed in imminent danger of scorching from the cigarettes that they puffed indifferently as they sat in the richly-upholstered chairs ranged along the walls, watching meanwhile the men as they sat at the round tables, eating of the good things that were set before them.

Goe Chun, the blind musician, was there, with his gong, and his drum, leading the orchestra of seven pieces, which included a soloist who sang in a falsetto voice that rose high above the din of the clanging cymbals and the shrill notes of the clarionet.

The menu included minced squad, roast pig, duck and chicken, a stew that was composed of pineapple, chicken liver and pork; dried abalone boiled to a jelly-like consistency; rice and many other things that it was hard even for the banqueters to identify.

China gin flowed in unlimited quantities from the necks of the wicker-covered bottles that had conveyed it from the Orient, and tea was gulped from sake cups that threatened to upset without a touch.

There was little difference between the menus at the two banquet halls, but the Bow Ons seemed to relish their repast far more than did their Masonic brothers, who had not the fair, though painted, faces of the Chinese female aristocracy to lend zest to their feast.

The first course of the Bow Ons ended at 11 o'clock, and the hundred gallants escorted their fair guests to their near-by homes, whence the girls returned an hour later, to lend their attractiveness to the second, and the several succeeding courses, which were served at intervals until an early hour this morning.

A conflict with the Gee Quongs had been expected when the girls made their way through the streets at 11 o'clock, but the vanquished rivals evidently did not care to take issue with the policemen who were known to be near at hand, and there was not the batting of a slanting eye when the female contingent left, and reëntered the Bow On hall.

As a compliment to those who had seen them safely through the crisis, the Bow On Tong set a spread at 1 o'clock for the officers on duty in Chinatown. The Chinese bill of fare was served to the policemen, some of whom never before had tempted fate by indulging in oriental food and struggling with chopsticks.

Detective Tom Quinn, after attempting vainly to master the art of handling chopsticks, gave it up in despair, and grasped the titbits with his fingers; Officer McKenzie could use the chopsticks, but he drank his rice wine from a bowl instead of from the small cup provided for that purpose; Chinatown Officer Block, through long experience, needed no coaching; Detective Churchill fell down with the chopsticks, and used a fork, which a smiling Celestial provided; Officer Moore carried an individual fork, and was at no one's mercy, and Policeman Sloane used a spoon.

JEALOUSY OR BUSINESS.

Uncertain Cause of Fight Between Ed Chandler and L. H. Holden—Girl or Firewood.

Just why Ed Chandler dealt his roommate, L. H. Holden, a crushing blow over the right eye was not made clear when the young men were taken to the Police Station last evening by Officer Johnson, who had arrested them at the Clifton lodging-house on North Broadway for disturbing the peace. Their stories differed. Chandler said the dispute arose over the payment of 45 cents for a sack of wood, but that it may have been jealousy was indicated when a pretty young woman appeared at the station with the landlady of the lodging-house and negotiated for the release of the prisoners. The landlady evidently did not fancy the idea of having her lodgers transferred to the less pleasant quarters provided by the city, so she furnished bail for the combatants and they were set free, to appear Monday in court.

Holden said the fight didn't arise over a sack of wood. It was on account of a more precious package that he will wear a bandage over his good right eye. He had bought tickets and was going to the theater, he said, with a pretty little girl who lives under the Clifton roof, when Chandler broke up the theater party. Chandler did not deny that he resented Holden's attentions to the young lady, but he said business, not jealousy, caused the fight.

Holden found the girl was worth fighting for when she greeted him at the door of the jail and applied the balm of sympathetic words and tearful smiles as they walked home together.

THE QUAKER CITY IS WIRELESS.

CARS OFF THEIR TROLLEY AND POLES ON STRIKE.

Danger Lurks in the Path of Unwary People—Four Men and Many Horses Killed by Contact With Broken Wires.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Mail advices from Philadelphia say that city is as completely shut off from electric communication with the outside world as though such a thing as a telegraph or telephone wire never existed. The storm is the most disastrous, as far as wires are concerned, that has ever visited that section.

Within the city limits scarcely a single overhead wire is in working order. Poles are down in all directions, and wires are dangling from housetops on nearly every street. On Front street, which skirts the Delaware River, thirty big poles on one line were broken off, and are lying in the street. This is but one route. There are dozens of routes leading into the city, and almost all of them are as badly crippled. It is stated that on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Philadelphia and New Brunswick, more than 150 poles are down. Officials of the telegraph companies say it will be fully a week before all of the routes are even in fair working condition. The damage to wires apparently is much worse than was inflicted by the memorable blizzard of 1888, although the storm does not cover nearly so much territory. Four persons were killed in Philadelphia during yesterday and last night by coming in contact with heavily-charged wires. At least twenty-five horses were killed during the day by broken wires.

Late last night the street-railway company operating all the lines was compelled to abandon its service, and at midnight the efforts of the officials were devoted entirely to getting the cars then on the streets back into the car sheds. By this morning, however, they had succeeded in clearing the wires sufficiently to permit the running of a few cars on each line.

Hundreds of men are at work cleaning the wires, and until they are convinced that all danger from contact with electric-light wires is past, the officials of the various telegraph companies will not attempt to operate their wires.

STORM'S WORK IN GOTHAM.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The sleet storm that struck New York proved to be the most severe that has been experienced for several years. Telegraphic communication was almost completely suspended until this evening, when it was generally restored.

Throughout the day the streets were rendered nearly impassable by slush, many of them almost presenting the appearance of rivers, the sewers being incapable of carrying off the overflow. Owing to the holiday, street-car traffic was at a minimum.

The greatest damage was sustained in Brooklyn, where scores of horses were killed by contact with live wires, which were everywhere prostrated. In Prospect Park and in many of the avenues, hundreds of trees were denuded of ice-laden branches. Brooklyn bridge presented a brilliant spectacle, being completely encased in a glittering crystal coating. On Staten Island hardly a wire was left standing, and traffic was everywhere suspended.

More than one hundred dead horses lay on the streets throughout the city. Many of them dropped from exhaustion, and others broke their legs, and had to be shot.

The great storm did more damage in the suburbs than in the city. The wind had full sweep, and in the towns and villages of Eastern New Jersey, Long Island and Westchester county trolley and telephone service was abandoned, and the ground is strewn with broken wires and trees.

HISTORIC TREES UPROOTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PRINCETON, Feb. 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The storm has left Princeton campus a wreck. Valuable elms were shorn of their branches, and are mere skeletons of their former selves. The front campus this morning was strewn so thickly with débris that it was impossible to get through paths.

The dean's yard was littered with big limbs from the historic trees that stand there. These are the oldest on the campus. They were planted in 1776 to commemorate the repeal of the Stamp Act. Other trees which date back to revolutionary period are ruined.

DANGER FROM FLOODS.

HILL AFTER BILLY BRYAN.

He Bids for Nomination for Presidency.

Says New York Will Be the Battle Ground.

Watterson Wants Democrats to Win Over the Business Interests.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The Manhattan Club was the scene tonight of the greatest of gatherings of Democrats in its history. Democrats of local and national reputaion from thirty-eight States were present. It was a "reception given to out-of-town members of the club."

A large number of letters of regret were received. Henry Watterson wrote:

"We live in a country where there being neither rank nor titles, business considerations are bound to prevail. We live in an age of things actual and real. Let us meet the Republican claim that the Republican party is the only true representative of the business interests of the country by exposing the fallacies of that pretension, and at the same time by showing the merits of our own system of Jeffersonian Democracy, taxation for public purposes, embodying a tariff for revenue only; cleaner methods of administration at home, and in the outlying territories; recognition of the power of the people and a greater sense of official accountability; in a word let us oppose against the Republican government of syndication and the syndicates, a Democratic government, laid in the written law of the land, strictly construed, and headed for the benefit of the many, not the enrichment of the few.

"On these lines I believe we can carry the election of 1904."

Justice Truax began the speechmaking and was followed by David B. Hill, who was loudly applauded. He said in part:

"I speak tonight in favor of the maintenance of the old landmark Democratic party. In that path there lies safety, honor, success. We trace our political lineage back to Jefferson, who was the author of that immortal protest against British imperialism, known as the Declaration of Independence. Opposition to the precepts and practices of imperialism was thus one of the cardinal principles of our party faith at the very inception of the government.

"We should adhere to the policy involved in the Jeffersonian expansion, the reasonable and natural acquisition of the territory adjacent to our own. Wherever the American flag of right floats it should be as an emblem of the free government and the aegis of constitutional liberty.

"Neither should the tariff wars nor customs duties obstruct the path of American trade from one portion of this government to another portion.

"The spectacle is at present presented of Cuba relieved from Spanish oppression only to be enslaved by the United States in commercial bondage. Justice demands that these impositions shall cease. Nothing but self-interest stands in the way of tariff reform for Cuba.

"The Democratic party should again press to the front the issue of revenue reform. The Republican principle or practice of protection is based on the right to use the powers of government for individual purposes. Our Republican friends make revenue the incident and protection the main purpose of all tariff taxation.

"The policy of reciprocity is and always will be a Democratic policy. We believe in a strict construction of the Federal Constitution as essential for public welfare.

"We believe in home rule for States.

"We favor an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the people.

"Opposition to dangerous corporate combinations of capital should continue to be the Democratic position.

"The Monroe doctrine, first enunciated by a Democratic President, should remain a settled policy of this republic.

"We believe in hard money—the money of the Constitution—and are unalterably opposed to irredeemable paper currency.

"If any further enunciation of Democratic policy upon the financial question is regarded as necessary in view of the existing monetary conditions, then it is suggested that a simple declaration in favor of the general principle of bimetallism furnishes common ground upon which all can stand.

"New York will be the great battle ground of the campaign of 1904. Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated for President. It is true that, with unseemly haste, and before the funeral of the late President, he publicly announced that he would not be a candidate, but soon thereafter he retracted the statement.

"Permit me to say in conclusion that the views I have expressed are my own, but I blieve they are in accord with the sentiment of the Democracy of the Middle States."

Umbilical Hernia Cured

Feb. 21, 1902. Los Angeles, Cal.

This is to certify that my son, Arthur Schreiber, suffered from Umbilical Hernia from birth till cured by Prof. Fandrey, 642 S. Main Street, city.

I found out by investigating that Prof. Joseph Fandrey had cured several cases of Umbilical Hernia right here in our city, so I went to him on July 14, 1898, when he gave my son the treatment, with instructions, and I am proud to say that within three (3) months he was cured. By inquiring I found out that the Professor didn't only cure Umbilical Hernia but all kinds of ruptures. I then asked the Professor if he guaranteed a cure. He laughed at me and said, "No! The doctor is not yet born who can guarantee a cure, and when one does you can mark him as a humbug." He said, "Follow my instructions and you will be cured without a guarantee." He cured without operation or injection, and my son was relieved before he left the office. I give this statement to rupture sufferers and especially those suffering from Umbilical Hernia, that they might know that at least one man lives who can cure Umbilical Hernia. My boy has been sound and well ever since the Professor pronounced him cured, which is now three (3) years.

Anyone wishing to investigate further may do so by calling at my residence, No. 1323 Berondo Street, Pice Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

I take pleasure in testifying that Dr. Schiffman's method of extracting is absolutely painless, as far as my experience goes, and I am particularly sensitive where dental work is concerned.

Ruptur

A few words to rupture sufferers who say: "Oh, my rupt bother me." Do you know that yours is the most dangerous rupture? It is from the rupture that seems small and insig some sudden slip, fall or violent exercise, coughing or sneez is forced through the small abdominalring, cannot return, in and you have strangulated hernia, which means sudde longest any one has been known to live with strangulated four hours. Have you read in the papers some time ago abo the Duchess of Teck, cousin of Queen Victoria? What was strangulated hernia. Also the French millionaire, Mr. Osca Heights, Los Angeles, died from strangulated hernia in thre money did not save them, and such cases happen almost ever fore, I am warning one and all to look out for the ruptur small and does not bother you. I don't want to repeat AGA I am doing, for I have been a citizen of Los Angeles for six work speaks for itself, as shown by the hundreds cured of But one pride which I have and can prove is that I have save four from strangulated hernia by being called in time, witho operation or injections, here in our city, the proof of which I most prominent physicians of Los Angeles.

Sufferers: it is well to know that strangulated rupture chance of recovery. Why neglect your rupture, even if it you, until it is too late?

FOR SALE—

SPECIAL,

FITZGERALD'S,

PIANO

LETTER.

We have good news for piano buyers. Our eastern connections have been prevailed upon to continue the special arrangements which have heretofore enabled us to sell any piano in our store at rock-bottom prices and on terms of

$6 down,

$6 monthly.

NO INTEREST.

Piano buyers are rapidly learning that paying interest on their piano contract does not gain them a dollar's worth of advantage. If a dealer sold his pianos for the same price on time that he would for spot cash, then he would have a right to interest and the buyer would be wise in paying it. But when a dealer asks you $100 more for a piano on time than he did your neighbor on the same piano for spot cash, where is his right to interest, or your wisdom in paying it? Is not that additional amount which the other dealer adds to his cash price on time sales sufficient to cover his interest and more?

Piano buyers, all the smooth talk in the world does not alter the fact that piano interest is not interest at all. It is heavy tribute to the dealers' avariciousness and the buyer's own folly, for the interest has already been embodied in the price notwithstanding the dealer's assertions that his price has reached rock bottom. Now beginning tomorrow morning we will resume our plan of selling any piano in our house on terms of $6 monthly without interest.

We want you to study out this interest question for yourself. It may be that you intend to pay more than $6 monthly on your piano; many people do; in fact, a large per centage of our customers pay $10, $15 or $20 monthly, but nevertheless it is a very comfortable feeling to know that you are only obliged to pay $6. So pay what you like. It rests with you how soon your piano is paid for. Let us show you our pianos and tell you about our plan of selling. We are the only ones who will tell you the truth about it unless it be one of our hundreds of satisfied customers.

DO YOUR OWN THINKING. WEIGH WELL WHAT DEALERS TELL YOU. CONSIDER THEIR MOTIVES. DRAW YOUR OWN CONCLUSIONS. TALK WITH US. WE WILL DEAL ONLY IN TRUTHS AND TREAT YOU HONESTLY, FAIRLY AND SQUARELY.

Remember, any piano at these terms.

"DOLLARS AND HORSE SENSE," WE NEVER EMPLOY AGENTS, OR PAY COMMISSIONS.

Our business is strictly co-operative, and as we understand co-operation, all interested should share alike. Why should some other person receive a commission on your investment? Concerns that resort to this method of securing business are generally short-lived, grab all there is in sight and go out of business, probably to open up later under a different name. We have ample evidence to substantiate this statement. No misrepresentation in any respect, do everything we claim, everybody interested shares alike. Our booklet,

"DOLLARS AND HORSE SENSE," will tell you how we do it, and the extensive reference list accompanying it will verify our claim that your money earns an average weekly profit of 5 per cent., and the investment is always subject to your control. Twenty years of experience and two years under the present co-operative plan, with a record second to none, is the evidence we have to offer. Legitimate financial agencies report on us, and to this we will add the indorsement of two National Banks and an extensive list of customers. W. W. O'HARA, 1120 and 1121 Union Trust Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. 23

I. D. BARNARD, 116 S. BROADWAY, WILL sell out your business 23

BUSINESS CHANCES—
Miscellaneous.

$5 TO $2500 INVESTED NOW WILL SEcure interest in new and wonderful invention fully as valuable as the electric light, telegraph or steam engine, and furnish permanent employment, at $1.75 to $5 per day. Every dollar invested now will be worth at least $5 inside of six months. The Solar Furnace will develop heat from the sun to run steam engines, "roast" or smelt all kind of ores and minerals, run all kinds of machinery and cook all kinds of food either day, night or cloudy days, by heat from the sun, without fire, fuel or expense. The sunlight falling on a single square yard of surface will melt silver, gold, glass or wrought-iron to a liquid, while four square yards of sunlight will develop over 25,000 degrees of heat, or more than 100 times as hot as boiling water. Of almost priceless value to miners, as it can be built in small sections and carried on a pack pony into the almost inaccessible parts of the mountains, and used for "roasting" or smelting any kinds of ores or minerals, saving all expense of hauling to railroad and of shipping (often several hundred miles) to smelter, and requiring no fuel or water. It will run pumping plants to irrigate many thousands of acres of land that are now practically worthless, making the so-called desert a "garden spot" in many localities, and by using electric storage batteries both heat and power may be stored when the sun is shining to run machinery nights and cloudy days, and also to heat water and cook all kinds of food even at midnight by heat and power received from the sun. The possibilities of this wonderful invention are almost unlimited; there are thousands of uses to which it may be put and those who "get in on the ground floor" now will never regret it.

We will put up large plant immediately at 410 E. Fifth St. so that everyone can see for themselves that it is practical on a large scale as well as with the small, crude model that is now on exhibition daily (at the above number, 10 to 3 only,) this plant, as soon as completed, will furnish power for running machinery, heat to smelt any and all kinds of minerals, and to heat and light houses and cook all kinds of food either day, nights or cloudy weather by heat and power from the sun. To obtain the money to put up this plant at once we are now selling a few hundred absolutely non-assessable $1 shares at 25 cts. each, cash, or 26 cts. on the installment plan at 2 cents per share per week, when plant is completed, no stock will be sold for less than $1 per share, and in all probability it will be worth $5 per share or more. Only a few hundred shares at 25 cts. each and they are going fast; $1 per week buys 50 shares, $2 per week buys 100 shares, $3 per week buys 150 shares, $5 per week buys 250 shares, $10 per week buys 500 shares and $20 per week buys 1000 shares.

All the work of building the factory, of operating it and of putting in pumping plants, smelters, etc., and of operating them will be given to those of the stockholders who want employment for which they will be paid from $1.75 to $5 per day in cash. Investigate and invest today, tomorrow may be too late. Only a few hundred shares left at 25c, and they are going fast. This is your last opportunity, and one that will never come again.

Many thousand fortunes have been made out of inventions not one ten-thousandth part as valuable as the Solar Furnace. Come and see the small, crude model now on exhibition. It shows for itself. Sunshine costs nothing, is clean and pure, and by the aid of the Solar Furnace will furnish heat, lights and power for almost every purpose without any expense whatever for fuel. THE SOLAR FURNACE AND POWER CO., 121½ S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. 23

EGGS FOR HATCHING FROM PURE THOROUGHBRED FOWLS.

Our 300 SINGLE-COMB BLUE LACED ANDALUSIANS are absolutely the best in America. They are as large as Black Minorcas, above standard weights; hens weighing 6 to 7 pounds, and the male birds from 7 to 8½ pounds. They are strictly standard, handsome and uniform in color, and their equals have never been seen.

Our ROSE COMB BLUE ANDALUSIANS are also prize-winners.

Our 100 SILVER SPANGLED HAMBURGS are simply perfect.

Our SINGLE COMB BLACK MINORCAS are the famous Northup Strain; hens weighing 7 to 8 pounds and male birds from 8 to 11 pounds; large, handsome and elegant-looking birds.

Our ROSE COMB BLACK MINORCAS are fine.

Our several pens of WHITE CRESTED BLACK POLISH are second to none in the United States, and quite as great a utility bird as they are handsome.

Our IMPORTED ENGLISH RED CAPS are strictly first-class.

Our BARRED PLYMOUTH ROCKS are barred to the skin and up to standard weights.

Our BUFF PLYMOUTH ROCKS are pure buff, with no black or white feathers, as is usually found in others of the same breed.

Our WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS up to standard weights and are extra fine. They are pure white, not brassy as is common with others.

Our WHITE WYANDOTTES are the "stay-white" kind, of large size and the Duston Strain.

Our CORNISH INDIAN GAMES are up to date.

All of our birds are pure thoroughbred, standard and line-bred for laying.

They have won first prizes in our leading eastern shows, such as Madison Square Garden, New York; Boston, Johnstown, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago and various other places.

We have had 10 years' experience with thoroughbred poultry, and there is no better stock than the birds in our breeding pens, as they are the best that good breeding and money will produce. Among them are more high-scoring and first-prize birds than can be found elsewhere in Southern California. In addition thereto, our offices and incubator-rooms are the finest and best-equipped in this country.

We have stock for sale and eggs for hatching from 35 popular varieties.

Eggs, $1.50 to $5 per setting; $8 to $35 per hundred.

In buying either stock or eggs for hatching, wouldn't you be better pleased with the results by patronizing an experienced and successful poultrymen, who knows when fowls are properly mated for best results, properly fed on the best of grains and properly housed in clean quarters, than to buy of those with little or no experience, who keep a few old hens of doubtful ancestry, dragging out a miserable existence.

"A word to the wise," etc.

Cut this advertisement out and stick it up behind the clock.

As you will need it when you desire to purchase either eggs or thoroughbred stock;

It is with poultry, as with all the rest. You will be better pleased when you buy the best.

YARDS CLOSED SUNDAYS.

B. H. POTTER, importer, exporter and breeder of pure thoroughbred poultry. Offices and incubator rooms, 925 (residence 924) E. 27th st., Los Angeles, Cal. 23

FOR SALE—

EGGS FOR HATCHING.

FROM PENS OF FOUR LEADING breeds of THOROUGHBRED fowls that are SECOND TO NONE; are STANDARD breed, from PRIZE WINNERS, who have carried off the HONORS at poultry shows, such as MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK; BOSTON, ST. LOUIS, BUFFALO and LOS ANGELES. Add to this THE FACT that our birds are all PROPERLY MATED and have the FINEST CLIMATIC AND SOIL CONDITIONS to be found in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA; than we think you will feel JUSTIFIED in placing your orders for settings WITH US. When you further realize that our 15 years of experience in the poultry business was not acquired in the EAST, but in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA EXCLUSIVELY (weigh this point carefully) and for that reason we can safely predict a LARGE HATCH of HEALTHY and VIGOROUS CHICKS from OUR EGGS.

If you want a large fowl and a good layer, we can recommend our WHITE ROCKS (Thomas's celebrated strain.) They are PERFECTLY WHITE, and for size cannot be duplicated.

Do you want an extra good layer? If so, you should certainly get a setting of our FAMOUS BLUE-LACED ANDALUSIANS (Kinder strain.) They are the greatest layers known to man, and have an egg record of OVER 300 EGGS PER YEAR.

Do you favor yellow birds? We have some of the most perfect BUFF LEGHORNS (Arnold strain) that can be had for love or money. Their color, size, wattles and scoring points are the talk of Orange county. An A1 layer and fine eating fowl.

Have you a preference for Minorcas? If so, we can certainly suit you, as we have the WORLD-RENOWNED NORTHRUP STRAIN OF BLACK MINORCAS, a bird that has the reputation of laying the largest egg and plenty of them.

DON'T FORGET OUR ADDRESS. If your scissors are not handy, make a note ON YOUR CUFF. PRICES FOR SETTINGS OF 15 EGGS.

WHITE ROCKS, $2.
BLUE ANDALUSIANS, $2.
BUFF LEGHORN, $1.
BLACK MINORCAS, $1.

YOU ever find a lark's nest hidden among the wheat? If so you understand how the quiet and city of Nazareth nestles down the hills of Galilee. If Pales- the country of all the world Messiah to come to, then was of all the cities of the ancient the very one for Him to in.

the pictures of the by the great masters, one a lack of the reality present age demands. Even Madonna, said to be the painting in the world, which a million or more is lacking the touch of the artist who has stood on the place where the boy Christ pushed his plane over the work bench, while His father stood silently regarding the work and measuring the ability of his Son to follow him in his chosen craft.

We know very little from history, from written facts, of that life after birth in the hillsides of Bethlehem, of the flight into Egypt, and of the return to the beautiful city that looks out upon the plain of Esdraelon, which for centuries has been the granary of Palestine. But, as Aristotle, somewhere says, "Poetry is truer than history," and when one visits the spot and is taken possession of by the Christ that is still alive in the Holy Land, one may perhaps divine thoughts of that life which are closer to reality than if some historians like Josephus and others had jotted them down from the standpoint of the Roman or Greek world.

You must watch the little boys at their play along the hillsides, hee how gracefully they move in their flowing garments, have them follow your horse, and with their slings of woven cord throw stones for you with the accuracy that David had in the use of his little sling of the same order, to understand what that boyhood was like. The East does not change, and in two thousand years, despite the armies that have devastated Palestine, that roadway of the ancient world which was only 150 miles in length, and perhaps eighty in width, it has remained the same country. The same skies, the same flowers, the sweet May pink that smiled into the face of the Master smiles in your face today, and, above all, Mt. Hermon looms beyond, covered with eternal snows, as it was when the Christ child saw the sun set over it two thousand years ago.

REAL PICTURE FOUND IN TYPES.

We must take that child out of the hands of the old masters, out of the conventional draperies that have been wrapped about Him, and place Him in the light flowing garment that the Arab and Bedouin boy wears today. He must have His hair flowing in the wind or bound about with the cloth of cotton which He may at will draw over His face to protect Him from the wind or burning sun. We must look into the blue eyes which one meets occasionally today, and which were not uncommon in the days when Nazareth was a Roman possession. We must abandon the idea of His disputing with the doctors in the temple, and understand that He merely talked as a child might do today in the outer courts, and look upon much that has come down to us in the symbolical way that the Arab looks upon things today.

We find in the marshy places of the Jordan thousands of Bedouins, with their tents of goatskin, who have had their camping ground there from prehistoric times. They have been driven out only to return after the enemy has left their country or they have been strong enough again to get possession of the land which they felt belonged to them by divine right. One may well speak of the East as unchanging! One lonely minaret, from which at sunset the sheik calls the few Mohammedans who live in this Christian city to prayer, and announces, with his hand at the side of his mouth to carry his voice over the hills, that there is only one God and Mohammed is his greatest prophet—one minaret alone tells the traveler and the artist that the little town is now a Mohammedan possession. All about us are signs of the Christian faith. The most interesting spot, perhaps, of any is the small chapel built over the workshop of Joseph on a height which commands the surrounding country to the south and north, and from the threshold of which the Christ Child could see the distant hills of Samaria, where in later life He was to stop and talk with the woman at the well and to impress upon her the fact of His divinity.

The happiest painting of the past years that has been made is, perhaps, that of Hoffman, of the boy Christ disputing with the doctors. But it is not a great work of art, and it is not true to the conditions that existed at that time, nor in costume or guise to the Child it represents. It is in no sense oriental or eastern, but is a painting made in the studio of the artist, happy in conception. It appeals to the popular sense because the painter has infused into the face of the Child something of the divine life He possessed. But this is an age that demands truth; it is no longer satisfied with flowing draperies and trains of following angels and stage scenery, and I count it a happy thing that the age demands not only truth, but character; it shows that man is coming into closer relationship with the Author of all truth—God Himself. When we think, for instance, of the Child being born in the stable in Bethlehem, the Anglo-Saxon imagination thinks of such a stable as we see here—on the east or west side—apart from the dwelling and surrounded by coarse attendants and by the accessories which go to make up the modern stable.

But in the East, at that time, the stable was merely a division or a portion of the large khan, or inn, where the traveler stopped for rest and refreshment, and which one sees in Italy and other countries today. A large space is enclosed by a wall, with huge gates for an entrance, which are shut at night to keep out marauders and brigands. The divisions between the traveler and his camel or donkey are of a fragile nature.

One can see such a khan on the road from Jericho to Jerusalem, known as the Inn of the Good Samaritan, where, in truth, refreshment is furnished to man and beast. And no doubt the spot that is pointed out in the Church of the Nativity was merely a portion or a part of a khan, where the traveler rested his horse or donkey, and either ate alongside of his beast or in an adjoining room, that had no door for division, but merely a sustaining column or beam to strengthen the roof. Let us, then, forget our modern idea of a stable, and think of the birthplace of our Lord as quite a natural one for the time and epoch, where any child might have been born except that of a Roman Prince or one of the Roman aristocracy. It might be well to do away with the idea of all that is miraculous in the childhood of the Master, and so bring it closer to our own childhood and our own children.

The poem hangs on the berry bush
When comes the poet's eye,
And the whole street is one masquerade,
When Shakespeare passes by.

Every child life is miraculous, if we have the insight to see it. That He was a remarkable child cannot be doubted, and yet we must remember that at the age of twelve in the East a girl is given in marriage and a boy is often as far developed as a man of twenty in our land. He does not have to contend with the physical sciences; he does not have thrust upon him books and pamphlets without number, to confuse and distract his plain and simple thinking. Christ was educated as were all the children of His time, first by the lovely and lowly Mary, His mother, a beautiful type of the purest and most gentle womanhood, and a type that the Roman church has used to dignify woman, so that her place has risen from that of a slave or toy to that of a companion and helpmate of man. His father was a man of more than ordinary ability. Tradition, which lives for thousands of years in the East, represents him as a serious, hard-working man, whose interest was largely in his work bench and in developing his children to the best of his ability.

But to return to this simple workshop, where the Christ Child spent many hours of His day, when His brothers were tending the sheep upon the hillside. He brought His wonderful creative ability to bear upon the simple workmanship which was produced by Joseph, His father. In those days the craft of the carpenter was very different from what it is today. Today He would be called a master workman, for then men cared for the impress of the hand upon the work, and each carpenter could turn out all the details of the house and bring to his work the art and training that were necessary to lift him above a mere Bedouin herdsman or a soldier in the armies of Rome.

There is one picture here represented, executed by Murillo, who never visited the Holy Land, but who, through his creative genius and that divine idealism which is the artist's birthright, gave to it that wonderful touch which must make it live forever. But the face is not intense or forcible enough. The boys of Nazareth have keen, sharp faces, deep-set eyes, smooth brows, black or blond and reddish hair, and are quick to learn any word that may serve them in the direction of their work. The frequent allusions in the New Testament to the shepherd and his sheep go to prove that the Master was familiar with every detail of the shepherd's life, and one can scarcely understand that unless he climbs over the hills with their olive trees and sycamores, and here and there a sacred grove, and watches some boy of ten or twelve call to his sheep and sees them turn suddenly from their grazing and follow him, or dart in another direction with the precision of the shepherd dogs of the Scotch Highlanders. The "sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow me"—and we know that those little footsteps went in quest frequently of a lost lamb bleating upon the hills which had strayed from His father's flock.

POPE LEO'S GIFT A WONDERFUL PICTURE.

Pope Leo XIII gave to that simple chapel, presided over by the Capuchin monks, a wonderful picture—to the author's thinking the most remarkable one and the most accurate delineation of the subject that has been produced in modern times. Reproduction can give only a faint idea of its beauty and color and meaning. In the center stands the Christ Child, with face turned toward the spectator, working intently with a ground plane upon what appears to be a cross. We know that the cross dates back at least three thousand years B. C., to the Babylonian epoch and rule in Palestine, as we find it constantly used in cuneiform inscriptions and upon the monuments of the Babylonian and Egyptian kings. At first it meant power—since the days of the crucifixion it has come to mean sacrifice.

There, then, is the Christ Child at work. On the right stands his father, looking intently at the work, and the artist has foreshadowed in a most happy way the Christ that is to be—that is, we see that the head of the father is like the heads of the Christ that have come down to us through the ages—not the conventional head, but the traditional head, and the head that one sees now and again on the high roads of Galilee today. The father is intent upon the work, but on the other side of the canvas, seated upon the steps of stone and stucco that lead to an upper sleeping apartment, sits Mary, the mother, with the hand loom arrested for the moment, gazing intently upon her child, her heart bent upon her son, dreaming half sadly of His future, with a subconscious thought possessing her or foreboding of the sacrifice and ill that must betide her child.

The artist has made a most happy contrast between the mother and the father. On the ground are some doves picking up bits of straw and the wheat that has fallen from the manger close at hand, where the donkey is kept which was necessary for any man who made journeys over the hills to Samaria, or on to Jerusalem, or down to the Great Plain and back again.

The simple-hearted monk permitted me to sit there quietly and study this picture, and seemed surprised that I cared to linger where the average traveler glanced about, consulted his Baedeker and moved on. The artist had come down to Nazareth, had walked over its hills, had watched the children at their play or following the sheep patiently as they grazed from hillock to hilltop. Renan and a few German critics have done their utmost to discredit the historical accuracy of these spots that tradition has held to as the birthplace, the workshop and the place of crucifixion of the Master, but when all is told they only give you their own opinion or what M. Renan thinks or believes, and for my part I prefer, with the men who have loved this life and these holy places, to believe the traditions and the feeling that possesses the poet and the artist as he lingers on these sacred spots. I prefer to believe,

The Drama—Plays, Players and Playhouses. Music and Musicians. Musical Ne

AT THE THEATERS.

The Los Angeles.

THE last half of the week will be occupied at the Los Angeles Theater by dramatizations of two of Anthony Hope's most popular stories. It was T. H. Sothern who first made "The Prisoner of Zenda" known to the stage. Hackett took the play from him and followed it with "Rupert of Hentzau." the dashing, villianous cousin of the prisoner. To those who are fond of the rattle and clash of sword and steel, of the illusive atmosphere of romance, nothing better could be offered. The two stories supplement each other, and are too well known to need retelling. If there is any one who is not familiar with them the treat of a first acquaintance across the footlights will be great. They readily lend themselves to adaptation.

For the first three nights the theater will be closed. "The Prisoner of Zenda" will be on Thursday night and Saturday matinée, and "Rupert of Hentzau," Friday and Saturday nights. The company includes Charlotte Tittell, Harry Leighton, George B. Millar, Cecil Owen, Luke Conness, J. E. MacGretor, Ralph Lewis, Eleanor Carr and Ida Werner.

The Burbank.

James Neill returns tonight with his company for a month's engagement. The bill this week will be "A Gilded Fool," one of the Neill company's first successes. It is a society play, and tells in a farcical way of the adventures of one Chauncey Short, who attempts, disastrously, to spend an inheritance of $2,000,000. He finds a woman to love, and she cures him of his fast ways and his money, but not before he has saved her father from bankruptcy. There is a fine opportunity for the women of the company to wear the handsome gowns for which the Neill company is noted, and there will be elaborate stage settings.

There will be a souvenir matinée Saturday.

The Orpheum.

The Orpheum will have another big bill this week. Cinquevalli, who is without a rival as a juggler, surpassing them all in skill, accuracy and phenomenal feats will be at the head.

CHARLOTTE TITTELL, AT THE LOS ANGELES THEATER.

The three Dancing Dawsons will introduce a fine terpsichorean specialty. The youngest is a baby. The Six Blackbirds, colored entertainers, will appear for the first time here in the coon-town farce, "At the Golf Links."

The Nelson Family will introduce new acrobatic features. Eva Mudge, the delightful comedienne, will be seen in quick character changes. The Auers will present their rag-picking picture performance, and Wincherman's trained bears and performing monkey will be seen in their clever animal act. The biograph appears with an entire change of views, including "The Arrival and Reception of Prince Henry in New York."

The Chutes.

All the variation that can be had outdoors is to be found at the Chutes. There is a continuous programme, starting at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and ending at 11 o'clock at night. There are fourteen shows and the price of admission is ten cents. The great, captive balloon will be the chief attraction for another week. It looms up above the city and furnishes an instructive view to anyone who has nerve enough for the trip. Jim Jefries and Bob Fitzsimmons, boxing bears, caught in Siberia and attached to various educational institutions in this country give an exhibition. The old favorite Arizona Bill with his lectures, Capt. Clark with his dog circus and Mme. Schell with her lions are still there. The Catalina Marine Band furnishes its usual satisfying music. Prof. Falt, the hypnotist is the chief attraction in the theater, which also has Volkyra, equilibrist and acrobat, the De Von Singing Sisters and Bill Evans in coon songs and dances.

The Unique.

This is a banner week at the Unique Theater. The three George Sisters, who were liked last week, will be retained. The newcomers are Eva Thatcher, Irish comedienne, formerly with the Katie Putnam Company, Charles H. Cheneworth, cornetist and bag puncher and new bioscope pictures. Thursday is amateur night.

James Neill, Actor-manager.

The reëntrance of James Neill and his company to the Burbank tonight brings that popular house back to its sober dramatic senses. A few weeks of such riff-raff as "Shooting the Chutes" and such slipshod shows as "Little Lord Fauntleroy" seems to sharpen an appetite for first-class productions.

Mr. Neill comes in now for a month's engagement after a ten weeks' trip that extended as far East as West Superior, Wis. He has brought a stock of new plays, some of them never before seen in the West, and all chosen from the best of the eastern successes. The first week he will play "The Gilded Fool," the comedy that Goodwin made famous. He played it last year in Los Angeles, but it was so well liked then that he thinks another week of it will find large support. His own work in it is one of his best characterizations. "Under the Red Robe," a dramatization of Stanley Weyman's novel, will come next week. It is not likely that any of the Burbank's patrons will fail to like that, for it is a dashing melodrama and a poetic romance, as well as having literary merit. For the third week, Clyde Fitch's "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" will be shown for the first time west of the Mississippi River. Ethel Barrymore is now playing it in the East, where its success has been phenomenal. It is a dainty story, written in Fitch's dainty style, and its action is extravagant enough to furnish plenty of excitement. The bill for the fourth week has not yet been chosen.

Charlotte Tittell.

Charlotte Tittell, the leading woman for "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau" companies, coming to the Los Angeles Theater this week, is a native of California. There were three sisters, Charlotte, Essie and Minnie. All were born in San Francisco, near the old California Theater, known in the early days as "Old Drury," when it was the home of McCullough, Barrett, Sheridan and others.

Miss Tittell's first visit to Los Angeles was in 1889, when she created the role of Ayesha in Webster and Brady's original production of "She." The play was first produced in this city in Hazard's Pavilion, and the success so auspiciously begun here was the stepping stone that gave the present prosperous manager, W. A. Brady, his first foothold.

Following that engagement, she appeared with Mme. Modjeska several seasons, then again as leading lady with E. H. Sothern, in "Lord Chumley" and "The Highest Bidder." Her last visit was with "The President," four years ago, when the favorable impression then created will be pleasantly recalled.

The last two seasons she has played "Flavia" in the Anthony Hope romances, and report speaks goldenly of her.

Orpheum's Three Mudges.

Eva Mudge, at the Orpheum, presents two problems, one to the public and another to the interviewer. From the front she is seen to escape in a lieutenant's uniform through the fly in a tent, and emerge quicker than you can turn the programme to discover her name, as a Red Cross nurse. Before she gets through, she does a change like that four times. That is very perplexing to any one, most of all to the girl who has kept her escort waiting until they were late for the first act, and who gets from him a snarly observation that: "Some women can get into their things in less than an hour."

But to the reporter who goes behind the scenes it is more perplexing. Not the operation itself—that's as simple as proportional calculus to a boy who's had only the Speer system of arithmetic blocks—but Miss Mudge. After letting him in on the secret of the changes, after allowing him to stand by and watch her metamorphose from a nurse into Stonewall Jackson, and then evolve into a sailor boy; after letting him see the disintegration of the coats and trousers, and the crysalis birth of the soubrette spangles, and after he has a note-book filled with exact information of how it all is done, she asks him—think of it!—please not to publish it.

It was a very pretty girl who asked for the promise, and she spoke with that soft assurance that said she knew the secret would be respected. There were also glowing eyes and a dainty manner, and a tilted chin, and a trusting smile—well, if you had been the reporter, you would have promised, too. Then, if you were a newspaper man and knew you duty, you'd tell.

This, then, is the secret. There are three Mudges. The billing of "Eva Mudge, lightning change artist," is all a deception. She has the upper hand in the family, and she is a perfect tyrant in lording all the spoils of vaudeville victory, and victory it surely is, for at 16 she had the London music halls at her feet, and now—it was two years ago that London saw her—New York demands her time twenty weeks out of every year; that is a big record for the biggest vaudeville favorite.

The fact is, that Papa and Mamma Mudge appear at every performance. No. They don't come out on the stage. It is Eva who tells about gray-haired Barbara Freitchie; Eva who rolls about in true sailor fashion, as she sings of "the bounding main;" Eva who concludes with a demure little speech of thanks that has enough brogue in it to fully answer the question: "Why is she not billed as Mlle. Fleurette?"

But where would Dewey have been without the man behind the gun? Mamma and papa are not behind the powder—Eva is there—but they spike every chance given that might prevent a perfect performance. They stand—but the details are, perhaps, not interesting.

It is enough to know that papa Mudge is a locomobile manufacturer in New York, that he could buy a few vaudeville theaters if he wished, and still have money left to pay Eva her salary—which is not that of a seamstress or a bank clerk; that he and his wife travel about the country with their daughter, that they are present at every performance, that she is farther from harm's way with them than a girl is at a boarding school, and that the public as well as the reporter thinks she is interesting enough to deserve it all.

A London Letter.

Curtis Brown writes to The Times from London:

It must be rather good fun, as well as mighty interesting, to watch Sarah Bernhardt at work in her theater. At present "Sarah" is particularly busy, for, beside playing "Theodora" every night, she is getting ready for two or three new productions, in each of which she is tremendously interested. Rehearsals of "The Samaritaine," which Bernhardt is to give during Holy Week, are now on; those for the coming revival of "Magda," which takes place after Easter, commence in a day or two, while her stage carpenters and costumers are busy with two brand new plays which the actress means to have up her sleeve. She is at her theater every morning within a few minutes after the clock has struck nine, and from that time until the hour of dejeuner things happen with lightning rapidity. The tragedienne can listen to four persons with ease while looking over and commenting upon the designs for new costumes and keeping an attractive eye on the minor actors at rehearsal. At 12 o'clock she dives into one of the boxes, where a piece of "bifstek" and a few fried potatoes are set forth for her delectation, but even while eating she is absorbed in watching players and scene shifters, as well as in interviewing dressmakers. So she goes on working like a beaver until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when she rushes home to dinner, but is back at the theater again long before the overture has begun.

Young Prince Nicolas, King George's third son, who is gifted with an unusual bent for play-writing, evidently has no intention of having his proud name associated with any failures. The Prince puts forth his dramatic efforts anonymously, and if they are successful he claims them. A while ago, after it had been announced that a sprightly comedy called "The Reformers," had carried off the prize in an open competition held at Athens, the Prince came forward as author, and now the play-goers of the Greek capital have been surprised by learning that a farce, called "The Niece of Madame Marie," which has made a decided hit at the Royal Theater, is also from the pen of the young royal highness.

London is looking forward eagerly to "Ben Hur," which is due at Drury Lane on Easter Monday. Robert Tabor, now a prime London favorite, will have the part of hero. J. E. Dodson, who has been playing in the United States for several years, is to be the Simodes. Iras will be portrayed by Miss Constance Collier, who played the adventuress in Nat Goodwin's London production of "When We Were Twenty-one," and who is the Pallas Athene in Tree's "Ulysses."

The American-made farce "Are You a Mason?" has proved such a money-maker at the Shaftesbury that Charles Frohman intends to follow it with "All on Account of Eliza," and the class of theater-goers who made the success of the "Belle of New York" are rejoiced to hear that E. J. Sullivan, the original polite lunatic, is to have Louis Mann's old part therein. Now comes the announcement that Jessie Millward is anxious to lease her old home, the Adelphi, after "Arizona" has finished its run, and to produce there "In the Palace of the King," and "The Climbers." When the Crawford play is given, Miss Millward will be supported by James K. Hackett.

Paul Cinquevalli.

Paul Cinquevalli, the great juggler who will appear this week at the Orpheum, was born at Lisa, Poland, June 30, 1859, and when 2 years old was taken to Berlin. When 13 years old he won two prizes for performances in gymnastics. The desire to become an acrobat grew upon him until he finally ran away from home, joined a circus, and made his first appearance at Odessa as a performer on the wire. Shortly after he became proficient on the trapeze and then toured the continent of Europe. When he returned to Russia he had a mishap which changed his professional career. He was making a long leap from one trapeze to another when, owing to the failure of the attendant to wipe the moisture from the trapeze bar, it slipped through Cinquevalli's fingers and he was dashed to the floor. For eight months he lay in a hospital, and during the latter part of his stay he began the practice of juggling and balancing bottles, plates, balls, and any other article he could lay his hands on. When he was entirely recovered he had perfected himself in the art of juggling, and his first appearance occurred in the same building where, one year before, he had fallen almost to his death.

After finishing his contracts in this country, Cinquevalli intends making a tour of the world, visiting Australia, China, India and Japan.

Nathan Hale.

Clyde Fitch's drama, "Nathan Hale," which is coming to the Los Angeles Theater soon, attracts attention to the patriot martyr. He had the simple, manly training of the eighteenth century, and his whole life ran scarcely through twenty-one years. Today we consider a man young at 30, in face of physical sciences and all there is to learn. His mother seems to have had artistic and literary inclinations, which afterward showed themselves strongly in her son. From his father he got firmness of purpose.

Hale's college record is a fascinating one. He was an all-round man, an ideal character physically, spiritually and intellectually. The jump he made on the campus marked him for many years as the best all-round athlete the college produced, and the space he covered was shown for years after he left college.

His love made his death more tragic. His father having married again, brought into the family a stepdaughter, Alice, to whom Hale became strongly attached; but, strangely enough, the deacon was opposed to the marriage. He had other ambitions for his son, and ordered his stepdaughter to marry a merchant of the village. In those days people were guided by the advice of their parents, and Hale's heart ached sorely when Alice was given over to Elijah Ripley in that sacred sacrament.

Around this pathetic romance in Hale's life, Clyde Fitch has deftly woven a dramatic story of charming interest.

Mrs. Potter's Love-making.

Mrs. Brown Potter, the actress, has ideas distinctively her own with reference to the proper manner of expressing passionate emotion on the stage. She has for years been a careful student of the safe means that may be employed by actors and actresses in conveying ideas of passionate scenes of affection of a non-platonic nature to a critical audience, and her individuality in this particular phase of acting is marked. This is shown by her recent withdrawal from the cast of "Ulysses" on account of a misunderstanding growing out of her manner of reading the part of Calypso. She says in explanation:

"In playing a love scene I try to work upon the imagination of my audiences, and this is done by the power of suggestion that is the gift of some men and women who have made their greatest fame by their playing of emotional scenes.

"I endeavor in my own work to appeal to the minds as well as the hearts of my audiences. I have a method of my own that has been of infinite value to me for several years past. I employ exactly the same methods in my recitations.

"You ask me to explain my methods. It would be quite impossible in writing for me to do so, as voice, gesture and manner are such important factors that they cannot be reduced to mere rules. Undoubtedly, the greatest public favorite is the easiest to act with. The lover need not appeal to me, but if he appeals to the general public, that is the man I want to play with, and my likes or dislikes are immaterial. I bow to the public's taste, and I want them to choose the lover. Whom they like I can easiest act with.

"Passion does not necessarily mean athletics. The idea of passionate love can just as easily be conveyed to an audience by the expression of the eyes and the lines about the mouth as it can by any amount of distortion and misplaced energy.

"One little illustration will, I think, express my view clearly. A lover is leaving his heart's mistress, perhaps for a long time. They kiss with a passion that means everything in the world to them. If the sound of that kiss is heard across the footlights the situation is marred and a giggle from somebody is sure to follow. There is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous. But let the kiss be silent, and the suggestion of its lingering sweetness appeals to the imagination.

"Another case: A woman bids farewell to her lover. She is heartbroken, and the desire of her life has gone from her. She kisses her hand to him as he passes beneath her window. If she kisses with a loud sound of smacking lips no effect is mode, but if she does it so—with all her heart in her eyes and the silence of an absolutely passionate kiss upon her lips—the effect at once wins its way."

QUIPS AND CUES.

"Old Jed Prouty" has just celebrated its 4200th performance.

Clara Morris is reported to be writing a novel, to be called "A Pasteboard Crown."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the poetess, has appeared as a stage writer, in "Her First Divorce Case."

New York has three Hebrew theaters in successful operation, and now Brooklyn is to have one.

Charles Frohman asserts that there are not enough stars, and that there are too many theaters.

James E. Sullivan is to imitate Louis Mann for the benefit of the Londoners in "All On Account of Eliza."

A western man has stated that in her first ten years on the stage Della Fox got ninety-eight miles of press notices, which she has pasted in books.

Edna May is preparing to appear in a musical farce called "The Three Little Maids," at the Apollo Theater, London. The new piece is by Charles Hands, with music by Paul Rubens.

Henry Miller is contemplating a big scenic revival of "The Only Way," to be put on at the Academy of Music of New York, before he starts West for his regular San Francisco engagement this summer.

"The Sultan of Sulu," libretto by George Ade, was produced for the first time in Chicago last Tuesday night by a company, including George Beane, Margaret McKinney, Gertrude Quinlan and Blanche Chapman.

Minnie Dupree, who has been a member of Amelia Bingham's company for the past two years, has sent in her resignation, and will become a member of the company playing "Life" in New York, beginning the last of this month.

Wilton Lackaye of the "Colorado" company, which closed in Philadelphia last night, is in New York, where he has been specially engaged to originate a strong character part in a new play Amelia Bingham is soon to produce.

Martin Harvey has given up "After All," Freeman Willis' Eugene Aram play, as a failure, and revived in London "The Cigarette Maker's Romance." This situation puts his American tour of next season again in doubt.

Word comes from London that Alice Nielsen has not been a glittering success as a concert singer, and is pining to return to comic opera. It is further intimated that Miss Nielsen will soon return to her native shores, and be seen in a new light musical vehicle.

Beerbohm Tree is reported to be contemplating a series of coronation Shakespeare shows in London for foreign visitors It is stated in the Sketch that he may produce, among others, "Richard the Second," and "The Tempest," with himself both as Prospero and Caliban.

If present negotiations go through, Frank Daniels will have the principal comedy role in "The Chinese Honeymoon," when it is presented for the first time in New York at the end of the regular season. Kirke La Shelle may farm Daniels out to the Shuberts, who control the piece.

Augustus Thomas's "Colorado" closed its tour in Philadelphia last Saturday night, and Wilton Lackaye, Maude Hoffman and Frank Carlyle are out of an engagement. Mr. Thomas was very successful with "Alabama" and "Arizona," but a failure must be marked against "Colorado."

The popularity of "The Christian" in New York seems to be as strong as ever. It was recently put on for a week by the Murray Hill Stock Company, and scored such a hit that it was decided to keep it on for a fortnight, although it has been the rule of this theater to change the bill weekly.

The rights to produce "Sherlock Holmes" in Denmark being too steep for a Copenhagen theatrical manager, the piece was translated without leave and has proved a big hit in the Danish capital. The manager is now having his troubles, as the Danish pirates are using the play without permission.

Joseph Hart has met with such success in "Foxy Grandpa," that he has taken up another series of newspaper sketches, for the ground work of his next piece. The new show will be devoted to the travels of "Pore Lil' Mose," that have been illustrated in the New York papers for some time.

JAMES NEILL, AT THE BURBANK THEATER.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Past Events.

CHARLES A. BOWES'S Lyric Club sang at Covina last week, repeating their Monrovia programme with tremendous success. Mr. Bowes had a great personal triumph in "Gipsy Jan," which he was forced to repeat.

Last week the First Congregational Orchestra, under W. H. Mead, gave a concert in Blanchard Hall for the benefit of the Y.W.C.A. The orchestra was assisted by Mrs. Grace Miltimore Stivers, soprano; Forrest Dabney Carr, basso; Clarence Cook, violinist, and Miss Clara Bosbyshell, accompanist. The following programme was rendered: March from "Maid Marion" (De Koven;) overture, "Romantique" (Kela-Beler;) soprano, "Sogno d'Amour" (Gregh) Mrs. Stivers and orchestra; concert waltz, "Return of Spring" (Waldteufel;) Concerto in G Minor, (Max Bruch) Mr. Cook, piano accompaniment by Miss Bosbyshell; Intermezzo from "Naila" (Delibes;) Basso, "Hosanna" (Granier) Mr. Carr and orchestra; Themes from "Maritana" (Wallace;) Romance, "Harmony of Love" (new) (Brooks.)

Worship Music.

Gerrit Smith, Mus. Doc., writes entertainingly on the subject of worship music. He gives the following brief history of it:

"The cultivation of music as an art was begun by the medieval monks of the Roman Catholic Church. Singing schools were established by Pope Sylvester in Rome about A.D. 314. In the middle of the fourth century antiphonal chanting was made a required part of the church service at Antioch, and a little later the Council of Laodicea forbade congregational singing and confined the service to a trained choir. St. Gregory arranged the mass in its present form about 600 A.D.

The Emperor Charlemagne proved himself a zealous apostle of the musical system of St. Gregory, and founded music schools in France and Germany.

"Queen Elizabeth in 1559 directed her clergy that in the beginning or at the end of evening prayer there may be sung a hymn or such like song to the praise of Almighty God, in the best melody or music that may be devised, having respect that the sentence of the hymn may be understood and perceived.

"Oratorio was so called from its originally having been performed in the 'oratory' (Italian 'Oratorio.') It is an improvement upon the old form of miracle play. The first oratorio of note was produced in 1600.

"Such were the beginnings of church music. It is evident, then, that the church, like a careful mother, has, in the Old World, ever watched over and regulated all that was done in her music.

"It is suggested that while the progress of music in this country was thwarted by the early church, the tendency of church enlightenment is now realized by a consideration of the character of church music of the present day, together with an estimate of the yearly expenditure of the churches upon music. In art, literature and science, America has made remarkable progress; in no one direction, however, has she made more rapid or greater strides than in the character of her music. This applies also to her church music. We have passed on from the old days of Puritan psalmody; the flashy 'Te Deum' of twenty years ago, with its elaborate solos, is now a thing of the past. The church has come to know its own and demand its own.

"A rising body of intellectual, capable musicians is springing up to meet her requirements. And what are these requirements?

"First, the perfection of the musical portions of the worship service of the church; and, second, and no less important, the upbuilding of the worship idea, as presented in the higher forms of music performed amid the surroundings and under the conditions in view when they were composed.

"The beautiful 'Passions' of Bach were spiritual mysteries designed for church services. The great oratorios, while not primarily written with this intention, are nevertheless suitable for this form of presentation, and doubtless would appeal to many hearts with far more force in this connection than in the glare of the concert room.

"The regular services of the church have been beautified and dignified by the growing use of churchly music, written especially for these services. Nor can any one form of church lay sole claim to the beautiful in music.

"It yet remains for us, however, to offer our highest tribute of worship through the musical language of the many great works which have been created in reverence, and in which many of us may find the deepest expression of our innermost emotions."

Jan Kubelik, the violinist, who has been touring this country, flew into a rage at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, because he noticed a picture of Paderewski in the elevator. Tearing the offending print from its place he rushed up to the clerk of the hotel, and in an indignant voice exclaimed:

"There eez one insult. For why eez him done? I have stopped here like it eez my home, and then I get these insult."

Jan's friends tried to quiet him. They talked rapidly in their tongue and the secretary who was warning Jan, to all appearances, not to show his temper, threw his fur-lined overcoat over the Meanwhile his secretaries are struggling with the masses of applications for admission to the Abbey which every mail brings to them. No peer can enter Westminster Abbey without a ticket countersigned by the Duke of Norfolk, and any nobleman who finds himself unable to attend the coronation must obtain from the Duke a license excusing him therefrom.

The Duke of Norfolk is the richest and most prominent Roman Catholic in England, yet he will have to stand by and hear his religion specifically denounced by the King in the coronation oath. He was an efficient Postmaster-General, and endeared himself to the "man in the street" by resigning that position when the Transvaal War broke out and going to fight in South Africa. He didn't achieve much at the front, but that wasn't his fault.

Although he is almost as famous for his heartiness and good cheer as for his shocking taste in clothes, the greatest of English noblemen has had trouble enough to make a misanthrope of most men. He idolized his beautiful wife, who died soon after their marriage, and his only son is so ill both in body and mind that only the most constant care on the part of his father and one of his aunts keeps him alive.

According to well-vouched-for stories the Duke of Norfolk has been mistaken on board his yacht for one of his sailors, and times without number, while tramping over his broad acres, for one of his "help," but the best of all these veracious anecdotes is that which relates His Grace's encounter with one of the sisters at a convent where he had gone, as requested, to distribute some prizes. The retreat was not a long way from Arundel, so the Duke, "seedy" as ever, walked over, and, on entering the grounds was confronted by the portress. The nun, who never had seen the Duke before, surveyed the shabby nobleman from head to foot and then remarked:

"My good man, you ought to know that we do no distribute relief on such a day as this."

"Quite so, sister," replied the Duke; "but you do distribute prizes, and I have come to distribute them for you."

MILITARY TOPICS.

One of the items in the "appropriation account" of the British Navy for 1900-1 is for $139,400 to cover losses due to faults in design under which large quantities of ammunition became dangerous and useless.

The time limit for submitting the essays on "The Most Practicable Organization for the United States Army in Active Service," in competition for the Enno Sander prize, has been extended to March 31, 1902.

Three torpedo-boat destroyers recently built at Havre for Russia, the Sterliad, Ossiotor and Forel, have left Brest on their way to the Far East. They are four-funneled boats painted white, and have a bridge from end to end, forming a sort of spar-deck.

At last the leveling of the fortification of Paris, between the Seine at Auteuil and Saint Denis, which has been talked of so long, seems to be on the point of realization. By sweeping away this barrier the city of Paris will be increased by the addition to its area of the Bois de Boulogne, and all the various suburban districts existing between the present city walls and the Seine.

It is semi-officially announced that the period of service in the French army will shortly be reduced to two years, the Military Committee of the Senate having reported that the change can be made without detriment to the service. According to a statement, recently issued by the French War Office, the French army now has 28,400 officers and 492,059 men, as compared with the 22,386 officers and 569,699 of the German army.

The Ordnance Board which is conducting at the Sandy Hook proving grounds tests of field guns, has eliminated all guns entered in the competition except those that have a long recoil on the carriage. This leaves only four guns in the test. They are the gun of the Ordnance Department, mounted on the Wheeler carriage, the Erdhardt gun, the Lewis gun, and the gun submitted by the Bethlehem Steel Company. It is said that any one of these would be satisfactory to the army. The guns are to be sent to Fort Riley for further test.

A French author, M. Arthur-Levy, is about to publish a work entitled "Napoleon et la Paix," intended to prove, by the aid of documents drawn for the most part from foreign archives, that Napoleon always made war against his will. The Revue Illustrée, which prints some advance pages of the work, relative to certain episodes in which Queen Louise of Prussia figured, says that it is an important work, calculated to produce a great sensation. Its author has written other works on Napoleon.

Capt. Percy M. Scott of the British cruiser Terrible, delivered a lecture before the United Service Institute in Hongkong a short time ago, in the course of which he keenly deplored the bad gunnery of the British China squadron, the records of which, he added, were anything but nice reading. He held that the inefficiency shown by the squadron in this respect was due to lack of application to the study and practice of gunnery, but expressed the hope that the record, "like other nasty things," might act as a tonic in bringing about better conditions.

SURVEYS IN ALASKA.

Thirty Thousand Square Miles of Farming Land May Be Opened in Copper River Watershed.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) March 18.—Work will soon begin on what is said to be the first survey the government has ever made in Alaska. A. J. Adams of Valdes, formerly in charge of the hydrographic work of the United States Geological survey in this State, has been awarded the contract to run the base line through the Copper River Valley, which will open for settlement the greatest tract of rich and fertile agricultural and grazing land in the entire territory. The work will be completed in a short time, and if Congress extends the land laws of the United States, entire, to Alaska, all that vast district will be open to location by settlers in tracts of 160 acres.

It is estimated that within the great Copper River watershed there are 30,000 square miles of as good, rich farming and grazing land as can be found in the north. The soil is described as loamy and easily cleared. The hills and valleys abound in growths of red top and bunch grass that makes fine hay. There is an abundance of wood, while pure water is plentiful.

As a matter of fact, this land is now open for settlement, but has never been surveyed and could not be located. The contract which Mr. Adams has secured is for establishing "the base lines, meridians and standard parallels for Alaska in the Copper River Valley." The total length of the lines is 200 miles, and after they are once established it will be comparatively easy to establish other surveys.

THE TELEPHONE TALKS.

Hello.
Yes.
Hello, hello.
Hel—yes.
I'm the Telephone talking.
What?
I'm the tel—what? Hello.
What—Tel——
T-e-l-e-p-h-o-n-e.
Do you get it?
Don't stand so near;
And you need't yell
As if you were a Comanche;
Open your ears more,
And your mouth less.
See?
It's me.
The Telephone.
Listen:
I reach to the furthest
Ends of the earth,
The rich man's palace,
The poor man's hearth;
To the city mart,
To the country store,
To the mountain top,
To the ocean shore;
To the whirring mill,
To the quiet shades,
To all professions,
To all the trades;
To the merchant's office,
To the editor's den,
To the workers with hammer
And brush and pen;
To the heads of nations,
To the humblest clod,
To the haunts of sin,
To the house of God:
All men and all things
Are alike to me,
The high and the low,
The bond and the free.
Hello.
What?
No. Yes. What's that?
Yes, yes,
I'm the Telephone, I said,
Oh, yes.
I whisper a lover's message,
Deep under my metal breath:
I tell of the deeds of the living,
I tell of the doings of death.
I cover the world
With my wires unfurled
From Greenland's icy mountains
To India's coral strand,
And some day
The angels of the New Jerusalem
Will be wearing my hello
Over there.
What's that?
Yes, I know where I'm at,
And so does everybody else;
But if they don't,
They go to the nearest drug store
And find out.
Before I was,
The world waited to speak;
But with me
Came instant expression,
And though I have not brought mankind
Face to face exactly,
I have brought them
Jaw to jaw;
And how they do jaw sometimes.
What?
What's that?
You're another.
Go there yourself.
Hello.
Yes.

And Gabriel makes it known,
He is going to drop his trumpet
And take the Telephone.

The Prince and the Looking-glasses.

A few years ago King Carlos of Portugal paid a lengthy visit to England, and one day he had to speak at a gathering of eminent people at a reception in the West End.

The day happened to be a Friday, and His Majesty was upset even to the point of annoyance. In this nervous condition, he chanced to kick over a flower pot, which fell on the head of a peer who was sitting below the platform. King Carlos apologized profusely, and remarked that, had the day been Saturday, he was sure the accident would not have happened. Seeing, however, that he had not hurt the peer, he humorously remarked:

"I have been a sportsman all my life, and bagged much big game; but this is the first time I ever potted the head of a British peer."

It is said that on one occasion the Princess of Wales broke a valuable looking-glass. Next day she seemed terribly upset, and came with a tearful story to her royal husband.

"Oh, I'm so miserable! Yesterday I broke a looking-glass, and today one of my poor cats is dead!"

The Prince is not particularly fond of cats, and on the following day sent for Her Highness.

"Any more cats dead this morning?"

"No," replied the Princess, horrified. "Why do you ask?"

"Because I went and broke four looking-glasses yesterday," replied His Royal Highness, laughing.—[Answers.

NATIONAL IRRIGATION.

Growing Sentiment in Its Favor.

Effective Work of the Association.

Mr. Maxwell Explains the Two Bills—Faults of the House Bill.

BY J. D. WHELPLEY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 15.—George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association, has returned to Washington after an absence of several weeks in the West. The remarkable change in public sentiment throughout the Eastern States during the past two years in favor of national irrigation, which has found such marked expression in the present session of Congress, is generally conceded to be largely due to the work of this national association, a majority of the members of which represent the largest commercial and manufacturing concerns in the country. It is believed by many members of Congress that if the irrigation bill now pending before the House were to receive the support of the National Irrigation Association it would pass; and, on the other hand, that if the association should strongly oppose the measure it would be defeated.

On being asked if the association would favor the bill Mr. Maxwell said:

"That depends on what bill you mean. There are two bills and you must not confuse them. If you refer to the compromise committee bill as now pending in the House of Representatives, I would say no, most emphatically no. If you refer to the Senate bill, as it was amended in the Senate and passed by that body, it was a great improvement and with some further amendment could be made as good a bill as was the original Hansbrough-Newlands bill in the last session."

"What is the objection to the House bill?"

"Well, I will show you. Did you ever see a flock of blackbirds following a plow? Well, that is just the way the scrippers and speculators and land grabbers would follow in a flock after the government surveyors from the moment they went into the field to begin the survey of any government system under a law such as has been reported from the Irrigation Committee to the House. Every bit of land irrigable from irrigation works when built up would be filed on by speculators before the government workmen stuck a pick into the ground. Not an acre would be left for actual settlers. Then the government would have to either abandon the enterprise or build it for the benefit of a lot of speculators and rely on getting its money back from the sale of water rights to lands in private ownership, and under the State-control clause in section 8 of the bill, the government would not have the slightest power in any way to enforce payment for these rights. The homemaker and the government would both be left out in the cold under that bill, but the speculators would feather their nests well.

"The National Irrigation Association stands for a principle. It demands that what is left of the public domain shall be reserved for actual settlers, and that the further spoliation of the public lands by speculators and its absorption into great ranches to the exclusion of home builders must and shall be stopped. It will never surrender or compromise that principle for mere expediency or to gain a temporary advantage."

"Does not the House bill as reported reserve the land for homestead settlers?" Mr. Maxwell was asked.

"No," he replied, "it does not, although it is so drawn that it would deceive many people into thinking it did. It says in section 3 that the lands proposed to be irrigated shall be subject to entry under the homestead law, but this clause is a delusion and a snare because it is inoperative until the Secretary of the Interior gives public notice designating the lands irrigable under the system, which he is not to do until the contract for construction has been actually let. Before then all the land would be filed on by speculators. The Senate amended this and provided that this notice should be given as soon as the Secretary of the Interior determines the project to be practicable. This is an improvement, but still is not enough. The land should at all times be open to homestead entry, subject to the charges and conditions of this act, but whenever the Secretary decides to survey any proposed project he should, before the surveyors go into the field, temporarily withdraw the land from scrip and desert-land entry, and as soon as the surveys are completed he should determine whether the project is practicable and if it is give the notice, and if not reopen the land to general entry."

"If the bill could be passed, would it not be better to have it go through in any shape, even if it could not be amended?"

"To have a bill pass which would destroy itself in its practical operations, and provide nothing but a graft for speculators, would be a fatal mistake from the standpoint even of the West. The whole strength of the irrigation movement in the East, and the reason for its remarkable growth, has been the confidence of the business interests of the East that it was a movement which was really and genuinely proposing to make opportunities for settlers, and create dense populations and make new markets, and that men who wanted to build homes would have the benefit of the opportunities created by the government appropriations. If you destroy this confidence, you destroy the movement, and the West cannot afford to do it for any temporary advantage. The fight between those who want homemaking and population, and those who want speculation and land-grabbing, had far better be fought out first, than to surrender to the speculators, and lose the confidence of the East."

"How do other organizations stand on this point?"

"Every organization, whether it be commercial, labor or manufacturing, which has indorsed the national irrigation movement, and there are a multitude of them, has demanded that the lands to be reclaimed shall be reserved for actual settlers only. Every one of them is arrayed against what would happen under this bill, as Mr. Mondell has reported it from the committee. That bill is contrary to the President's message. He said that the lands should be reserved for settlers. It is contrary to the constitution of the National Irrigation Association, which demands the same thing."

"Could the bill be so amended as to remove the objections you have suggested?"

"Of course it could. The original Hansbrough-Newlands bill was in its general features a sound measure, and had the support of the National Irrigation Association."

"What amendments ought to be made to the bill?"

"The lands should be reserved for actual settlers, as I have already explained. The right to get a water right from a government system for private lands, should not only be limited to 160 acres to any one land owner, as the bill provides, but should be further limited to actual bona fide permanent residents on the lands. If non-residents are allowed the right, the 160-acre limitation will be evaded by wholesale.

"More than this, the projects affording the greatest advantages for government construction are interstate systems, like California-Nevada, or Colorado-Utah, or Wyoming-Nebraska, and under this bill no interstate system could be built. The clause giving each State exclusive control should be stricken out. It is unnecessary. The preceding clause of section 8, which provides that there shall be no interference with the laws of any State is all that is needed to protect the States.

"It is the law of the arid region today that priority of right arising from actual beneficial use of the water applies to the whole stream, regardless of State lines. There is absolutely no doubt about it that this is the law. It is a just and equitable law. No change in it should be made by Congress. Under a comprehensive system of government storage there would be water enough for all, but users of the water on an interstate stream in a lower State should have the same protection as though the whole stream were in one State. And it is equally true that a prior appropriation in an upper State should be similarly protected. No man with any sense of right or justice will deny that."

"If the bill is amended as you suggest, would the association oppose it?"

"Certainly not. The association will favor any appropriation for the reclamation of arid lands that will open up opportunities for actual settlers, to build homes and reserve land for them, and it will oppose any plan that does not do that. We want something more than mere appropriations. We want to be sure that its expenditure will create more homes and small farms. We have enough big ranches in the West already."

When asked whether he thought the bill could be passed if amended, Mr. Maxwell said:

"I have not been back in Washington long enough to form a satisfactory conclusion as to that. There is no doubt that the sentiment in favor of national irrigation in Congress is growing very rapidly. I think if an organized effort had been made to secure some specific appropriations it would have been easier than to pass a general bill, but the specific projects can be built under the general bill, and the committee of western members seem to have taken up the idea of a general bill and to have gone so far with it that they cannot very well crystallize on anything else. If enough strength can be developed to pass a general bill, there is no reason why it should not be done, provided always that the bill is a sound measure. Unless the present House bill is amended, it will, in my judgment, be defeated by the eastern members, and it ought to be, but if it is properly amended, I am disposed to think it can be passed. The West should insist upon the amendment, and not push a bill in the House which eastern members will oppose as a speculative scheme, which has already been scotched by the amendment of the bill in the Senate. Above all things, we must keep faith with the East, and retain its confidence. The irrigation movement must continue always to be a home-making movement."

FREDERICK'S GIFT.

Great Prussian Sent a Portrait, not a Sword, as a Present to Gen. Washington.

[Philadelphia Correspondence New York Tribune:] A Philadelphian is in possession of data which shed new light on the controversy regarding the gift presented to Washington by Frederick the Great. For years it has been said that the gift was a sword, but recently historians have become skeptical on this point. According to information in the hands of Frank E. Marshall of No. 3224 Montgomery avenue, the gift was a portrait of the great Prussian. Mr. Marshall is a well-known collector of Americana, and his authority for the portrait theory is contained in a footnote to a rare volume formerly in his possession. The book is a French poem published at Amsterdam in 1783, and dealing with the American struggle for independence. The work is entitled "L'Amerique Delivree," esquisse d'un poeme sur l'Independence de l'Amerique."

The author's name was indicated only as "Comte de la G." This book was sold with others from Mr. Marshall's collection in New York in 1894, and is now probably in some library of historical works, but Mr. Marshall has preserved the following note regarding it:

"The first draft of the poem is of over seven hundred pages, and contains many curious 'Notes' giving details of revolution. In volume I, page 17, is the note that the King of Prussia sent his portrait to Washington, having the inscription underneath, 'Le Plus Vieux Roi de l'Europe au plus grand Capataine du Siecle.' The popular impression is that the gift was a sword instead of a portrait."

The tradition regarding the sword supposed to have been given by Frederick the Great was that it was accompanied by a verbal message running:

From the oldest General in the world to the greatest.

The French inscription under the portrait is, translated:

From the oldest ruler of Europe to the greatest commander of the century.

The supposed sword of Frederick the Great is in the State Capitol at Albany.

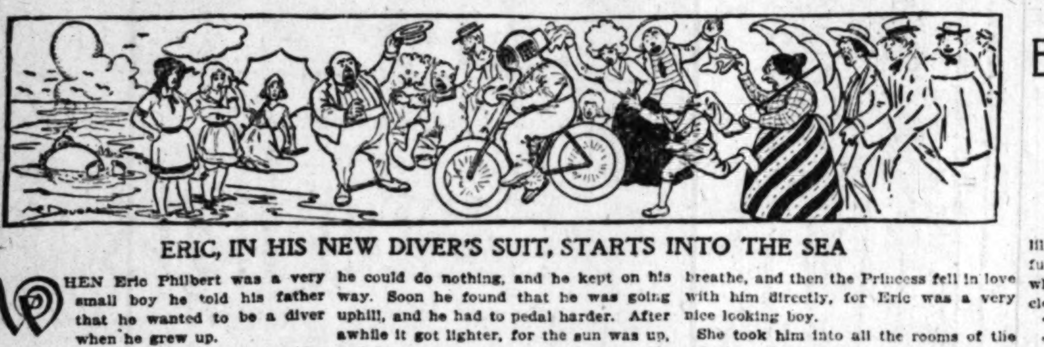
GOOD STORIES FOR CHILDREN—By Walt McDougall



ERIC, IN HIS NEW DIVER'S SUIT, STARTS INTO THE SEA

Eric Philbert Invents a Diver's Suit Which Enables Him to Discover Mermaid Kingdom Down at the Bottom of the Sea. His Wonderful Adventures

WHEN Eric Philbert was a very small boy he told his father that he wanted to be a diver when he grew up.

This amused his parents, for Eric had never seen a diver, as he lived far from any harbor or other water where divers were employed. But he had seen pictures of them with their great copper helmets and funny suits, and ropes for hoisting them out of the sea, and tubes to pump air down to them. As he grew older he thought much about them and studied everything he could find regarding their work.

This study led him to invent a new sort of helmet which would make fresh air for the diver. A small box was fastened at the back of the head-piece in which was a mixture of oxygen and hydrogen, and an automatic device kept forcing the air made of the two gases into the helmet, so that no air-tube was needed, and a man could stay down under water all day instead of coming up every little while for a rest from the pressure of the water, as the air the man used in the helmet would inflate his rubber suit and ease the water pressure so that he did not feel it at all.

When he had his patent diving suit completed he went to a great harbor by the sea and showed it to ship owners and the naval officers, who thought it the very greatest thing they had ever seen, and told him his fortune was made. He was delighted at this, but he was even more pleased at having a chance to use his invention.

In a New World

He put on his diving suit the next day and went into the sea. A great crowd of people were gathered on the beach, who cheered him as he entered the surf, and that was the last he heard of human voices for a time, for as the sound died away in the roar of the sea he entered a new world, the submarine world, which is known only to the diver, and very little known at that.

He was well provided with both food and water, as he intended to go a long distance into the ocean and find out all about the bottom of the sea. He took along an electric light and a camera, for he wanted to get many pictures of the queer things he expected to see down there. The sea bottom slanted away very gradually, and was as smooth as a floor. Great drumfish and cod and sheepshead swam up to him and stared at the big glass eyes of his helmet, probably thinking that Eric was a new kind of a fish, and the crabs and lobsters nibbled at his leaden-soled feet as he walked along. Once in a while he would come to a great mass of seaweed like a green field, growing higher than his head, and he would turn aside and travel far to pass around it, but as he got deeper the ocean floor was free of weed, except in small spots.

It grew darker and darker as he proceeded, until the sunlight seemed to come through a thick fog, although it was still daylight, for the shadows of the great fishes swimming above him swept along the bottom as the cloud shadows do along the fields on the land.

Finding the bottom of the sea so level and smooth, Eric conceived a new idea, and, turning, retraced his steps to the shore.

Many of the people who had expected him to fail and return soon were waiting there yet, and they laughed when he walked out all dripping. But Eric also laughed and went to a bicycle store, where he bought a wheel and came back on it.

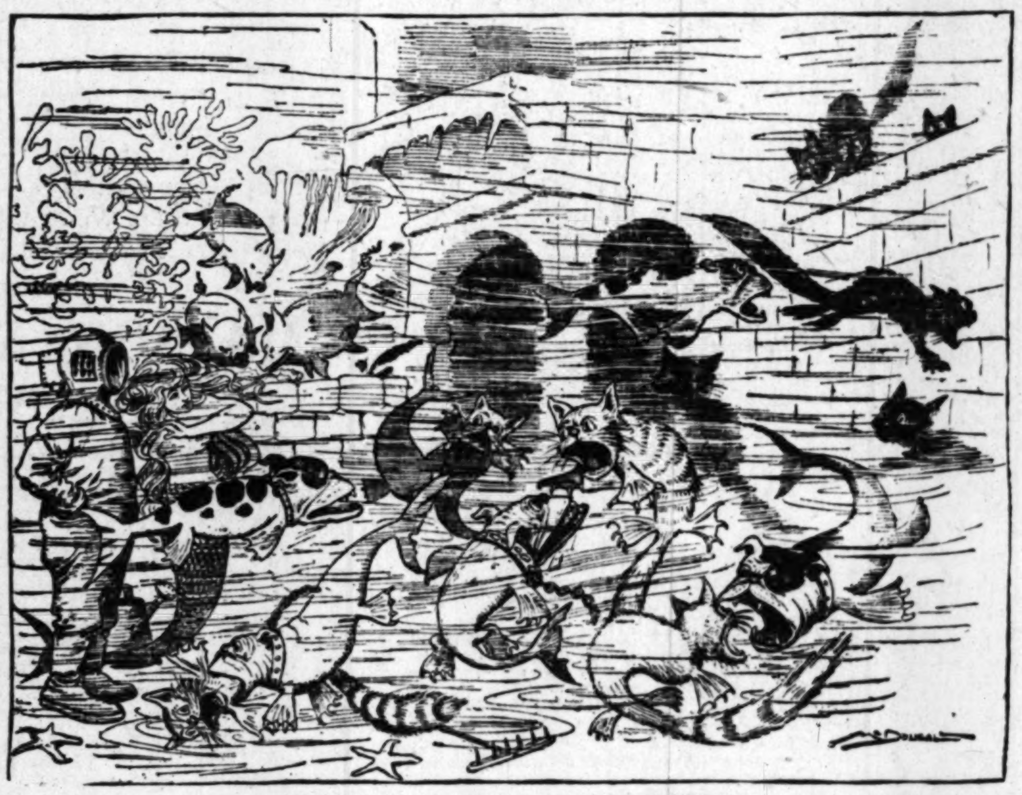
Sea-Moss for a Bed

He rode right into the surf again and all the people cheered. This time he traveled so fast that in a few minutes he was far from shore and deep in the ocean, going along like a streak, while all the fishes darted away in terror before him. Soon it grew so dark that he had to light his electric lamp, which sent gleaming rays into the gloom ahead for a great distance, but everywhere else it was as black as coal. When he had ridden for seven or eight hours he got off and laid himself down upon a bed of sea moss, where he slept until he felt quite rested, for as day and night were all the same down there, he didn't bother about it being still far earlier than he had ever got up before.

He ate his breakfast and then mounted his wheel. Riding as fast as he could—for he wished to get way down into the sea before his provisions gave out—he went on, and, as it was all down hill, he did go very fast—faster than he had ever gone before. Once in a while he could see looming up ahead a great dark mass, which would turn out to be some sunken ship all encrusted with shells and seaweed, but he didn't stop to examine any of them.

It was while he was turning aside from one of these, however, that he saw the first mermaid. She was swimming slowly along when Eric approached, and he had a good view of her, but the instant she saw him she darted away in affright. Later he saw another, and then a couple of mermen, with long green whiskers and hair. They did not see him, and he got very near to them before they were aware of his approach. When they did see him they fled in great alarm, for, of course, he didn't look like anything they had ever seen before.

Eric was much disappointed, for he wanted to speak to them, but, of course, he could do nothing, and he kept on his way. Soon he found that he was going uphill, and he had to pedal harder. After awhile it got lighter, for the sun was up, and he was nearer to the surface. He began to see strange sea flowers and new kinds of brightly-colored fishes all about him, and when it really got full daylight he found that he was in an entirely different sort of sea bottom, where the ground was all cultivated as on land, and enclosed with fences made of many-colored shells. He wondered who had done all this, and kept his eyes open to see if there were any people about. Then suddenly he saw, on a little hill ahead of him, a small house, with its doorway open. He rode to it and looked in. There was nobody within, and it certainly seemed as if it had been long ago forsaken, as the walls were covered with moss and shells, while eels and starfish and clams were all about. He went on, and soon espied another and a much larger house, up to which he rode slowly.



THE FIGHT IN THE PRINCESS' GARDEN

Just as he reached it, out came a beautiful mermaid, whose golden hair swept about her form like a ruddy mist. Her deep blue eyes, as blue as the sea itself, opened wide in mingled fear and astonishment as she stopped and stared at him. She was too frightened to run away, and Eric, jumping quickly from his bicycle, took her hand and said:

"Don't be frightened, my pretty mermaid. I will not hurt you. I am only a boy, and I have just come to see what's down here in the ocean."

The mermaid, who was only a child, trembled a little, but she tried to smile as she looked into the helmet and saw that he was like a merboy, and not some horrid sea monster come to devour her, for there are many such in the deep ocean.

"Do you live here?" asked Eric, looking around at the pretty garden that spread all about the beautiful house that was built of red and white coral.

"Yes," the little mermaid replied: "I am the daughter of the Mer-King, and this is our palace. My father is out hunting now, but my mother, the Queen, is at home. Will you come in and see her?"

"I should be delighted," replied Eric, for of course he wanted to see the inside of a merman's house.

She led him in and called the Queen. The interior of the palace was even more beautiful than the outside, for its walls were all inlaid with great pearls that gleamed like white stars. Some of them were as big as eggs, and Eric wondered what they might be worth, for he had never heard of such pearls. Here and there a great diamond, a sapphire, or an emerald shone out among the white pearls, or an immense opal burned like a fiery eye, lighting up the soft shadows. Gold chairs and tables stood about, in fact, everything was of gold in the whole palace, and all was so splendid that it took the boy's breath away.

The Queen soon came, and she, too, was frightened at first to see him, but the little Princess Undine soon banished her mother's alarm. The Queen was a very large, handsome merwoman indeed, and she welcomed Eric quite cordially.

The strange thing about this mer-king's palace was the queer fact that inside of the house there was no water. After you had passed the open doorway it was filled with air, just like a house on land, and this puzzled Eric hugely until the Princess said that the house was kept supplied with nice fresh air by multitudes of blow-fishes, which were continually going up to the surface, filling themselves with air and bringing it below. He could see them from the windows hurrying up and down, those ascending being thin and fish-like, while those descending looked exactly like balloons about to burst. He removed his great copper helmet when he found there was plenty of air to breathe, and then the Princess fell in love with him directly, for Eric was a very nice looking boy.

She took him into all the rooms of the palace and showed him the wonderful treasures with which it was filled. There were strangely-shaped pearls that looked like animals or birds, huge fans of red coral, priceless and beautiful rare shells, all sorts of things that came from the countless ships that for thousands of years have been sinking to the bottom of the sea and collected by generations of mermen—gold from old Sanish galleons, weapons from Vikings' dreki (or dragons, as their ships were called), and from Greek or Roman triremes or ancient Egyptian ships; golden vases out of wrecked Phoenician galleys and modern things from vessels of to-day, things that the mermen didn't understand, but which, because they were strange, they treasured, such as clocks, opera glasses, tomato cans, trumpets, telescopes, coffee pots, compasses and the like.

He Meets he King

While they were thus engaged the King came home and was very much pleased to see Eric. He was familiar with the appearance of men, having often gone to the surface of the sea and watched the fishermen or sailors on ships, but he had always been rather afraid of them, as all mermen are. Eric was delighted with all that he saw, and when the King asked him to remain with them he readily agreed. He found that the fishtail with which these people are provided, and which you have seen in all pictures of mermaids, was only a sort of outside dress, and that it was always removed when indoors, so that they looked just like human beings, with legs exactly like ours. Many visitors came to see the boy, and for days the palace was filled with curious mer-folk, some of them coming on great sea coaches drawn by dozens of sea horses, from far around on the other side of the world. They asked all manner of questions about the people on land, and some of them even said they would like to accept Eric's invitation and visit him on shore some day.

Undine took him out to see her garden, where she spent most of her time. It was all laid out with every kind of sea plant you ever heard of, and lots that nobody on land knows about. There were rows of sea-cucumbers almost ripe, and sea-pickles ready for pickling, great flaming beds of sea-anemones of all colors, sea-lilies by the hundred, and many a beautiful flower that Eric did not recognize; while sea-butterflies hovered over them in clouds.

"It is a lovely garden," said Eric.

"Yes," the Princess replied. "It would be perfect if it were not for the seaweeds. It keeps me busy fighting them. They grow so much faster than the flowers. Then, too, I have trouble with the sea-pigs that will persist in coming in and rooting up all my best plants."

"Why not keep a big dogfish chained up near the wall, or several of them?" asked Eric.

"That's a grand idea!" she replied. "I will ask father to lend me one, for he has a whole kennel of them which he keeps for hunting the sea-wolves in the coral forest."

They went indoors to ask for the dogfish. The King was sitting on his throne of coral, listening to the complaint of a merman whose oyster bed had been slept in by somebody, and was all mussed up. The King called in his special policeman, who wore a big starfish as a badge, and told him to find the merman who had gone to sleep in another's oyster bed with his sea boots on. Then he listened to his daughter's request, and told her to go to the kennels and pick out all the dogfish she wanted, but he said she would have to feed them herself.

They went and got ten of them and chained them to the sea wall of the garden, but when she was feeding them a whole flock of half-wild catfish came pouring over, and they went for the dog biscuits, and there was a terrific fight, I tell you!

You could have heard the squalling and barking for seven miles, and the way the fur and scales flew was a sight! The water was full of pieces of catfish and dogfish for several acres, but the dogs won.

While they were fighting, so that no one thought of anything else, the old and foxy sea pigs stole into the back garden and just ate a whole cartload of sea cabbages and rooted up half the sea plum orchard. It was only when a little sea urchin, who sold newspapers, cried out that the pigs were discovered and driven away. To reward the sea urchin the King bought every copy of The Deep Sea Soundings, which was the name of the paper he sold.

The next day they all went hunting, mounted on splendid sea horses that went like the wind. The dogfish were let loose, and before long had roused a sea lion which had captured a sea cow and was eating it in a little grove of seaweed. The King promptly galloped up, and with one blow of his swordfish blade laid him out. Then they hunted for sea wolves until dark, chasing them over hills and down valleys for miles, while the water rang with howls and barks. Eric told the King that he had seen barks on the sea, but had never heard them before under water.

In the evening they returned home, lighted all the way by great fishes who were like glow-worms, only immensely larger, for the deep sea is filled with such, which really light up the darkest places like so many big electric lamps. In the palace itself at night they kept in glass bowls many sunfish and moonfish to light the rooms, for the other fish were far too big and fierce to keep indoors.

The household catfish used to dip into the bowls and catch the others when they had a chance, just as land cats will.

Life was so pleasant down there in Merland that Eric forgot all about time, and stayed and stayed, for he loved the little Princess as well as she loved him. He helped her in the garden, went with her to drive home the sea cows in the evening, when the flying fish were swiftly flying home in great flocks to roost under the eaves of the palaces in the nests of white, pearly mud; he bossed the sawfish as they sawed the firewood every morning; he dug holes to plant the bean poles for the young sea beans; gathered posies of all the wondrous flowers for the Queen; taught the King's drummers new tunes to play on the resounding drumfish; helped in the shearing of the sheepshead in the autumn; gathered pearls and coral; visited the ancient wrecks strewn upon the ocean bottom, and collected curious treasure; explored the deep, dark caves with his electric lamp to their very depths; hunted the sea otter and the sea tiger; fished for sharks from the sea bottom; speared great lobsters, and in a hundred other ways enjoyed his life down beneath the waves.

THE PRINCESS WAS THE STAR ATTRACTION IN PYKER'S MUSEUM

So in this manner several years passed, and everybody had forgotten the boy who had gone to sea in a diving suit. He was supposed to have been drowned, of course. Eric had married the sea king's daughter and was living happily down there, when one day as he was standing outside of the house in his diving suit a great anchor came sweeping along, and before he could dodge aside it had caught in his strong clothing and carried him upward.

The anchor was being hauled up by the crew of the brigantine Egg Plant, of Syracuse, New York, and he was pulled aboard and his helmet removed by the most astonished lot of sailors that ever ate hardtack. He told them to let him return to his dear little wife, but, of course, they thought him crazy and would not allow him to go overboard again. When he told them his story they would not believe him, and Captain Sparrowgrass said that he would lock him up if he kept repeating such a silly yarn.

In Exile

So he was taken away to New Zealand on the Egg Plant, and did not get home for more than a year. His people were amazed to see him alive, but they, too, considered him insane, and after awhile he stopped talking about his submarine life and adventures, but his heart yearned for his mermaid wife constantly. He would go to the seashore and sit there gazing upon the waves, vainly hoping that she would appear, and he would weep when night came and he was compelled to return home.

So two long years passed, during which time his folks watched him so carefully that he couldn't get another diving suit and return to his wife. But meanwhile the Princess Undine, who had caught a glimpse of her husband being carried away and had tried to get into her fish-tail swimming arrangement, but could not do it in time, had been seeking for him far and wide. In every sea from the Atlantic to the Pacific she had sought him, but as she knew nothing about the land she never went out of the water at all.

Finally a distant cousin advised her to go up the many rivers of the land Eric had come from and seek him there. So one day she came into the harbor of the big city where Eric lived, [illegible] disheartened, she looked out [illegible] at all the great buildings. Well, it was soon over. When [illegible] inside and saw Undine in the [illegible] she had leaped into his arms [illegible] interfered. Then Eric got a cab and [illegible] wife home.

Now they live half the year [illegible] and the other half in their [illegible] villa. All of the mer-folks [illegible] them frequently, and it is no [illegible] sight to see mermaids in the [illegible] hardly any one notices the [illegible] strangers.

If you would like to see one [illegible] have to go there and you'll [illegible] across either a merman or a [illegible] very first hour, but you will [illegible] them, because, unlike the [illegible] Mother Goose, they have left [illegible] behind them.

HUMAN BEINGS WHO HAVE HORNS AND T

Men and women endowed with horns are not by any means unknown in the world we live in to-day.

A short time ago Surgeon Lamprey, of the army medical staff, met with and studied three horned men in Africa, each having a horn on either side of his nose.

"While serving on the Gold Coast," said he, "I had opportunities of making drawings of these people. The first horned man I had an opportunity of observing was a Fantee named Cofea, aged about 32 years, from the little village of Amaquanta, in Wasau territory.

"The second horned man was a long-faced youth, aged about 18, named Quassie Jabin, from the Gamin territory, and not a kinsman of the first one.

"From a statement made by him through a Fantee interpreter, I gathered that this hornlike growth had been in existence as long as he could remember.

"The third case was that of Cudjo Danso, aged about 20. He stated through an interpreter that so far as he was aware this horn-like knob had grown of itself. It certainly had grown larger as he had grown older. It gave him no inconvenience. He could see and smell perfectly."

Hundreds of cases more remarkable have recently been collected in an interesting report by Drs. George Gould and Walter Pyle, both well-known pathologists.

"Human horns," say they, "are far more frequent than ordinarily supposed. Nearly all the older writers cite examples. Many mention horns on the head.

"In the ancient times horns were symbolical of wisdom and power. Michael Angelo, in his famous sculpture of Moses, has given the patriarch a pair of horns."

There is a greater frequency of horns among women than among men, according to these authorities.

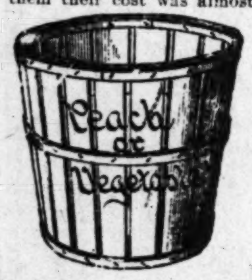
Two Billions of Baskets per Year.

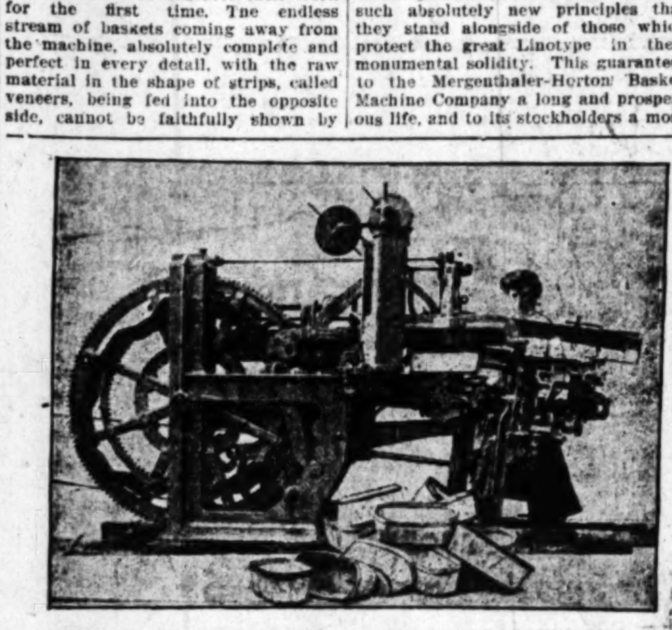
Few people understand how great an industry the making of baskets for our great fruit crops has become, or how much effort the getting together of the enormous number of baskets every year involves. When you take into account that it requires over TWO BILLION BASKETS to hold and market the grapes and berries and peaches of this country, the importance of the saving of labor in connection with the manufacture of baskets becomes instantly plain. This vast number of new baskets is now required every year for our fruit, and the demand is constantly increasing as fruit-growing projects multiply. In many sections of our country, whole trainloads of berries and grapes have gone to waste because baskets could not be promptly secured, or when it was possible to secure them their cost was almost prohibitive because of the hand-labor involved in the manufacture. The California fields have as yet been but partially opened up because of the great cost of securing baskets to move the crop across the continent, and yet the demand for fruits of all kinds is growing for every purpose.



Never was there a greater need than that now supplied by these machines for multiplying baskets without limit and bringing them easily and quickly to the place where they are needed. Never was there a more perfect accomplishment than that now shown in the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machines, which work with almost human ingenuity and with a precision characteristic of the mechanical exactness of the inventor's mind.

The picture in this article shows the machine in operation, and the illustrations of the product of the machines in all their everyday appearance show the work of the inventor and the work of his machine.

It is difficult by a photograph to give any adequate idea of the impression these machines create upon the mind of one who observes their work for the first time. The endless stream of baskets coming away from the machine, absolutely complete and perfect in every detail, with the raw material in the shape of strips, called veneers, being fed into the opposite side, cannot be faithfully shown by any photograph; but the operation of the machine is absolutely fascinating because the work comes from it completed, and, from a mechanical and commercial standpoint, beautiful.



MERGENTHALER-HORTON GRAPE BASKET MACHINE IN OPERATION.

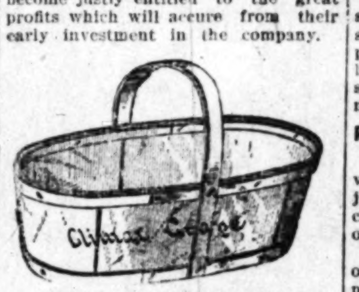
Commission merchants who have handled fruit in baskets made by these machines now demand that their shippers pack in such baskets instead of the hand-made. This, of course, has been, and still is, for the most part, an impossibility, since there are only about forty machines manufactured and in operation; but with the present far-reaching plans of the ten million dollar company that has undertaken to develop this great commercial and manufacturing enterprise, the use of the machine basket will soon become universal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

TWO MILLIONS SAVED.

Some idea of the prospects of this company may be gathered from the fact that the cost of making the present yearly supply of baskets will be reduced fully TWO MILLIONS of dollars for labor alone. Even if the company succeeds in doing no more for its stockholders than dividing up as profit the saving they effect in labor, the dividends will be enormous; but when it is taken into account that this company will entirely control the basket-making industry and will make for those who hold its stock all the money now made by the many small basket concerns, the possibilities of the company in the way of income become almost fabulous.

Looking into the strength of the patents upon which the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machines are made, one finds them almost without precedent in breadth and fundamental value. No more secure basis for great business success can there be than that enjoyed by the owners of these patents. Law firms of national repute have passed on the patents and find them based on such absolutely new principles that they stand alongside of those which protect the great Linotype in their monumental solidity. This guarantees to the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company a long and prosperous life, and to its stockholders a most attractive and satisfying return for investment.

For the purpose of manufacturing and equipping a large number of these machines for the manufacture of grape baskets, berry baskets, peach baskets, and California fruit baskets, the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company will for a limited time dispose of a limited amount of their stock at less than par, so that every person may, if he or she acts promptly, secure an investment which is certain to bring them great returns. Under this plan, and for the purpose stated, as well as for the purpose of equipping plants in various parts of the country, the company will retain among its own original holders a large number of enthusiastic men and women who have become justly entitled to the great profits which will accrue from their early investment in the company.



THE PEOPLE'S COMPANY.

In these respects the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company differs from other large commercial and industrial enterprises which divide their capitalization with some trust company or some so-called "underwriting syndicate," which trust company or syndicate makes an enormous profit by furnishing the needed sums for working capital, and then, after the company so floated is in working order, sells its stock to the public at a value which will bring as returns only fair interest on the investment.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

The past year's demands for fruit baskets amounted to over TWO BILLION BASKETS, worth at wholesale over ELEVEN MILLION DOLLARS.

These baskets were all made by hand. The saving in labor by the use of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machines amounts to more than TWO MILLION DOLLARS ANNUALLY.

The profits of the manufacturers of these hand-labor baskets amounted to $1,387,000.

This gives earnings for the Company of OVER THREE MILLION THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, OR OVER THIRTY-THREE PER CENT. ON THE ENTIRE CAPITAL ON THE PRESENT VOLUME OF BUSINESS, and the demand for fruit baskets of all kinds is increasing at the rate of 150,000,000 baskets per year.

In order to make it possible for those of small capital to participate in the profits accruing from the development of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Comany, the par value of shares is placed at one dollar and the present offering is made at less than par, no subscription taken for less than fifty shares, and the right reserved to suspend the sale of stock whenever the sales have produced sufficient for the needs of manufacture and equipment.

The great profits which accrue to those who foster enterprises at the right stage is shown by the colossal fortunes made out of the Linotype, the Cotton Gin, the Sewing Machine, the Telephone, and the many remarkable money earners based on fundamental and indisputable patent rights on an article or a process accomplishing a legitimate mission in the commercial and industrial world. Out of nearly every big success today some few men have made great fortunes.

It is the purpose of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company to divide their profits among the many instead of the few, and provide against the control of the company getting into the hands of a "syndicate" by making every share of the stock a voting share and giving to every investor, no matter how small, the profit to which he is entitled.

The Company has no preferred stock, no bonds, and no debts; all its shares are common shares, and every person investing at the present price becomes part of the great popular syndicate which is furnishing the money for this great enterprise.

Regulates Supply and Shipment of Fruit.

It is impossible to market the vast volume of fruit without the baskets, just as it is impossible to market the country's great production of oil without Standard pipe lines.

And as the Standard Oil Company owns and reaps the profits from all the pipe lines, so the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company, owning all the basket machines and operating them itself, will exercise the same control over the fruit markets of the country.

Wonderful Capacity of the Machines.

There has been ample demonstration, too, of the ability of these machines to do all that is claimed for them. A number of the basket machines have been in operation for over a year at the factory of Robison & Co., at Painesville, Ohio, and this factory, because of its ability to turn out baskets cheaper than any of the hand mills, and of a better grade, has been taxed to its fullest capacity. Persons who have contemplated the purchase of considerable blocks of stock have visited Painesville for the purpose of seeing the machines in operation.

The sight of the machines in full operation has been in every instance an irrefutable argument, and has made many staunch friends for the Company.

One thousand of these machines will manufacture the entire number of baskets for grapes, berries, and other fruits that are annually demanded in the United States.

Not One Machine Leased or Sold.

Not one machine will be sold to any one else or put out on royalty, as it is the purpose of the Company to fully control the fruit basket industry. Its batteries of machines will be located at different points in the richest fruit-growing territories.

No other machine has ever been made for the manufacture of fruit baskets, and the patents controlled by this Company are so fundamental and basic in character that any attempt to construct such a machine must involve infringements which will be immediately stopped by injunction.

it has the power behind it to earn and pay big dividends, thus giving it a constantly increasing value.

Just such an opportunity is offered to you NOW in a purchase of the shares of the MERGENTHALER-HORTON BASKET MACHINE COMPANY. In a year or so these same shares, which can be bought today for 50 cents, par value one dollar, will undoubtedly be in universal demand at prices far beyond par, because the desire to secure the heavy dividends which this company will be enabled to pay will cause the stock to be eagerly sought for, and the price therefore must work higher and higher.

FRUIT SEASON IS CONTINUOUS.

The grape, fruit, and berry seasons of our country are not confined to a few weeks.

The country is so vast and the transportation facilities so excellent now for all kinds of fruit, that the fields of California and Georgia, of Florida and Michigan, of Arkansas and Maine, of Louisiana and Canada, to say nothing of the vast fields of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Ohio, Indiana and Texas, contribute their product to the markets of our great cities during nearly the whole year.

When one section begins to ease down the volume of its delivery, another section starts up, a stream of fruit is constantly moving from the fields to the markets and to the preserving factories, and all of this fruit is now packed in BASKETS MADE BY HAND.

Is it not plain that with such equipment for a foundation the future of such a company is merely a matter of development?

PRESENT PRICE 50 CENTS PER SHARE

Par Value $1. Full paid and non-assessable.

In justice to earlier shareholders, and to avoid the over-subscription which occurred on a previous allotment of the stock, the right is reserved to reject any subscription at 50 cents at the discretion of the officers of the company.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions to the stock of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Machine Company are received at the office of the company, Room 507, Examiner Building, S. F. All checks or money orders should be drawn to the order of Charles R. Barlow, Treasurer. Subscriptions may be sent by mail or made at personal call, and any information desired will be promptly furnished on request.

Extract from a Description of the Mergenthaler-Horton Machines, Made by a Reporter Who Visited the Factory of the Robison Basket Co., at Painesville, Ohio, Where all Visitors are Welcomed.

"IN MY OPINION AND THAT OF OTHERS, THE LINOTYPE IS A SECONDARY MACHINE AS A MECHANICAL PROPOSITION TO THE HORTON BASKET MACHINE.

"FIFTY-ONE POSITIVE MOVEMENTS, MADE WITH THE ACCURACY OF A CHRONOMETER, ALL WITHIN SIX SECONDS OF TIME, and all to turn out a simple little grape basket.

"The floor space taken up by the machine may be sixty inches by thirty inches. Into the perpendicular receiver the girl operator piles a hundred basket bottoms, and into the other receivers she piles sides and binding strips. The machine loaded with stock, the lever is pulled, and, presto, a bottom is transferred from under the pile and carried to the form. It has hardly reached the form before a side is in place, which, in turn, is met by the inside and outside top strip, and the bottom strip, all of which are met with the simultaneously self-made staples, securing the pieces as the basket is made up. Side after side is added, each one fitting accurately to its place and being at once clinched home by the staples. All these movements are going on, and as surely as the second hand of your watch gets through the sixth second a completed basket drops upon the floor."

"More to oblige him than for any other reason, I agreed to the exchange, and put the bills in an old-fashioned pocketbook. It was a pretty good wad, but I put it in my inside breast pocket and took chances on getting held up. It turned out to be a very desperate chance that prevented the highwaymen from getting it.

HALT! HANDS UP!

"The stage was full of passengers, four of whom were ladies, and we had proceeded about half way to Globe when the hold-up took place. It was near midnight, and the night was very dark. Most of the passengers, including myself, were dozing, when we were all awakened by the sharp command, 'Halt! Hands up!'

"At the same time there came the report of a shotgun, and then a regular fusillade. The brave messenger fired at the bandits before the driver could bring his team to a stop. The robbers then let loose, and the messenger fell in the boot of the stage with a bullet in his brain. The driver got a ball in the thigh, which shattered the bone near the hip and made him helpless. One bullet cut the strap which formed my back-rest and grazed the surface of the duck coat that I wore, just along the small of my back. Other bullets passed through the coach, but luckily none of the passengers were hit.

"The six horses, which were excellently trained, swung around when the shooting commenced and stood perfectly still while it lasted and until the robbers had completed their work. The women in the stage went into hysterics from fright, and we men were also pretty badly rattled. I had a revolver and some of the other passengers were also armed, but it was useless for us to try to resist, as, cooped up as we were, we could not see anyone to shoot at, and if we had opened fire, the bandits from their cover would simply have pumped lead into that old stage coach until everybody in it was dead.

"My first thought was about my money. I got out my fat wallet while the shooting was yet in progress and was about to throw it out on the ground, in the hope that the robbers would not be able to find it in the dark. But it seemed doubtful whether, in that event, I would ever be able to recover it myself. Another plan flashed through my mind. I had on a big pair of top boots that I brought with me from the mines in Idaho. They came above the knees and were buckled around the legs with straps. In a second I had one boot leg unstrapped; then I shoved the pocketbook down into it and by raising my heel I got it under my foot. The boot was then drawn on tight again and buckled up. All this took but a few seconds.

THE LOOT.

"By this time the bandits had approached the stage, and everybody was compelled to dismount and stand up to be searched. They went through everybody's clothes, not excepting the ladies. From one woman they took $1200 and a lot of jewelry. One man yielded up about $3000, besides his watch, jewelry and revolver, and so on through the whole party. It was a prosperous-looking crowd, and the robbers made a clean sweep until they came to me. They went through my pockets, too, and ran their hands down into my boot legs, almost touching that precious wallet under my heel. That was a moment of supreme anxiety for me, but all they got from me was three dobie dollars, a ticket to Los Angeles, a cheap silver watch, a knife and big navy revolver. Evidently I was the poorest person in the crowd. The man who searched me felt sorry for me.

"'This chap's a workingman. Look at his hands, and he's got only three dobie dollars and a ticket to California. It's a shame to rob a poor devil like him. Let's give him back his dobies, so he can eat till he finds another job,' said the sympathetic robber. This was satisfactory to the rest of the gang, so they handed me back everything, including my gun, which they did not even take the trouble to unload. I could have shot one or two of them on the spot, but that would have done no good, as there were too many of them, and they kept us pretty well covered with their guns all the time. The $3000 that I was standing on, and the lives of the whole party were safer by not attempting any resistance, seeing that they had us at a disadvantage.

"After they had searched all the passengers, they took the Wells-Fargo treasure box and broke it open, rifling it of its contents. The entire robbery must have netted them about $12,000, two-thirds of which was taken from the passengers. I never heard of any of the gang being caught, or any of the stolen money being recovered.

"It was a sorry crowd that the bandits left there on that lonely road seventeen miles from Globe, the nearest stage station. The express messenger lay dead in the boot of the stage. The driver of the stage lay beside him groaning with pain, as his thigh was so badly shattered he could not sit up. I was the only man in the crowd that was not out of luck, and also the only one that had ever driven a six-horse team. I volunteered to drive if some one would show me the way. There was one old miner in the party who had been over the road often before, so he got up on the front seat with me and acted as guide while I handled the reins.

"We reached Globe about daylight without any further mishap, but such a night I hope never again to have to endure. The poor fellow with the broken thigh shrieked with pain at every jolt, and the women inside the coach sobbed hysterically all the way, while the men cussed, and with the dead messenger lying stiff and stark at my feet, you can bet that I was not feeling very good, even if I did save all my money.

SET UP THE BREAKFAST.

"When we got to Globe, I set up the breakfast for the whole crowd, otherwise they would have gone hungry, as not one of them had so much as the price of a meal left.

"Yes, I was lucky, but it was my rough clothes and hands calloused from hard work in the mines that saved my money. A fellow never loses anything by wearing the marks of honest toil."

"Lifting the King."

One of the picturesque English coronation ceremonies which have been discontinued is that of lifting the King. In the old days the monarch always slept at the palace of Westminster on the night before the coronation. The regalia, which are still, technically speaking, in the dean and chapter of Westminster, were brought to them to Westminster Hall in preparation for the ceremony. These were arranged on a long table, the crown, the scepter, the spurs, and so on. The King, when he descended from the palace to Westminster Hall, was lifted by his nobles onto a marble chair, by the way, which perished in the ruins of the houses of Parliament when they were burned sixty or seventy years ago.

The lifting of the King into this chair was a survival of the old Saxon custom of carrying the King on his shield. The custom survived up to the time of the coronation of George IV. When the monarch was seated in the chair he at once directed by pointing his finger which of his nobles should carry the various parts of the regalia to the abbey, and the procession began.—[London Tattler.

MY FRIEND THE TRAMP.

BY "IAN MACLAREN."

Author of "The Bonnie Brier Bush," etc.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

One of the memorable and pitiable sights of the West, as the traveler journeys across the prairies, is the little group of Indians hanging round the lonely railway station. They are not dangerous now, nor are they dignified; they are harmless, poor, abject, shiftless, ready to beg or ready to steal, or to do anything else except work, and the one possession of the past which they still retain is the inventive and instinctive cunning of the savage, who can read the faintest sign like a written language, and knows the surest way of capturing his prey. One never forgets the squalid figure with some remains of former grandeur in his dress, and the gulf between us and this being of another race, unchanged amid the modern civilization. And then one comes home and suddenly recognizes our savages at our own doors.

Our savage tramps along our country roads, and loafs along our busy streets, he stops us with his whine when no policeman is near, and presents himself upon our doorstep, and when he is a master of his business will make his way into our house. He has his own dress combining many styles, and various periods, though reduced to a harmony by his vagabond personality. He has his own language, which is unintelligible to strangers, and a complete system of communication by pictures. He marries and lives and dies outside civilization, sharing neither our habits nor our ideas, nor our labors, nor our religion, and the one infallible and universal badge of his tribe is that our savage will not work. He will hunger and thirst, he will sweat and suffer, he will go without shelter, and without comfort, he will starve and die, but one thing he will not do, not even to get bread, and that is work; not even for tobacco, his dearest treasure and kindliest support, will he do fifteen minutes' honest labor. The first and last article in his creed, for which he is prepared to be a martyr and which makes him part of a community, is "I believe in idleness." He has in him the blood of generations of nomads, and if taken off the roads and compelled to earn his living would likely die. A general law of compulsory industry would bring the race to an end.

Besides his idleness he has many faults, for he is a liar to the bone, he is a drunkard whenever he can get the chance, he steals in small ways when it is safe, he bullies women if they are alone in a country house, he has not a speaking acquaintance with soap and water, and if he has any virtue it is not of a domestic character. He is ungrateful, treacherous, uncleanly, and vicious, to whom it is really wrong to give food, far more money, and to whom it is barely safe to give the shelter of an outhouse, far less of one's roof. And yet he is an adroit, shrewd, clever, entertaining rascal. He carries the geography of counties in his head down to the minutest details which you can find on no map, knowing every mountain track, and forgotten footpath, every spring where he can get water, and the warmest corner in a wood where he can sleep. He has also another map in his memory of the houses and the people that dwell therein; which he ought to pass by, which it were a sin to neglect, which are worth trying, and which have changed hands. And he is ever carrying on his ordnance survey, and bringing information up to date, and as he and his fellows make a note of their experiences for those who follow after, it may be safely said that no one knows either a country side or its inhabitants better from his point of view than our friend the vagrant.

Perhaps the struggle for existence has quickened his wits beyond those of his race, but at any rate our vagabond is not fettered by that solid and conventional English intellect which persists in doing things as our fathers used to do them, and will not accommodate itself to changing conditions. Our vagabond has certain old lines which he has long practiced and which he is always willing to use, in suitable circumstances, such as the workman out of employment and tramping to another city to get a job because he has not money enough to pay his railway fare, or a convalescent just discharged from hospital, and making his way home to his wife and children, or a high-spirited man too proud to beg, and only anxious for a day's work in some employment which cannot be found within twenty miles. And when he plays any of those roles he is able to assume an air of interesting weariness as if he could not drag one leg after the other, and on occasion will cough with such skill as to suggest galloping consumption, and when he poses as poor (but proud) he only allows the truth to be dragged from him. But when those lines fail and new inventions are needed for new times, he rises to the occasion. If there be a great miner's strike he goes from town to town begging money for his wife and children at home, and explaining the hardships of a miner's life which he has diligently, although superficially learned; and after a war he is a reservist who threw up his profitable job at his country's call, and is now penniless and starving, but still unwaveringly patriotic; and if there be any interest in the sea through recent storm and shipwrecks, he also, this man of many trials and many journeys, has been saved with difficulty from the waves and lost his little all. If he calls upon a priest, he is careful to call him "father," and to pose as a faithful Catholic, and if he be an Irishman, his brogue then becomes a fortune; and if he drops in upon a minister of the Kirk he recalls the good which he got when sitting in the West Kirk of Paisley, and if he be so fortunate as to be really Scots in blood, and therefore acquainted with theology, he will not only deceive that minister, but even the elect themselves, I mean the Caledonian Society. When the vagabond comes upon a home of simple lay piety, he allows it to be understood that he has led a life of feaful wickedness, but is now a genuine penitent, asking only for the means of gaining an honest livelihood. He is fertile in devices and brilliant in execution, without any prejudices against the past or present, but ever bringing forth from his treasury of unabashed falsehood and ingenious impudence, things new and old.

Our savage has also got, what I believe the red Indians have not, an agreeable sense of humor which no doubt is limited by practical details, but is in its way very captivating. What a stroke of delightful irony it was for a pair of our savages to take a long street between them, the man begging down the right-hand side, and the woman the left, while the man told a mournful tale of his wife's death, and asked money to get her a coffin that she might be respectably buried—he being poor (but proud) and a broken-hearted widower—as well as to clothe their two mourning little ones in black for the funeral; and the woman told exactly the same story as she went down the opposite side of the street, except that it was her husband she was burying, and she was poor (but proud) and a broken-hearted widow. They took no notice of one another across the street, and none when they completed their work at the further end, but a few minutes later they were sitting in the same public-house together, both wonderfully comforted and affording a remarkable illustration of the dead burying their dead.

Our vagabond is a superb actor within his own province, and greatly enjoys a triumph in any conflict with the enemy. He was one day singing the "Sweet Bye and Bye" with such a voice and so much unctuous emotion that I lost patience and broke out on him for his laziness and profanity. For a moment he was almost confounded, and then he assumed an air of meek martyrdom suggestive of a good man who had been trying to do his little best for the salvation of his fellow-creatures, and was being persecuted for righteousness sake. This was for the benefit of a simple-minded old gentleman who had been greatly shocked at my remarks, and now, as a rebuke to an ungodly and unsympathetic clergyman, and an encouragement to humble piety, gave the vagabond a shilling. "God bless you," he said with much feeling to the philanthropist, and started again the "Sweet Bye and Bye," but before we parted he tipped me a wink over his victory, charged with inexpressible humor.

When one of the savages honored our humble home by calling one day as an incapacitated member of the Mercantile Marine, and obtained half a crown from my tender-hearted wife, partly through sympathy, but also through alarm, because the suffering sailor proposed to exhibit the sores upon his legs, I knew that the tidings would be carried far and wide throughout the nearest tribe, our local Blackfeet as it were, and that we would be much favored in days to come. So we were, by other sailors, also with sores, by persons who had been greatly helped by my preaching in the years of long ago, by widows full of sorrow and gin, by countrymen stranded helpless in a big unsympathetic city, till our house was little better than a casual ward. Then I took the matter in hand and interviewed the next caller, who had been long out of employment, but had now obtained a job and only wanted the means of living till Monday when he would be independent of everybody. He had spent his last penny the day before on a piece of bread, and had tasted nothing since. "Not even drink?" I ventured to inquire, for by this time the air round me was charged with alcohol, when he replied with severe dignity that he had been a teetotaller since his boyhood. Then I addressed him briefly, but clearly, explaining that the half crown had ben given by mistake, that we were greatly obliged for the visit of his friends, that I had enjoyed his own call, but that it would save a great deal of trouble to both sides if he would only intimate to his fellow-tribesmen and women, when they gathered round the camp fire in the evening, that there was no more spoil to be obtained at our house. He looked at me, and I looked at him, and a smile came over his face. "I'm fly," he said. And then as he went out at the door he turned for a last shot. "Look here, sir, give me a bob and I'll join your church and I'll be an elder in a month." A fellow of infinite jest, and I gave him the shilling, but without conditions.

The humor of our Nomad is always practical, and when it masters him it sweeps all professional hypocrisy before it like a water flood, and reveals the real man. Certainly quite unclothed, but also quite unashamed. He had told his story so artfully, with such care in detail and such conviction in tone, that I did believe for the moment that he was a poor Scot trying to get home by sea to Glasgow, together with his wife and four children; that he had obtained his passage money from the Caledonian Society, and that he only needed a little money for food and such like expenses. This money I gave him somewhat lavishly, and yet not quite without suspicion, and he left full of gratitude and national enthusiasm. Three years later a man got entrance to my study on the grounds of Christianity and nationality, and as soon as he addressed me I thought that I knew his voice. When he explained that he had got his passage to Glasgow from that noble institution, the Caledonian Society, but that as he had a wife and four children . . . I was sure we had met before, and I offered to do the rest of the story myself, which I did with such an accurate memory that he listened with keen appreciation, like a composer to the playing of his own piece, and only once was he astonished. "So I did it twice afore! Well, sir, ye may take my word for it, it's the first mistake I've made in the business." And he departed with the self-conceit of the Scots only slightly chastened.

TRIPS TO BOOKLAND—By Julian Hawthorne

Stockton's Novel, "Kate Bonnet," a Story of Damosels and Blood-Thirsting Pirates

"Kate Bonnet," by Frank Stockton; Appletons.

THERE is one quality in all Mr. Stockton's books which I think is unique in American fiction, or in any other fiction; he may be said to have invented it himself. It is a quality incorporate with his genius.

It is not outwardly conspicuous; I myself had been reading him for years before I detected it. In all the criticisms of his writings which I have seen I cannot recall having seen it mentioned. It is so constant perhaps—so ingrained in the texture, so ubiquitously in evidence, that, like the wood obscured by trees, it escapes observation. It is entirely possible that Mr. Stockton himself has never happened to notice it; one cannot hear the sound of his own voice—or, rather, know the rhythm and manner of his vocal utterance—unless he listens to it in a phonograph; when he does that, he will be surprised. Very likely Mr. Stockton will be surprised when I tell him what this leading quality of his writings is. But as soon as the secret has been revealed he will admit that such is the fact. Let me say at once that it is a fact that does him immense credit; and that in this day of radicalism and departure from old principles he is apt to enjoy the monopoly of it indefinitely.

It is not his humor, of course. That, in its way, is, to be sure, unique and inimitable; it is conspicuous and omnipresent; it is congenital with the humorist, and spontaneous; but it is far indeed from being unnoticed by his readers and reviewers. On the contrary, it is the stock in trade of his reviewers; when they can find nothing else to say of the author, they can always get a paragraph or two out of his humor. It is humor, not wit. It is also humor of a luminous rather than brilliant sort; it does not make you laugh consumedly, like the excruciating drollery of Mark Twain at his best; it is very quiet, and seems to inhere in the subject; you imagine it would be there even without Mr. Stockton to point it out. It blooms out of the situation by a sort of chemical process, just as water appears when you bring together oxygen and hydrogen. It does not seem—such, perhaps, is the art of the writer—to have been deliberately planned and led up to; but events move in such a way that the most singular combinations ensue, and these stir within you the sources of chuckle. If you are reading the story aloud, you may chuckle aloud as you read; but if you are reading to yourself, you feel simply a sensation of interior joy.

Secret of Interest

The sensation is analogous to that which you experience when you learn that somebody has left you a legacy—not a very large legacy, but enough to enable you to do one or two things which otherwise you could not have quite afforded. It kindles in your soul a soft and mellow light, like that which falls through semi-transparent curtains into a room—not like the direct illumination of unstrained sunlight. You become cheerful and secure; you are convinced that this man will do good things to you. It is the furthest imaginable from being a humor tinged with cynicism or bitterness, or even with worldly wisdom. There is not a drop of Trackeray in it. It is, on the contrary, a childlike, naive, innocent humor; simple pleasure and amusing wonder are involved in it. When it deals with terrible situations, like that of the Lady and the Tiger, it still does not produce any terrible emotions; for we feel assured that, for instance, if Mr. Stockton had written the sequel to that fearful legend, he would have made the man go to the right door—the un-tigered door.

He would have done this, because he is too nice a fellow to do the other thing. He will always do it. When we see Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine floating in the fathomless depths of the Pacific, with their black stockings securing them from the sharks, and making their tea for themselves and their guest, we feel not the slightest anxiety about their welfare; we know that the water will not become too chilly, or the waves rise inconveniently high; and that the currents will flow in such a direction as to bring the charming little party safe to shore.

When Mr. Amos Kilbright, his materialization having "set" too hard to be dissolved by the conjurations of the scientists present on that occasion, enters upon his adscititious experiences, we are certain of being agreeably thrilled, but we have no misgivings as to his finally reaching the realization of the hopes which his second life has awakened in him. When the Great War Syndicate undertakes the contract of conquering Europe on behalf of our government we soon perceive that the thing will be accomplished without any disagreeable slaughtering—though perhaps we are hardly prepared to see it done without any casualties at all. And even when, as in the present astounding pirate story of the Caribbean Sea, Blackbeard comes on the scene, and fighting and killing actually take place, it is managed so kindly and deftly that no unpleasant impressions remain on the mind.

We go away filled and gratified, as when we have witnessed a combat on the stage—not that the story is in the least stagy. The atmosphere created by the story teller softens and humanizes everything, just as distance does in real life, enabling us to hear with composure that a thousand persons have been engulfed by an earthquake in, say, Chinese Tartary. We agree that the calamity must have happened; yet, somehow, we do not believe it. No, Mr. Stockton's humor is always soothing and cheering, and we lay down his books with the most fraternal and benevolent feelings towards every person in them, saints and villains alike. But perhaps I have improved my opportunity of enlarging upon Mr. Stockton's humor to the allowable limit.

And I repeat that it is not his humor which is his distinctive quality, though it is distinctive. Neither is it his sweet reasonableness. It is true, no doubt, that no novelist ever was so sweetly reasonable as Mr. Stockton is. He is the severest of logicians; and it is only after a good deal of experience with him that we begin to suspect that it is precisely because he sticks so faithfully to logic that he lands us in such amazing and inconceivable predicaments. Take any actual occurrence in real life, and follow it resolutely out to its logical conclusion, and you will find a paradox and a miracle—an impossibility, in short. Nothing in real life is logical; the chapter of accidents, of inconsistencies, of anomalies, is the whole thing.

Mr. Stockton's world, on the other hand, is logical, and consequently it is marvelous. It completely beguiles you. He leads you on from point to point with that sincere, demure, artless face and speech, never hurrying you, but making quite sure that you understand and admit that things could not be other than as he states them; he never descends to the expedient of writing subjectively, and thus arbitrarily; but keeps always on the objective track, calling upon you at each step to agree that nothing is forced or artificial. Of course you may say that he sometimes starts with a considerable assumption; as when, for example, he assumes that the box containing the negative-gravity machine exists and is in the possession of the inventor. He does not tell us how the machine is made; but why should he do so?—that would be another story; and, besides, you remember that the story is told by the inventor, and that he had come to the conclusion, before he wrote it, that it was inexpedient for mankind that the invention should be made known.

Everything is sweetly reasonable; and this is assured by the circumstance that all the stories are concerned with material phenomena, and with the world as it is; Mr. Stockton is not a theorizer, reformer, apostle, socialist, or come-outer of any sort; and it is stories that attempt to prove a philosophical thesis by fictional means that always tell lies and are illogical. Mr. Stockton has nothing in the way of a propaganda up his sleeve; he does not preach or convert or instill views; he does but tell you, in the plainest and most assuming manner, certain curious facts that have come to his knowledge. He changes nothing, creates nothing; he does but candidly and guilelessly investigate. We may concede that the investigations of no one else would lead to the same conclusions; but then no one else is quite so logical and sweetly reasonable as Mr. Stockton is.

Well, then, the distinctive quality of Mr. Stockton is his conjugal sentiment. I prefer to follow Swedenborg in this instance and say his conjugial sentiment; conjugal is hard, and means a yoking together; conjugial is more humanely derived from the Latin conjungere—to unite. Mr. Stockton, then, is essentially conjugial, and his quality naturally manifests itself in all his writings. There is a feeling of marriage all through his stories. There are young unmarried folks; but they are contemplating marriage, and uniformly achieve it; and there is always a number of other important characters who are husbands and wives, and exercise a connubial influence over events. And it is wonderful, the composure, the calmness, the conviction of security and ultimate well-being that this prominence of the conjugial relation exercises over the reader's mind. Persons who are properly married are all right; there can be no misgivings about them. When a man is constantly referring, explicitly or tacitly, to his wife, and she to her husband, we know just where to place them; there is no ambiguity about them, or haunting doubt. They are respectable in the best sense of the word; they may have no connection with society, they may be humble and even illiterate; but married and respectable they invincibly are, and in that atmosphere nothing can go very far wrong.

A salient feature in most of Mr. Stockton's stories is the long, confidential chats between a husband and his wife; they talk over the matter, argue about it, come to an agreement upon it; and the strength of this union of feeling in them makes itself felt all through the tale. No evil can prevail against a united and affectionate and mutually trustful husband and wife. Under their protection the fugitive is safe, the danger is averted, the problems are solved. They form a wholesome and vigorous pith or core or centre of safety and peace within whatever whirlwind may be conjured up to terrify us; all else is transient and untrustworthy and chimerical; but a married pair are everlastingly real and potent for good, and we may tie up to them and dismiss all anxieties. Their well-being is contagious. Throughout whatever storms, their anchor holds.

If you have never detected this element in Mr. Stockton's books, I cannot give you better counsel than to read them all over again, and note how this sweet, strong, conjugial fragrance brings everything into accord, and bestows a durable worth upon what might often, otherwise, be a slight matter. It will help his books to last when many which contain more cleverness and brilliance are forgotten; they are human to the marrow.

The moment a person establishes a theory, the very next thing to happen is the apparition of a violent exception to it. As a sequel to the above remarks, accordingly, I am now constrained to confess that there are no married couples in "Kate Bonnet." But this is true only in the genuine conjugial sense; there is a married couple, but they are not living together—the story begins with their separating—and the wife is the man's second choice, and a singularly bad one. If Captain—or Major—Bonnet, the eponymous pirate of the tale, had stayed content with one marriage, he would likely never have embraced piracy as a profession; but we are allowed to surmise, though it is not stated as a fact, that the captain is somewhat demented; that he is a kind of Don Quixote with a difference; for whereas the Don was inspired by the noblest and most chivalrous sentiments only, the saturnine and bloodthirsty captain is drunk with a thirst for gore, robbery and sensational wickedness; the great Captain Blackbeard is his model and object of envy, and, sad to say, he remains degenerate, and is never redeemed to the bosom of his family, if the beautiful and delightful Kate may be called that.

In fact, the captain goes altogether wrong, and it even seems to me that he resists efforts on Mr. Stockton's part to improve him; there is an insane vanity in the creature which is obdurate to remonstrances. He has indeed a most sensitive and sleepless conscience, which never spares the word of warning and upbraiding in season and out; but this conscience

LUCILLA'S RESCUE OF DICKORY

INCIDENTS ENOUGH IN PEMBERTON'S NOVEL, BUT NO PLOT

THERE is always a chance for a good novel having for background the present political condition of Europe; for anything may at any moment happen there, and there was never a time when a man of genius and energy, with favoring circumstances, has had a better opportunity to scramble to the top of the heap of ruin which will be the first outcome of the great conflict, when it comes.

I would select Austria as the headquarters for the tale, if I were asked to choose. It is a picturesque country, made up politically of a number of peoples, all with desperate grievances, and headed at present by a ruler who, though one of the most sagacious and shrewd in Europe, is now so old that his finish may arrive any day. Austria, too, is less hackneyed in literature than Russia is, or England; while whatever happens to her will be humanly certain to involve everybody else in the European agglomeration.

But, next perhaps to Austria, France probably offers the best invitation to the fiction monger. She is, to be sure, already in literature up to her neck, and has plenty of home talent to look out for her; but home talent in France is so intensely Frenchy that it is difficult for them to take large or dispassionate views. Besides, France, in fiction at least, still means Paris, and we know Paris only too well—in fiction. But France, or Paris, is always dramatic, emotional, unexpected, and we have not yet ceased to believe that anything is possible there, even a monarchy or an empire. Society in Paris has great variety, innumerable cliques, striking contrasts; and the persons in conspicuous places are full of picturesqueness for the artist of men. There is an immense field for intrigue of the elder Dumas sort, and for studies a la Balzac, or for satirical comment in the style of the modern French school. There are the Quartier, the Faubourg, the Assembly, the army, the painters and the Academy. There is the quarrel with Germany and the friendship with Russia, and the colonial ambitions and perils, and the chronic idea of invading England. In short, material is abundant. You cannot miss it. All you have to do is to choose and to write decently. An absorbing, if not a great, story could be written to-day about France, and it would be easy to slip in a love story between the leaves so as to fulfill the conventional requirements of a romantic fiction.

I, as well as the rest of the reading public, have often met with the name of Max Pemberton, in lists of publishers' new novels, and in the title pages of magazines; but, unlike the majority of the public, perhaps, I have not hitherto happened to read one of his books. That fortune has at length been accorded to me; and the specimen of his work which came to my hands was called "The Giant's Gate," and is published in this country by Frederic Stokes & Co. I opened the book with a great deal of agreeable anticipation; for, so far as one may judge by the extracts from reviewers and the puffs of the publishers, Mr. Pemberton is one of the leaders in modern fiction, and his editions run into six figures. He sails with favoring gales and his poop is beaten gold. The title of his new book suggested romance of the pure type, and a glance through the pages showed that Paris was the scene and the last decade the time. The illustrations by Mr. Piffard looked interesting. And the sub-title of the book, "A Great Adventure," was alluring.

I have read the book, and by close attention I have extracted the thread of the story; the task resembled that of hunting in a haystack for a needle, but it was there. I cannot imagine being so much in need of a needle as to undertake the enterprise of seeking through a haystack for it; and I am not sure that the result of my searchings in Mr. Pemberton's rather portly volume has compensated me for the effort involved. But, as I have got the thread disentangled, I will exhibit it for the reader's benefit, and then make what comments seem called for. It is by no means an unpromising thread of its kind.

The Hero a Soldier

There is in Paris, at the moment our tale begins, a man on horseback—a man of possibilities, who may become emperor and lead the nation to any destiny you please. He is a general of the French army, and the youngest of his rank; he is adored by the populace and courted by society; and doubtless he is feared by the present government. He is not a bad fellow, but on the contrary generous and patriotic, just a trifle cynical, brave, handsome and, in short, endowed with all the qualities of a hero both of life and of drama. He falls in love immediately with a stately English girl, daughter of an earl (the comedian of the piece, or one of them). That gives the clue to the love interest at once. Love of woman and love of country are to be opposed to each other; which will win?

This young General Davignon is at the moment being sought by a touzle-headed, guttural-voiced Russian or German adventurer, Felix Borgia by name, who appears to have invented something which it would be to the advantage of France to secure from him. The true inventor, however, turns out to be, not Borgia, but a youth—hardly more than a boy—Lucien by name, who is partly mad, but wholly a genius of the very first order. He figures as Borgia's slave and office boy, so to speak; he has no worldly ambition, but only a mystic, poetic joy in and love for the great invention he has made—and also for a young girl, Zephyrine, who is Borgia's daughter. What is the invention? It turns out, in due time, to be a submarine vessel which can be steered under-water. The author says that this is the only boat of the submarine order which can be so steered. It may be so; at any rate, we will assume it for the sake of the story. Now, Borgia proposes to sell this boat to Davignon, who can therewith invade England and make himself master of France and of Europe. So here we have the second element in the story; both of them good.

The Dreyfus scandal is at its most critical stage; there is hostility between the government and the army, or part of the army, which follows Davignon, and it is a fair gamble that the nation will side with the army, which is to help it reconquer the lost provinces and invade England. Now, we have Davignon in possession of the boat, and therefore potential master of England; and we see him to be no friend of Dreyfus and the Jews (who are being mobbed just then by the Parisian slum dwellers). His chances of seizing the government and running it his own way seem therefore excellent. So, also, thinks the Baroness Pauline d'Arbois, the society arbitress of Paris, and an arch schemer and not yet retired beauty; and so does her set. She professes to own Davignon; she loves him in the society-arbitress way, and it is by means of the money of another lover of hers, the Banker Larine, that the boat, or an option on it, was obtained. Plainly we are on the brink of a coup d'etat. But first, to make sure of his ground, Davignon must make a practical test of the boat which the crazy dreamer Lucien invented, and which the quack adventurer Borgia stole from him. The test is to be a trip across the English Channel and up the Thames to London. This mouth of the Thames, by the way, is the Giant's Gate. The trip is successfully made and most ambitiously described; but here comes in the other end of the plot. When Davignon reaches London he thinks of the invitation to call that his English lady love, the young Countess Kathleen, gave him; and when he thinks of that, and of her, he finds that the idea of destroying England by means of the boat or otherwise loses some of its attractiveness. He goes to Karn Castle to see her, becomes betrothed to her, and thus places himself in the dilemma which we foresaw. Patriotism or love—which shall it be?

Meanwhile, as a side issue, the Anarchists of Paris, at a meeting attended by Davignon himself and an agent of the secret service, Bedotte, selects by lot a young man named Vaudran to assassinate him. This was, of course, before the general left Paris on the boat with Lucien. One night, at Karn, being sleepless, he suddenly sees Vaudran, with a dagger in his hand, at the foot of his bed, waiting to kill him. But he magnetizes and dominates the boy, and sends him back to Paris to act as a spy for the other side. Nevertheless, while he is still on his visit, a shot is fired at him one evening from the shrubbery, by some substitute for Vaudran evidently, which misses him, but hits Kathleen's cousin and Davignon's rival for the love of Kathleen, with whom he was engaged at the moment in a fist fight.

No Consistent Ending

Nothing particular comes of all this, except that Davignon returns to Paris, and finds the train awaiting the match which he only can apply. Nothing more, either, is heard of the boat, though during the trip Lucien, who had recovered the sense of ownership in his own invention which the influence of Borgia had hitherto deprived him of, intimates that, as his father was an Englishman, he would not care to sell the boat to an enemy of England. Nor is there anything else in the volume about the Giant's Gate. Indeed, the truth must now be revealed that, although there are still two hundred pages of the book to come, the plot is at this point brought, for all practical intents and purposes, to an end. What follows is a series of incoherent and unnecessary episodes. Davignon, besought by the Baroness, cannot decide whether or not to strike his blow. He gets so far as to name a day—the first of the great race meeting at Longchamps. But his plans are upset by Lucien, who is in love with Zephyrine, who loves Davignon, and is therefore (Lucien is, I mean) jealous of the general, and carries his animosity so far as not only to fire at the general and wound him in the arm, but not seriously; but he likewise reveals to the government the plot arranged for the premiere at Longchamps the details of which he overheard, in consequence of which Loubet takes action, causes Gallifet to arrest Davignon, and the whole conspiracy goes up in smoke, Davignon being sentenced to a year in a fortress, and thereafter to banishment from France. But what do he or Kathleen care? He has inherited a fortune from a relative, and he will marry Kathleen and live happy ever after, as soon as his term in the fortress—where he is treated with every indulgence—is over. What becomes of Lucien, of Borgia, of Vaudran, of Bedotte, of the Baroness, or even of Dreyfus, we are not told; they simply drop out of sight. As for the boat, that was broken into small pieces by Lucien in the laboratory with a hammer; which, as the boat was built of steel and could not have been less than thirty feet long, was a feat worth talking about for a feeble boy just out of his teens. But he was rendered herculean, I suppose, by his jealousy.

What does it all mean? So far as I can surmise, it means that Mr. Pemberton set out to write a story to order for serial publication; and he had in his head at the time a few vague notions, but good enough in their way, as to what the tale should be about. He trusts to luck that they would come out all right. But writing from month to month, with part of the story irrevocably in type, and part in his head, or not in it as yet, but trying to get in, he found he had exhausted his material ere he was half way through the space allotted to him in the magazine. But business engagements must be kept, the thing had to be spun out somehow.

And yet Mr. Pemberton cannot be devoid of ability, and he had here the material to make a lively and interesting story. He must have written better than this in the past, and he cannot therefore help knowing what an absolute failure he has made of his present attempt. Having once began in the magazine (if my hypothesis be correct, and for Mr. Pemberton's sake I hope it is) of course he had to go on, but surely he might have suppressed the publication in book form. In so doing I cannot but think that he would have consulted his own advantage, even from the pecuniary point of view. No man can continue turning out this sort of thing and retain his vogue. There must be some limit to the toleration or to the ignorance or indifference of readers. Mr. Churchill's "Crisis" was poor enough, but "The Giant's Gate" makes it look like a classic. What must be called, in order to call it anything, the imaginative part—the voyage under water of the patent boat—is so ludicrously impossible that a child would reject it, and not less absurd is the assumption that a boy like Lucien (only there never could be such a boy) could design a craft which solved the secret for which all the scientists of the age had been searching.

How early revelation took place in the heart of this Christ Child and He became conscious of His mission we can only judge from our own hearts and experience, but no doubt at 4 or 5 there came to Him those strange day-dreams on the hillsides of Gallilee which were to become the great eternal facts of His final mission.

It was common for the doctors in the outer courts to discuss the niceties of the Jewish law and to split hairs over the Sabbath Day, and how it should be kept, and the ceremonials, which, to many of them, were a mere matter of form. And it is not at all an impossible situation to have this boy put from His eager heart one or two startling questions to a group of doctors with their students, and to puzzle them by a knowledge that He had gleaned from communion with nature and with all the books and doctors that His own village of Nazareth afforded.

His mother knew more about this boy than anyone in the world, but it is recorded that "she kept all these sayings in her heart." Through all His life He was identified with the city where He passed His childhood, and the blind beggar by the way breaks through the hum of the multitude with the cry, "Jesus, Thou Son of David," because he had been told that Jesus of Nazareth was passing by.

LINCOLN'S FAMOUS DUEL.

Which Wasn't Fought, Recalled by the Mississippi River's Destruction of the Historic Spot.

[Alton Correspondence Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Within a few months the famous old dueling ground in St. Charles county, Mo., will have ceased to exist. The shifting current of the Mississippi River has attacked the little plot of land, and it is rapidly succumbing to erosion of the waters.

The St. Charles dueling ground has been the scene of more "affairs of honor" than any other one spot in the western country. Its chief title to fame, however, rests on the fact that it was there that Abraham Lincoln met James A. Shields, afterward brigadier-general and United States Senator from the States of Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri, successively, in the only duel to which he was ever provoked.

The dueling ground is directly across the river from this city. In the early days of the State it was much frequented by those who thought their honor required vindication with the pistol or sword, and the accessibility of the place soon gave it a wide reputation. The laws of Illinois did not look kindly on the practice of dueling, and prescribed such penalties for the practice that even the most hot-headed fire-eater was glad to get outside the State before a hostile meeting with an adversary. The laws of Missouri took no cognizance of the dueling habit, and it was considered quite the proper thing then to determine disputes by the shedding of blood.

That was in the old days, however. A more enlightened spirit has since prevailed in reference to such customs, and in consequence it has been many years since a duel has taken place on the St. Charles ground. Its fame has made it consecrated ground in the memory of many Illinoisans and Missourians, and a few years after the war steps were taken to preserve the spot in its original shape. The dueling ground was in a little ravine, through which a creek at one time wound its way. This disappeared one summer, and left nothing to show its former presence, but its desolate bed and a number of huge boulders that the waters had left sticking up from the ground. Enough money was raised by subscription to remove these boulders and to erect an iron fence around the grounds, and in that condition they have remained ever since.

Mr. Lincoln's meeting there with Shields has furnished one of the few ludicrous episodes with which the dueling field has ever been credited. Shields was then Auditor of the State of Illinois. The finances of the State were in a deplorable condition; the treasury was empty; Auditor's warrants were selling at half their nominal value; no more money was to be borrowed, and taxation was dreaded by both political parties more than disgrace. The currency of the State banks was well nigh worthless, but it was virtually the only circulating medium in Illinois.

In the middle of August, 1842, the Governor, Auditor and Treasurer issued a circular forbidding the payment of State taxes in this depreciated paper. This order was taken by the Whigs as indicating on the part of these officers a keener interest in the integrity of their salaries than in the public welfare, and it was therefore severely attacked in all the opposition papers of the State. The sharpest assault it had to endure, however, was in a communication printed in the Sangamon Journal, which not only dissected the administration circular with the most savage satire, but covered the Auditor with merciless personal ridicule. It purported to come from a farmer's widow, who expressed in this fashion her discontent with the evil course of affairs.

Shields was a man of inordinate vanity, and a corresponding irascibility. He was for that reason an irresistible mark for satire. His fury against the unknown author of the satire was the subject of much merriment in Springfield. The next week another letter appeared from a different hand, but adopting the machinery of the first, in which the widow offered to make up the quarrel by marrying the Auditor, and this in turn was followed by an epithalamium, in which this happy compromise was celebrated in very bad verse. In the change of hands all the humor of the thing had vanished, and nothing was left but feminine mischief on one side, and the exasperation of wounded vanity on the other.

Shields had talked so much about the matter, that he felt imperatively called upon to act. He therefore sent a messenger to the editor of the paper and demanded from him the name of the author of the articles. The editor was in a quandary. The first article had been written by Mr. Lincoln, but the two following it had been written by two young women who took an active interest in politics, and could not let the chance slip to have a little fun with Shields. The editor appealed to Mr. Lincoln in his dilemma, and the latter answered:

"Oh, tell Shields that I wrote them. Don't let the names of the women appear in the matter."

As soon as Shields had the name of Mr. Lincoln given to him he began to boast of the vengeance he would take, and sent representatives to Mr. Lincoln with a challenge couched in the most blustering terms. Mr. Lincoln was disposed to laugh at the matter, and his friends tried in every way to patch the thing up with Shields, but nothing would do the latter but a hostile meeting. Mr. Lincoln had to finally consent to this, but he never seemed to divest himself of the idea that the whole proceeding was a huge joke. They repaired to St. Charles, and Lincoln, being the challenged party, had the choice of weapons. After the arrival at the dueling grounds, he was asked what weapons he would select. With a quizzical twinkle in his eye, he replied:

"Let's have some originality about this duel. I prefer cannon at fifty paces."

The absurdity of the proposition created a general laugh, in which even Shields was forced to join, and while he was in this tractable frame of mind the seconds reasoned with him, with the result that he and Lincoln were soon talking as amiably together as if nothing had ever happened, and the duel was off.

WOMAN'S WEIGH

Does not always keep pace with woman's will. There are energetic, home-loving women who by sheer force of will keep themselves going, and fancy that strength of will can take the place of strength of body. But it can't. Every day will see a loss of strength, and that loss will be indicated by a loss of weight. When the weight begins to fall below the normal it is time to ask, Why? In general, ill health in women may be traced to those womanly diseases which sap the strength and undermine the vitality. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. Where the disease is marked by loss of flesh, there is a steady regaining of weight coincident with the cure which proves the renewal of health to be thorough and permanent.

"Three years ago," writes Mrs. John Graham, of 2018 Plumb Street (Frankford), Philadelphia, Penna. "I had a very bad attack of dropsy which left me with heart trouble, and also a very weak back. At times I was so bad that I did not know what to do with myself. I came to Philadelphia two years ago, and picking up one of your little books one day began to read what your 'Favorite Prescription' had done for others, I determined to try it myself. I took seven bottles, and to-day I am a strong, well woman, weighing 162 pounds. Have gained 25 pounds since I started to use your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

The prominence of the men had attracted general attention to the duel, and when the boats carrying the principals and seconds were seen crossing the Mississippi back to Alton a large crowd stood on the shore awaiting news of the result of the supposed encounter. Again Mr. Lincoln's whimsical tendencies saw the chance for another joke. Placing a log in his skiff he had it covered with clothes, and as the boat approached the shore the spectators thought it was the body of one of the principals. When they reached the shore, Mr. Lincoln coolly reached down, took the clothes off the log and rolled the latter into the river. It took the spectators on the shore a moment to realize the situation, but when they did, a roar of laughter went up that dispelled the general tension.

The duelists remained in Alton all night, and dined at a hotel with their friends, and, although both men fought each other with intensity during political campaigns, they remained firm friends ever afterward. The old dueling ground at St. Charles thus brought together two statesmen who would have probably remained bitter enemies throughout their life, and made bosom friends of them.

MESSAGES MONEY BEARS.

Inscriptions Across Bills Usually Comic, but One, "My Last Dollar, Good-by," Suggests Tragedy.

[Pittsburgh Leader:] It was a common, ordinary, every-day dollar bill, dirty enough to justify the opprobrium of "filthy lucre," but no dirtier than thousands of its companion pieces that repose in the musty hoard of misers; true, its ends were frayed like the edges of a seedy individual's trousers, and its face was crumpled and creased so badly that the features of Gen. U. S. Grant vignetted at one end were nearly as deeply furrowed as was the kindly, homely physiognomy of the rail splitter President, old Abe Lincoln, which adorned the opposite corner.

But it was not the dilapidated appearance of the note, nor its frayed edges, nor its musty odor, neither was it the face of Grant or Lincoln that made this note different from the four similar pieces of United States currency that were laid on the desk of a prominent downtown physician yesterday morning. This particular note's distinguishing mark was an inscription in a legible but nervous hand, written across its face. These are the words:

"My last dollar; good-by."

There was a story in that note, and the doctor's clerk read it at a glance.

"I'll just keep that myself," he said as he fished from his trousers pockets a silver dollar to take its place.

"My last dollar; good-by."

The handwriting was that of a person of evident education and refinement; a student of chirography could tell that at a glance; it wasn't a joke, either, nor an idle, flippant sentiment, but the real expression of the genuine sorrow of parting, not the sorrow that comes at the parting of old friends; no, indeed, not that; but the remorse that comes with blighted hopes and the final collapse of an unequal struggle against adversity. If it hadn't been a masculine hand one would have fancied he could detect the stains of tears that may have fallen as the farewell was written.

"I wonder what became of him," said the clerk, as he turned the dirty bill over and over again, and scanned its corners in search of some clew to the identity of the unfortunate who had penned those pregnant five words:

"My last dollar; good-by."

And yet he said it just as though he knew the identity of the quondam possessor of the bill, for the serious trend of his thought had built up a living, breathing embodiment of hard luck; a derelict on life's turbulent sea, who in the figment of his imagination had become a personal acquaintance in distress.

"If I only knew I'd give it back—but what's the use moralizing about some one we know nothing of."

He was back to earth and the dollar bill went into the recesses of his pocket to come out again perhaps at the theater box office or a favored cigar stand.

The Leader man, who had been a witness to this little real life episode, found it a difficult thing to forget. Those five words possessed a puissance that irresistibly wove into romance and tragedy the author of them. Who could he be? What was his story? Did he ever get another dollar? Mayhap it was his last. What then? Starvation or Marshalsea—which?

But how came the doctor's debtor, a fashionably-dressed woman of society, to get possession of the bill? Maybe she could solve the question. The reporter soon found her, but was disappointed.

"I got it from my butcher," she said, "on January 17 last; you see it is dated January 16, so that it came to him the day after the words were written."

So it was dated "January 16, 1902," by the same hand that had written the other inscription.

The butcher didn't know from whom the bill came; in fact, hadn't noticed it at all, so that all further trace was lost in the meat shop. Probably the money had been spent for food, perhaps victuals for a starving wife and children. Who can tell where the next meal came from

"Oh," said the paying teller of a Fifth-avenue banking-house, "it isn't an extraordinary thing for people to write on their paper money. We get many bills that are thus mutilated. It is a sort of passion among some people to scribble, the same sort of a fancy that makes otherwise sensible folks write their names in public places or cut them in the woodwork of public buildings, railroad stations, the sort of vandalism that inspired some village bard to write the memorable lines:

"'Fools' names, like fools' faces,
Are always seen in public places.'

"But I must confess there is something different about this dollar bill you speak of. We don't often find such sentiment on money; it is usually a funny or flippant phrase or a familiar bit of verse. Here's a one-dollar silver certificate that came in this morning; it has on its face '16 to 1' I never get it back,' a tribute to William Jennings Bryan and the free-silver cult, probably written at the time that heresy was a live issue, or perhaps some wag was lending it to a friend and never expected the loan to be liquidated.

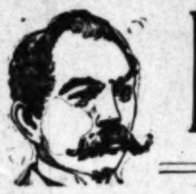
"A check came in the other day across the face of which was written in the well-known hand of the maker of the check these words:

"'The old man's drunk again.'

"Evidently he was sober enough to draw the check, but at the same time drunk enough to give the fact away. It was a check for a large sum, and as the penmanship clearly indicated a condition of quasi-inebriacy, I refused to honor the demand. The party was very indignant, but as it turned out subsequently, our caution saved the check maker a good round sum. A shark had simply taken advantage of his befuddled condition and induced him to sign his name for an obligation which did not exist. Cases of this kind are rare, but we often run across checks that are written on by the absent-minded or drink-muddled men—writings which occasionally impair a man's credit."

And so ended the quest for the luckless author of the fated words:

"My last dollar; good-by."



RUPTURE..

Rupture Sufferers, by this time you know that I am not a stranger here, proposing to do what I cannot do, but a resident of Los Angeles for six years, with a record of cures that speaks for itself, as hundreds of Los Angeles citizens have been cured by my Rupture Treatment, without injection or operation, nor detention from business one hour, no matter how long standing or severe the case may be. Age is no bar to cures, as I have cured children, 8 months, to the aged of 84 years, and have done this without guarantee or false promises. As my work speaks for itself, I have no time to run down other people's treatment; also will say I need not beg rupture sufferers to come to me for treatment, as is done by other traveling agents, who come and go before their trunk is unpacked, and who the first day began begging for patients by offering free consultation and no cure, no pay, but cannot show the cures.

I feel it my duty, as a benefactor to suffering humanity, to warn you against treatments by injections, as I find it a daily complaint from those who have been so treated, that they have been injured in various ways, such as blood poisoning, etc., and to these poor sufferers I can only say that I do not care to offer my treatment as "Injection Treatments," greatly complicate the trouble. I have no objection if you have been operated upon by honest surgeons, many of whom can be found in Los Angeles, but I again warn you against being butchered by injection, which is only a slow method of torture.

DEADLY PARASITES.

TAPE WORMS, Stomach, Intestinal, Thread Worms and all other parasites which infest the human body, which are the cause of so many Chronic Troubles, can be removed without inconvenience or fasting.

Are there times when you have a ravenous appetite, and other times when the thought of food is revolting? Do you get dizzy? Is your mind dull? Is your memory poor? Are you easily dazed? Do your limbs get numb? Do you have headache? Are you easily excited? Do your temples throb? Do your hands tremble? Does your heart flutter? Are you easily irritated? Are you always anxious? Do your muscles twitch? Do you suffer from sleeplessness? Are you easily frightened? Does sleep not refresh you? Do you suffer from neuralgia? Do you have horrible dreams? Do you start up in your sleep? Does the least thing annoy you? Do you have pains in top or back of the head? Do you have pains in the back? Do you have languid or tired feeling? Is there rush of blood to the head? Does a lump come up in your throat? Do you see queer things in the dark? Do you wake up in a cold perspiration? Have you wandering pains over the body?

We have within the past six months cured over FIVE HUNDRED cases of so-called stomach trouble, and have absolutely cured five cases of epilepsy.

These parasites, or worms, can also cause consumption, affecting the liver and lungs very often, for these animals feed upon the nutritive juices, thus debilitating little by little the individual. It would be tiresome to try to enumerate the many diseases that are caused by these parasites. These facts are confirmed by many competent authors.

We diagnose and tell you whether you have any of these parasites or not. All charges for treatment are moderate. No charge if you are not satisfied.

CONSULTATION AND DIAGNOSIS FREE. Hours 9 a.m. to 12; 1 to 4 p.m.

SCHOOL FOR NURSEMAIDS.

Girls Learn to Care for Babies—Demand for Graduates Far Exceeds Supply.

[New York Tribune:] Cooking schools are legion and domestic science departments flourish in nearly every woman's college nowadays, but the training school for nursemaids, in connection with the Babies' Hospital, is almost unique in the line of specialized instruction.

In the hospital, which is at Lexington avenue and Fiftieth street, such a department has been in operation for some years, and its students, after six months of training, are sent forth with the dignity of a diploma and a knowledge of children's needs that they might not otherwise have gained in a lifetime.

The first thing the student is taught is how to wash and dress the baby. The proper temperature of the water, the best kinds of soap, the length of time to be given to the bath and precautions against taking cold, all are carefully taught, with the convalescent babies as subjects.

The easier methods of dressing the little one so that it shall not be irritated by thoughtless handling are next in order, and the process is made a festivity rather than an ordeal. How to put the pins in so that they shall not assert themselves with uncomfortable emphasis is unquestionably an item of knowledge well worth acquiring, in the opinion of the babies.

Each student has her little charges, who are attended as carefully and methodically as if they were the children of wealth, and they repay the affectionate attention they receive with cooings and smiles that their attendants consider "too sweet for anything."

How to keep the feeding bottles perfectly clean and how to "modify" the milk for the babies are taught with scrupulous exactitude, and the hospital pantry forms an admirable object lesson. Scores of tiny mugs are ranged on shelves, each mug holding a rubber mouthpiece in an antiseptic solution, and marked on the outside with its baby owner's name. Every bottle also has a metal name tag attached, so that each child is fed from its own bottle at all times.

The students are taught how to prepare meat pulp for delicate babies, and how to care for them in ordinary ailments. They are instructed also in the dangers of infection from tuberculosis and other diseases, and in a variety of ways are rendered competent to give such care as was once the province of the grandmother.

No student is accepted without an investigation into her antecedents, and any one with the slightest tuberculous taint is refused. Good health, good character and intelligence are the requisites for admission to this practical college.

Six months are given to the course of training, and then the student leaves as a kind of "probationer," for she does not receive a full certificate until she has been three months in a private situation and filled the place satisfactorily. She is then a full-fledged graduate. In her various situations the hospital follows her career, and keeps a record of her behavior and qualifications for reference.

So popular is the school that there is always a waiting list, for the wages received by its graduates range from $20 to $30 a month. Every one in the class to graduate in September is already engaged, and the demand is ten times the supply, says Miss Marianna Wheeler, superintendent of the hospital.

The nursemaids who graduate from this school retain the neat hospital uniform, which removes the difficulty in regard to dress that many employers encounter. A dark blue gown with white apron and cap is the costume, the apron having bib and shoulder straps.

THE LAGGARD.

The morn was fair that broke above
The April green upon the hills,
And from the bough the robin's love
Was poured in endless, eager trills.

I sang along the pleasant way
With high resolves and boundless hopes
And smelt the fragrance of the clay
Fresh turned upon the fertile slopes.

The noon was fair upon the plain,
The far-off spires glistened white,
And all the brooks sang one refrain—
The love I dreamed of through the night.

Through all the afternoon I heard
The wooing winds that passed along,
Where each dry blade and stalk they stirred
Was lovelier for the gentle song.

I heard Love calling through the day
That made me glad and was so fair—
At night my hope was torn away,
The damps of death were in the air.

At night another held her fast,
He had not stayed to hear and see
The endless glories where he passed,
But got there just ahead of me.

Thousands of People Killed

Annually from catarrh of the kidneys and bladder. A peculiar acid is generated and set at liberty by this disease, which permeates the blood, weakens and destroys its renovating power and allows the system no opportunity to throw off this malady until the poison is neutralized and expelled from the system. Brick dust sediments indicate uric-acid poisoning. It is here that S. B. Catarrh Cure becomes of the most vital consequence, because unless arrested at this stage the disease makes rapid progress to an early grave. S. B. Catarrh Cure permeates every fluid of the body, cleanses it from all impurities and is the greatest uric-acid solvent ever discovered. One bottle will convince the most skeptical of this fact. MEDICAL ETHICS.

Had the Physicians of the Electro-Chemic Institute, 244½ South Broadway, Adhered Strictly to the Ethical Code They Would Not Have Announced the Establishment of Their Institution in Los Angeles.

The Natural Result of Such a Course Would Have Been That Few Would Have Known of Their Coming and What They Are Accomplishing by Means of the Scientific Application of Electro-Chemistry.

When the business manager of the Electro-Chemic Institute reached Los Angeles some months ago he was somewhat disconcerted by the number of physicians and medical institutions already in the field. It appeared to him that there was hardly room for more. In visiting a prominent office building it seemed to him that every other suite was occupied by a physician. The newspapers teemed with medical advertisements. One prominent street seemed almost entirely given up to institutions for the relief of the afflicted. Besides the regular practitioners there were Osteopathists by the score. There were Electric Exterminators and Electric Eradicators of disease. There were Masseurs and Christian Scientists. There were Water Cures, Sun Cures and Faith Cures. There were Electric Light Baths and Mud Baths, but notwithstanding all this, after mature deliberation it became a settled conviction that in spite of an apparently over-crowded field there was a decided need in Los Angeles of an institution founded upon late discoveries in Electro-Chemistry as applied successfully in the treatment of serious diseases usually incurable under older and less scientific methods. Acting upon this conviction the Electro-Chemic Institute was established. It cost a great deal of money to install the magnificent instruments required in this twentieth century practice, but no mistake has been made and already the public appreciates the magnitude of the work contemplated by the Institute. Already the regular profession realizes that instead of physicians who criticise and disparage the noble work which it is doing for the relief of suffering humanity, the Electro-Chemic physicians fully understand and appreciate that amongst God's greatest creations is the sincere and over-worked family doctor. Every fair-minded person realizes that the scope of modern medicine is too great for any one mind to master it all. There must be specialties and specialists. The Electro-Chemic physicians are experienced and trained specialists and they wish the public and the regular profession to know what they do—what they are eminently fitted to do, both as to the knowledge of their work and their equipment for it.

As conscientious physicians we hate to be unethical and will only transgress the code in one particular, and that is to tell the people what we can do—what we are doing—and the best way to do this is by speaking through the medium of the daily press.

There are already many happy homes in Los Angeles and vicinity, rendered happy by dear ones who have been cured quickly and painlessly after hope had been all but abandoned. There have been cures of Cancer, Deafness, Asthma, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Epilepsy, (Fits,) Piles, Fistula, Appendicitis (without surgical operation,) serious diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Special Diseases of Women, Distressing and Disfiguring Blood and Skin Affections. Chronic and Painful Diseases of Men and all have been cured pleasantly, no pain, no cutting, no burning.

The greatest and most popular clergyman of his time, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, spoke the words which follow:

"I am glad that the doctor cured him; I am glad that the doctor put it in the paper that he could cure him, and if any doctor is certain that he can cure such disease and does not put in it the paper, I am sorry. What a pity it would have been had this doctor, with his wealth of science and experience, left him uncured! What a pity it would have been if the afflicted man had been so prejudiced against advertising as to read the responsible certificate of the doctor and yet give him the go-by as a quack! What are the newspapers for if not to circulate information? What more valuable information can a newspaper give than to tell a sick man where he can be cured? If a man has devoted his life and labor to the study of a special class of disease, the necessity of saying so becomes all the more pressing. His duty to advertise becomes imperious. The remedy for the lying advertisements of quacks is for the honest man to tell the truth. A really able man, whatever may be his gifts, makes a great mistake if he fails to use those gifts through want of advertising."

We claim that this great preacher has spoken prophetic words. We know what we can do. We advertise what we can do, and we do what we advertise.

We cure Cancer by X-Ray treatment. This treatment of Cancer is painless. The germs of the disease are destroyed by this chemical light pouring into them. Most disease germs cannot stand the light, especially the chemical light of the X-Ray. There is no heat about the Electro-Chemic X-Ray light, and even though a cancer may be very raw and sore, there is no pain from this new treatment, and the healing begins with the first application of the Ray.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Electro-Chemic physicians are very busy men, they have reserved one hour daily, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., during which they give a free demonstration of the X-Ray.

This demonstration is particularly interesting to persons suffering from obscure diseases, troubles that are causing the family physician considerable trouble to locate. The X-Ray stops guessing and in connection with the isolation of the Bacillus Tuberculosis, it is possible to discover consumption in the earliest stages and when diagnosed early, consumption is always a curable disease.

We cure Consumption with the X-Ray and active oxygen treatments. The Bacillus Tuberculosis cannot live under the light of the Ray, and the active oxygen goes directly into the blood, strengthening it and making it possible for the sufferer to gain weight and strength. We do not claim to cure Consumption in cases which have gone so far as to leave no foundation upon which to build. Nevertheless this new treatment will benefit consumptives, no matter how far the disease is advanced, and in cases in the early stages it offers great assurance of permanent cures.

We cure Deafness by Electrical Massage and Cataphoric Electrical applications to the partially-paralyzed nerves of hearing. We cure cases that are pronounced hopeless by physicians who do not know of this treatment, or at least who have not gone to the expense of learning about it and of installing the proper instruments for its application. It doesn't matter how long one may have been deaf, there is always a great probability of a cure by the Electro-Chemic treatment.

We cure Catarrh of the Throat, Nose and Lungs by our new method quickly and permanently. We restore the loss of voice and cure hoarseness. Singers who find it impossible to reach their high notes comfortably and satisfactorily will soon find the voice growing strong and normal under the influence of this new treatment of ours. Asthma is cured. The smothering and choking and fighting for breath which asthmatics undergo is needless suffering, for we can control the paroxysms in a short time, and cure the trouble permanently by the careful course of treatment which we have formulated for this serious disease.

We cure Piles and Fistula without cutting. Our treatment in these serious cases is painless and quick and amongst our most grateful patients are ladies and gentlemen who have been perfectly cured of Piles and Fistulas. The reason we can do these things is because we know how and because we have the necessary tools to do it with, and in the event of our not having them, we have the money to buy them or to have them made according to our orders.

The ladies who have taken the Electro-Chemic course are staunch friends of the Institute. Many suffering women are being cured by pleasant and painless methods, who have been looking forward with fear and trembling to the surgeon and operating table. A few Electro-Chemic treatments has brought the bloom back to the cheeks of many weary, worn and pain-racked women. A few treatments will take the pain out of the tired back, will regulate the sufferer and will thicken weak and watery blood.

Just a few words to the men. More men are victimized and made miserable for life through misrepresentations by doctors than one can imagine. They are frequently fooled into believing simple physiological phenomena to be evidence of serious and deeply-seated disease action. They are frightened by the fake doctor until they give up their money for something they do not need, and often become really sick through worrying over some imaginary ill. To discouraged, fooled and disappointed men, to those who really are sick, the Electro-Chemic course offers prompt and permanent relief, whether the trouble be one of the Nervous System, the Physical System, or a Constitutional Malady of the Blood.

Consultation and examination are free. Those who can do so should call at the office, 244½ South Broadway, one door south of City Hall, and those who cannot call may write for full instructions regarding a course of treatment to be used at home. The office hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and 7 to 8 p.m. daily, and on Sundays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Pleasant waiting-rooms have been provided especially for ladies, and the men have a waiting-room of their own in another part of the building. It must be remembered that the Electro-Chemic Specialists are accredited and registered physicians, as well as graduates of the very best Colleges of Electro-Therapeutics.

TRIPS TO BOOKLAND—By Julian Hawthorne

Stockton's Novel, "Kate Bonnet," a Story of Damosels and Blood-Thirsting Pirates

"Kate Bonnet," by Frank Stockton; Appletons.

THERE is one quality in all Mr. Stockton's books which I think is unique in American fiction, or in any other fiction; he may be said to have invented it himself. It is a quality incorporate with his genius.

It is not outwardly conspicuous; I myself had been reading him for years before I detected it. In all the criticisms of his writings which I have seen I cannot recall having seen it mentioned. It is so constant perhaps—so ingrained in the texture, so ubiquitously in evidence, that, like the wood obscured by trees, it escapes observation. It is entirely possible that Mr. Stockton himself has never happened to notice it; one cannot hear the sound of his own voice—or, rather, know the rhythm and manner of his vocal utterance—unless he listens to it in a phonograph; when he does that, he will be surprised. Very likely Mr. Stockton will be surprised when I tell him what this leading quality of his writings is. But as soon as the secret has been revealed he will admit that such is the fact. Let me say at once that it is a fact that does him immense credit; and that in this day of radicalism and departure from old principles he is apt to enjoy the monopoly of it indefinitely.

It is not his humor, of course. That, in its way, is, to be sure, unique and inimitable; it is conspicuous and omnipresent; it is congenital with the humorist, and spontaneous; but it is far indeed from being unnoticed by his readers and reviewers. On the contrary, it is the stock in trade of his reviewers; when they can find nothing else to say of the author, they can always get a paragraph or two out of his humor. It is humor, not wit. It is also humor of a luminous rather than brilliant sort; it does not make you laugh consumedly, like the excruciating drollery of Mark Twain at his best; it is very quiet, and seems to inhere in the subject; you imagine it would be there even without Mr. Stockton to point it out. It blooms out of the situation by a sort of chemical process, just as water appears when you bring together oxygen and hydrogen. It does not seem—such, perhaps, is the art of the writer—to have been deliberately planned and led up to; but events move in such a way that the most singular combinations ensue, and these stir within you the sources of chuckle. If you are reading the story aloud, you may chuckle aloud as you read; but if you are reading to yourself, you feel simply a sensation of interior joy.

Secret of Interest

The sensation is analogous to that which you experience when you learn that somebody has left you a legacy—not a very large legacy, but enough to enable you to do one or two things which otherwise you could not have quite afforded. It kindles in your soul a soft and mellow light, like that which falls through semi-transparent curtains into a room—not like the direct illumination of unstrained sunlight. You become cheerful and secure; you are convinced that this man will do good things to you. It is the furthest imaginable from being a humor tinged with cynicism or bitterness, or even with worldly wisdom. There is not a drop of Trackeray in it. It is, on the contrary, a childlike, naive, innocent humor; simple pleasure and amusing wonder are involved in it. When it deals with terrible situations, like that of the Lady and the Tiger, it still does not produce any terrible emotions; for we feel assured that, for instance, if Mr. Stockton had written the sequel to that fearful legend, he would have made the man go to the right door—the un-tigered door.

He would have done this, because he is too nice a fellow to do the other thing. He will always do it. When we see Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine floating in the fathomless depths of the Pacific, with their black stockings securing them from the sharks, and making their tea for themselves and their guest, we feel not the slightest anxiety about their welfare; we know that the water will not become too chilly, or the waves rise inconveniently high; and that the currents will flow in such a direction as to bring the charming little party safe to shore.

When Mr. Amos Kilbright, his materialization having "set" too hard to be dissolved by the conjurations of the scientists present on that occasion, enters upon his adscititious experiences, we are certain of being agreeably thrilled, but we have no misgivings as to his finally reaching the realization of the hopes which his second life has awakened in him. When the Great War Syndicate undertakes the contract of conquering Europe on behalf of our government we soon perceive that the thing will be accomplished without any disagreeable slaughtering—though perhaps we are hardly prepared to see it done without any casualties at all. And even when, as in the present astounding pirate story of the Caribbean Sea, Blackbeard comes on the scene, and fighting and killing actually take place, it is managed so kindly and deftly that no unpleasant impressions remain on the mind.

We go away filled and gratified, as when we have witnessed a combat on the stage—not that the story is in the least stagy. The atmosphere created by the story teller softens and humanizes everything, just as distance does in real life, enabling us to hear with composure that a thousand persons have been engulfed by an earthquake in, say, Chinese Tartary. We agree that the calamity must have happened; yet, somehow, we do not believe it. No, Mr. Stockton's humor is always soothing and cheering, and we lay down his books with the most fraternal and benevolent feelings towards every person in them, saints and villains alike. But perhaps I have improved my opportunity of enlarging upon Mr. Stockton's humor to the allowable limit.

And I repeat that it is not his humor which is his distinctive quality, though it is distinctive. Neither is it his sweet reasonableness. It is true, no doubt, that no novelist ever was so sweetly reasonable as Mr. Stockton is. He is the severest of logicians; and it is only after a good deal of experience with him that we begin to suspect that it is precisely because he sticks so faithfully to logic that he lands us in such amazing and inconceivable predicaments. Take any actual occurrence in real life, and follow it resolutely out to its logical conclusion, and you will find a paradox and a miracle—an impossibility, in short. Nothing in real life is logical; the chapter of accidents, of inconsistencies, of anomalies, is the whole thing.

Mr. Stockton's world, on the other hand, is logical, and consequently it is marvelous. It completely beguiles you. He leads you on from point to point with that sincere, demure, artless face and speech, never hurrying you, but making quite sure that you understand and admit that things could not be other than as he states them; he never descends to the expedient of writing subjectively, and thus arbitrarily; but keeps always on the objective track, calling upon you at each step to agree that nothing is forced or artificial. Of course you may say that he sometimes starts with a considerable assumption; as when, for example, he assumes that the box containing the negative-gravity machine exists and is in the possession of the inventor. He does not tell us how the machine is made; but why should he do so?—that would be another story; and, besides, you remember that the story is told by the inventor, and that he had come to the conclusion, before he wrote it, that it was inexpedient for mankind that the invention should be made known.

Everything is sweetly reasonable; and this is assured by the circumstance that all the stories are concerned with material phenomena, and with the world as it is; Mr. Stockton is not a theorizer, reformer, apostle, socialist, or come-outer of any sort; and it is stories that attempt to prove a philosophical thesis by fictional means that always tell lies and are illogical. Mr. Stockton has nothing in the way of a propaganda up his sleeve; he does not preach or convert or instill views; he does but tell you, in the plainest and most assuming manner, certain curious facts that have come to his knowledge. He changes nothing, creates nothing; he does but candidly and guilelessly investigate. We may concede that the investigations of no one else would lead to the same conclusions; but then no one else is quite so logical and sweetly reasonable as Mr. Stockton is.

Well, then, the distinctive quality of Mr. Stockton is his conjugal sentiment. I prefer to follow Swedenborg in this instance and say his conjugial sentiment; conjugal is hard, and means a yoking together; conjugial is more humanely derived from the Latin conjungere—to unite. Mr. Stockton, then, is essentially conjugial, and his quality naturally manifests itself in all his writings. There is a feeling of marriage all through his stories. There are young unmarried folks; but they are contemplating marriage, and uniformly achieve it; and there is always a number of other important characters who are husbands and wives, and exercise a connubial influence over events. And it is wonderful, the composure, the calmness, the conviction of security and ultimate well-being that this prominence of the conjugial relation exercises over the reader's mind. Persons who are properly married are all right; there can be no misgivings about them. When a man is constantly referring, explicitly or tacitly, to his wife, and she to her husband, we know just where to place them; there is no ambiguity about them, or haunting doubt. They are respectable in the best sense of the word; they may have no connection with society, they may be humble and even illiterate; but married and respectable they invincibly are, and in that atmosphere nothing can go very far wrong.

A salient feature in most of Mr. Stockton's stories is the long, confidential chats between a husband and his wife; they talk over the matter, argue about it, come to an agreement upon it; and the strength of this union of feeling in them makes itself felt all through the tale. No evil can prevail against a united and affectionate and mutually trustful husband and wife. Under their protection the fugitive is safe, the danger is averted, the problems are solved. They form a wholesome and vigorous pith or core or centre of safety and peace within whatever whirlwind may be conjured up to terrify us; all else is transient and untrustworthy and chimerical; but a married pair are everlastingly real and potent for good, and we may tie up to them and dismiss all anxieties. Their well-being is contagious. Throughout whatever storms, their anchor holds.

If you have never detected this element in Mr. Stockton's books, I cannot give you better counsel than to read them all over again, and note how this sweet, strong, conjugial fragrance brings everything into accord, and bestows a durable worth upon what might often, otherwise, be a slight matter. It will help his books to last when many which contain more cleverness and brilliance are forgotten; they are human to the marrow.

The moment a person establishes a theory, the very next thing to happen is the apparition of a violent exception to it. As a sequel to the above remarks, accordingly, I am now constrained to confess that there are no married couples in "Kate Bonnet." But this is true only in the genuine conjugial sense; there is a married couple, but they are not living together—the story begins with their separating—and the wife is the man's second choice, and a singularly bad one. If Captain—or Major—Bonnet, the eponymous pirate of the tale, had stayed content with one marriage, he would likely never have embraced piracy as a profession; but we are allowed to surmise, though it is not stated as a fact, that the captain is somewhat demented; that he is a kind of Don Quixote with a difference; for whereas the Don was inspired by the noblest and most chivalrous sentiments only, the saturnine and bloodthirsty captain is drunk with a thirst for gore, robbery and sensational wickedness; the great Captain Blackbeard is his model and object of envy, and, sad to say, he remains degenerate, and is never redeemed to the bosom of his family, if the beautiful and delightful Kate may be called that.

In fact, the captain goes altogether wrong, and it even seems to me that he resists efforts on Mr. Stockton's part to improve him; there is an insane vanity in the creature which is obdurate to remonstrances. He has indeed a most sensitive and sleepless conscience, which never spares the word of warning and upbraiding in season and out; but this conscience is not placed in the sinner's

INCIDENTS ENOUGH IN PEMBERTON'S NOVEL, BUT NO PLOT

THERE is always a chance for a good novel having for background the present political condition of Europe; for anything may at any moment happen there, and there was never a time when a man of genius and energy, with favoring circumstances, has had a better opportunity to scramble to the top of the heap of ruin which will be the first outcome of the great conflict, when it comes.

I would select Austria as the headquarters for the tale, if I were asked to choose. It is a picturesque country, made up politically of a number of peoples, all with desperate grievances, and headed at present by a ruler who, though one of the most sagacious and shrewd in Europe, is now so old that his finish may arrive any day. Austria, too, is less hackneyed in literature than Russia is, or England; while whatever happens to her will be humanly certain to involve everybody else in the European agglomeration.

But, next perhaps to Austria, France probably offers the best invitation to the fiction monger. She is, to be sure, already in literature up to her neck, and has plenty of home talent to look out for her; but home talent in France is so intensely Frenchy that it is difficult for them to take large or dispassionate views. Besides, France, in fiction at least, still means Paris, and we know Paris only too well—in fiction. But France, or Paris, is always dramatic, emotional, unexpected, and we have not yet ceased to believe that anything is possible there, even a monarchy or an empire. Society in Paris has great variety, innumerable cliques, striking contrasts; and the persons in conspicuous places are full of picturesqueness for the artist of men. There is an immense field for intrigue of the elder Dumas sort, and for studies a la Balzac, or for satirical comment in the style of the modern French school. There are the Quartier, the Faubourg, the Assembly, the army, the painters and the Academy. There is the quarrel with Germany and the friendship with Russia, and the colonial ambitions and perils, and the chronic idea of invading England. In short, material is abundant. You cannot miss it. All you have to do is to choose and to write decently. An absorbing, if not a great, story could be written to-day about France, and it would be easy to slip in a love story between the leaves so as to fulfill the conventional requirements of a romantic fiction.

I, as well as the rest of the reading public, have often met with the name of Max Pemberton, in lists of publishers' new novels, and in the title pages of magazines; but, unlike the majority of the public, perhaps, I have not hitherto happened to read one of his books. That fortune has at length been accorded to me; and the specimen of his work which came to my hands was called "The Giant's Gate," and is published in this country by Frederic Stokes & Co. I opened the book with a great deal of agreeable anticipation; for, so far as one may judge by the extracts from reviewers and the puffs of the publishers, Mr. Pemberton is one of the leaders in modern fiction, and his editions run into six figures. He sails with favoring gales and his poop is beaten gold. The title of his new book suggested romance of the pure type, and a glance through the pages showed that Paris was the scene and the last decade the time. The illustrations by Mr. Piffard looked interesting. And the sub-title of the book, "A Great Adventure," was alluring.

I have read the book, and by close attention I have extracted the thread of the story; the task resembled that of hunting in a haystack for a needle, but it was there. I cannot imagine being so much in need of a needle as to undertake the enterprise of seeking through a haystack for it; and I am not sure that the result of my searchings in Mr. Pemberton's rather portly volume has compensated me for the effort involved. But, as I have got the thread disentangled, I will exhibit it for the reader's benefit, and then make what comments seem called for. It is by no means an unpromising thread of its kind.

The Hero a Soldier

There is in Paris, at the moment our tale begins, a man on horseback—a man of possibilities, who may become emperor and lead the nation to any destiny you please. He is a general of the French army, and the youngest of his rank; he is adored by the populace and courted by society; and doubtless he is feared by the present government. He is not a bad fellow, but on the contrary generous and patriotic, just a trifle cynical, brave, handsome and, in short, endowed with all the qualities of a hero both of life and of drama. He falls in love immediately with a stately English girl, daughter of an earl (the comedian of the piece, or one of them). That gives the clue to the love interest at once. Love of woman and love of country are to be opposed to each other; which will win?

This young General Davignon is at the moment being sought by a touzle-headed, guttural-voiced Russian or German adventurer, Felix Borgia by name, who appears to have invented something which it would be to the advantage of France to secure from him. The true inventor, however, turns out to be, not Borgia, but a youth—hardly more than a boy—Lucien by name, who is partly mad, but wholly a genius of the very first order. He figures as Borgia's slave and office boy, so to speak; he has no worldly ambition, but only a mystic, poetic joy in and love for the great invention he has made—and also for a young girl, Zephyrine, who is Borgia's daughter. What is the invention? It turns out, in due time, to be a submarine vessel which can be steered under water. The author says that this is the only boat of the submarine order which can be so steered. It may be so; at any rate, we will assume it for the sake of the story. Now, Borgia proposes to sell this boat to Davignon, who can therewith invade England and make himself master of France and of Europe. So here we have the second element in the story; both of them good.

The Dreyfus scandal is at its most critical stage; there is hostility between the government and the army, or part of the army, which follows Davignon, and it is a fair gamble that the nation will side with the army, which is to help it reconquer the lost provinces and invade England. Now, we have Davignon in possession of the boat, and therefore potential master of England; and we see him to be no friend of Dreyfus and the Jews (who are being mobbed just then by the Parisian slum dwellers). His chances of seizing the government and running it his own way seem therefore excellent. So, also, thinks the Baroness Pauline d'Arbois, the society arbitress of Paris, and an arch schemer and not yet retired beauty; and so does her set. She professes to own Davignon; she loves him in the society-arbitress way, and it is by means of the money of another lover of hers, the Banker Larine, that the boat, or an option on it, was obtained. Plainly we are on the brink of a coup d'etat. But first, to make sure of his ground, Davignon must make a practical test of the boat which the crazy dreamer Lucien invented, and which the quack adventurer Borgia stole from him. The test is to be a trip across the English Channel and up the Thames to London. This mouth of the Thames, by the way, is the Giant's Gate. The trip is successfully made and most ambitiously described; but here comes in the other end of the plot. When Davignon reaches London he thinks of the invitation to call that his English lady love, the young Countess Kathleen, gave him; and when he thinks of that, and of her, he finds that the idea of destroying England by means of the boat or otherwise loses some of its attractiveness. He goes to Karn Castle to see her, becomes betrothed to her, and thus places himself in the dilemma which we foresaw. Patriotism or love—which shall it be?

Meanwhile, as a side issue, the Anarchists of Paris, at a meeting attended by Davignon himself and an agent of the secret service, Bedotte, selects by lot a young man named Vaudran to assassinate him. This was, of course, before the general left Paris on the boat with Lucien. One night, at Karn, being sleepless, he suddenly sees Vaudran, with a dagger in his hand, at the foot of his bed, waiting to kill him. But he magnetizes and dominates the boy, and sends him back to Paris to act as a spy for the other side. Nevertheless, while he is still on his visit, a shot is fired at him one evening from the shrubbery, by some substitute for Vaudran evidently, which misses him, but hits Kathleen's cousin and Davignon's rival for the love of Kathleen, with whom he was engaged at the moment in a fist fight.

No Consistent Ending

Nothing particular comes of all this, except that Davignon returns to Paris, and finds the train awaiting the match which he only can apply. Nothing more, either, is heard of the boat, though during the trip Lucien, who had recovered the sense of ownership in his own invention which the influence of Borgia had hitherto deprived him of, intimates that, as his father was an Englishman, he would not care to sell the boat to an enemy of England. Nor is there anything else in the volume about the Giant's Gate. Indeed, the truth must now be revealed that, although there are still two hundred pages of the book to come, the plot is at this point brought, for all practical intents and purposes, to an end. What follows is a series of incoherent and unnecessary episodes. Davignon, besought by the Baroness, cannot decide whether or not to strike his blow. He gets so far as to name a day—the first of the great race meeting at Longchamps. But his plans are upset by Lucien, who is in love with Zephyrine, who loves Davignon, and is therefore (Lucien is, I mean) jealous of the general, and carries his animosity so far as not only to fire at the general and wound him in the arm, but not seriously; but he likewise reveals to the government the plot arranged for the premiere at Longchamps the details of which he overheard, in consequence of which Loubet takes action, causes Gallifet to arrest Davignon, and the whole conspiracy goes up in smoke, Davignon being sentenced to a year in a fortress, and thereafter to banishment from France. But what do he or Kathleen care? He has inherited a fortune from a relative, and he will marry Kathleen and live happy ever after, as soon as his term in the fortress—where he is treated with every indulgence—is over. What becomes of Lucien, of Borgia, of Vaudran, of Bedotte, of the Baroness, or even of Dreyfus, we are not told; they simply drop out of sight. As for the boat, that was broken into small pieces by Lucien in the laboratory with a hammer; which, as the boat was built of steel and could not have been less than thirty feet long, was a feat worth talking about for a feeble boy just out of his teens. But he was rendered herculean, I suppose, by his jealousy.

What does it all mean? So far as I can surmise, it means that Mr. Pemberton set out to write a story to order for serial publication; and he had in his head at the time a few vague notions, but good enough in their way, as to what the tale should be about. He trusts to luck that they would come out all right. But writing from month to month, with part of the story irrevocably in type, and part in his head, or not in it as yet, but trying to get in, he found he had exhausted his material ere he was half way through the space allotted to him in the magazine. But business engagements must be kept, the thing had to be spun out somehow.

And yet Mr. Pemberton cannot be devoid of ability, and he had here the material to make a lively and interesting story. He must have written better than this in the past, and he cannot therefore help knowing what an absolute failure he has made of his present attempt. Having once began in the magazine (if my hypothesis be correct, and for Mr. Pemberton's sake I hope it is) of course he had to go on, but surely he might have suppressed the publication in book form. In so doing I cannot but think that he would have consulted his own advantage, even from the pecuniary point of view. No man can continue turning out this sort of thing and retain his vogue. There must be some limit to the toleration or to the ignorance or indifference of readers. Mr. Churchill's "Crisis" was poor enough, but "The Giant's Gate" makes it look like a classic. What must be called, in order to call it anything, the imaginative part—the voyage under water of the patent boat—is so ludicrously impossible that a child would reject it, and not less absurd is the assumption that a boy like Lucien (only there never could be such a boy) could design a craft which solved the secret for which all the scientists of the age had been searching.

It was common for the doctors in the outer courts to discuss the niceties of the Jewish law and to split hairs over the Sabbath Day, and how it should be kept, and the ceremonials, which, to many of them, were a mere matter of form. And it is not at all an impossible situation to have this boy put from His eager heart one or two startling questions to a group of doctors with their students, and to puzzle them by a knowledge that He had gleaned from communion with nature and with all the books and doctors that His own village of Nazareth afforded.

His mother knew more about this boy than anyone in the world, but it is recorded that "she kept all these sayings in her heart." Through all His life He was identified with the city where He passed His childhood, and the blind beggar by the way breaks through the hum of the multitude with the cry, "Jesus, Thou Son of David," because he had been told that Jesus of Nazareth was passing by.

LINCOLN'S FAMOUS DUEL.

Which Wasn't Fought, Recalled by the Mississippi River's Destruction of the Historic Spot.

[Alton Correspondence Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Within a few months the famous old dueling ground in St. Charles county, Mo., will have ceased to exist. The shifting current of the Mississippi River has attacked the little plot of land, and it is rapidly succumbing to erosion of the waters.

The St. Charles dueling ground has been the scene of more "affairs of honor" than any other one spot in the western country. Its chief title to fame, however, rests on the fact that it was there that Abraham Lincoln met James A. Shields, afterward brigadier-general and United States Senator from the States of Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri, successively, in the only duel to which he was ever provoked.

The dueling ground is directly across the river from this city. In the early days of the State it was much frequented by those who thought their honor required vindication with the pistol or sword, and the accessibility of the place soon gave it a wide reputation. The laws of Illinois did not look kindly on the practice of dueling, and prescribed such penalties for the practice that even the most hot-headed fire-eater was glad to get outside the State before a hostile meeting with an adversary. The laws of Missouri took no cognizance of the dueling habit, and it was considered quite the proper thing then to determine disputes by the shedding of blood.

That was in the old days, however. A more enlightened spirit has since prevailed in reference to such customs, and in consequence it has been many years since a duel has taken place on the St. Charles ground. Its fame has made it consecrated ground in the memory of many Illinoisans and Missourians, and a few years after the war steps were taken to preserve the spot in its original shape. The dueling ground was in a little ravine, through which a creek at one time wound its way. This disappeared one summer, and left nothing to show its former presence, but its desolate bed and a number of huge boulders that the waters had left sticking up from the ground. Enough money was raised by subscription to remove these boulders and to erect an iron fence around the grounds, and in that condition they have remained ever since.

Mr. Lincoln's meeting there with Shields has furnished one of the few ludicrous episodes with which the dueling field has ever been credited. Shields was then Auditor of the State of Illinois. The finances of the State were in a deplorable condition; the treasury was empty; Auditor's warrants were selling at half their nominal value; no more money was to be borrowed, and taxation was dreaded by both political parties more than disgrace. The currency of the State banks was well nigh worthless, but it was virtually the only circulating medium in Illinois.

In the middle of August, 1842, the Governor, Auditor and Treasurer issued a circular forbidding the payment of State taxes in this depreciated paper. This order was taken by the Whigs as indicating on the part of these officers a keener interest in the integrity of their salaries than in the public welfare, and it was therefore severely attacked in all the opposition papers of the State. The sharpest assault it had to endure, however, was in a communication printed in the Sangamon Journal, which not only dissected the administration circular with the most savage satire, but covered the Auditor with merciless personal ridicule. It purported to come from a farmer's widow, who expressed in this fashion her discontent with the evil course of affairs.

Shields was a man of inordinate vanity, and a corresponding irascibility. He was for that reason an irresistible mark for satire. His fury against the unknown author of the satire was the subject of much merriment in Springfield. The next week another letter appeared from a different hand, but adopting the machinery of the first, in which the widow offered to make up the quarrel by marrying the Auditor, and this in turn was followed by an epithalamium, in which this happy compromise was celebrated in very bad verse. In the change of hands all the humor of the thing had vanished, and nothing was left but feminine mischief on one side, and the exasperation of wounded vanity on the other.

Shields had talked so much about the matter, that he felt imperatively called upon to act. He therefore sent a messenger to the editor of the paper and demanded from him the name of the author of the articles. The editor was in a quandary. The first article had been written by Mr. Lincoln, but the two following it had been written by two young women who took an active interest in politics, and could not let the chance slip to have a little fun with Shields. The editor appealed to Mr. Lincoln in his dilemma, and the latter answered:

"Oh, tell Shields that I wrote them. Don't let the names of the women appear in the matter."

As soon as Shields had the name of Mr. Lincoln given to him he began to boast of the vengeance he would take, and sent representatives to Mr. Lincoln with a challenge couched in the most blustering terms. Mr. Lincoln was disposed to laugh at the matter, and his friends tried in every way to patch the thing up with Shields, but nothing would do the latter but a hostile meeting. Mr. Lincoln had to finally consent to this, but he never seemed to divest himself of the idea that the whole proceeding was a huge joke. They repaired to St. Charles, and Lincoln, being the challenged party, had the choice of weapons. After the arrival at the dueling grounds, he was asked what weapons he would select. With a quizzical twinkle in his eye, he replied:

"Let's have some originality about this duel. I prefer cannon at fifty paces."

The absurdity of the proposition created a general laugh, in which even Shields was forced to join, and while he was in this tractable frame of mind the seconds reasoned with him, with the result that he and Lincoln were soon talking as amiably together as if nothing had ever happened, and the duel was off.

The prominence of the men had attracted general attention to the duel, and when the boats carrying the principals and seconds were seen crossing the Mississippi back to Alton a large crowd stood on the shore awaiting news of the result of the supposed encounter. Again Mr. Lincoln's whimsical tendencies saw the chance for another joke. Placing a log in his skiff he had it covered with clothes, and as the boat approached the shore the spectators thought it was the body of one of the principals. When they reached the shore, Mr. Lincoln coolly reached down, took the clothes off the log and rolled the latter into the river. It took the spectators on the shore a moment to realize the situation, but when they did, a roar of laughter went up that dispelled the general tension.

The duelists remained in Alton all night, and dined at a hotel with their friends, and, although both men fought each other with intensity during political campaigns, they remained firm friends ever afterward. The old dueling ground at St. Charles thus brought together two statesmen who would have probably remained bitter enemies throughout their life, and made bosom friends of them.

MESSAGES MONEY BEARS.

Inscriptions Across Bills Usually Comic, but One, "My Last Dollar, Good-by," Suggests Tragedy.

[Pittsburgh Leader:] It was a common, ordinary, every-day dollar bill, dirty enough to justify the opprobrium of "filthy lucre," but no dirtier than thousands of its companion pieces that repose in the musty hoard of misers; true, its ends were frayed like the edges of a seedy individual's trousers, and its face was crumpled and creased so badly that the features of Gen. U. S. Grant vignetted at one end were nearly as deeply furrowed as was the kindly, homely physiognomy of the rail splitter President, old Abe Lincoln, which adorned the opposite corner.

But it was not the dilapidated appearance of the note, nor its frayed edges, nor its musty odor, neither was it the face of Grant or Lincoln that made this note different from the four similar pieces of United States currency that were laid on the desk of a prominent downtown physician yesterday morning. This particular note's distinguishing mark was an inscription in a legible but nervous hand, written across its face. These are the words:

"My last dollar; good-by."

There was a story in that note, and the doctor's clerk read it at a glance.

"I'll just keep that myself," he said as he fished from his trousers pockets a silver dollar to take its place.

"My last dollar; good-by."

The handwriting was that of a person of evident education and refinement; a student of chirography could tell that at a glance; it wasn't a joke, either, nor an idle, flippant sentiment, but the real expression of the genuine sorrow of parting, not the sorrow that comes at the parting of old friends; no, indeed, not that; but the remorse that comes with blighted hopes and the final collapse of an unequal struggle against adversity. If it hadn't been a masculine hand one would have fancied he could detect the stains of tears that may have fallen as the farewell was written.

"I wonder what became of him," said the clerk, as he turned the dirty bill over and over again, and scanned its corners in search of some clew to the identity of the unfortunate who had penned those pregnant five words:

"My last dollar; good-by."

And yet he said it just as though he knew the identity of the quondam possessor of the bill, for the serious trend of his thought had built up a living, breathing embodiment of hard luck; a derelict on life's turbulent sea, who in the figment of his imagination had become a personal acquaintance in distress.

"If I only knew I'd give it back—but what's the use moralizing about some one we know nothing of."

He was back to earth and the dollar bill went into the recesses of his pocket to come out again perhaps at the theater box office or a favored cigar stand.

The Leader man, who had been a witness to this little real life episode, found it a difficult thing to forget. Those five words possessed a puissance that irresistibly wove into romance and tragedy the author of them. Who could he be? What was his story? Did he ever get another dollar? Mayhap it was his last. What then? Starvation or Marshalsea—which?

But how came the doctor's debtor, a fashionably-dressed woman of society, to get possession of the bill? Maybe she could solve the question. The reporter soon found her, but was disappointed.

"I got it from my butcher," she said, "on January 17 last; you see it is dated January 16, so that it came to him the day after the words were written."

So it was dated "January 16, 1902," by the same hand that had written the other inscription.

The butcher didn't know from whom the bill came; in fact, hadn't noticed it at all, so that all further trace was lost in the meat shop. Probably the money had been spent for food, perhaps victuals for a starving wife and children. Who can tell where the next meal came from

"Oh," said the paying teller of a Fifth-avenue banking-house, "it isn't an extraordinary thing for people to write on their paper money. We get many bills that are thus mutilated. It is a sort of passion among some people to scribble, the same sort of a fancy that makes otherwise sensible folks write their names in public places or cut them in the woodwork of public buildings, railroad stations, the sort of vandalism that inspired some village bard to write the memorable lines:

"'Fools' names, like fools' faces,
Are always seen in public places.'

"But I must confess there is something different about this dollar bill you speak of. We don't often find such sentiment on money; it is usually a funny or flippant phrase or a familiar bit of verse. Here's a one-dollar silver certificate that came in this morning; it has on its face '16 to 1' I never get it back,' a tribute to William Jennings Bryan and the free-silver cult, probably written at the time that heresy was a live issue, or perhaps some wag was lending it to a friend and never expected the loan to be liquidated.

"A check came in the other day across the face of which was written in the well-known hand of the maker of the check these words:

"'The old man's drunk again.'

"Evidently he was sober enough to draw the check, but at the same time drunk enough to give the fact away. It was a check for a large sum, and as the penmanship clearly indicated a condition of quasi-inebriacy, I refused to honor the demand. The party was very indignant, but as it turned out subsequently, our caution saved the check maker a good round sum. A shark had simply taken advantage of his befuddled condition and induced him to sign his name for an obligation which did not exist. Cases of this kind are rare, but we often run across checks that are written on by the absent-minded or drink-muddled men—writings which occasionally impair a man's credit."

And so ended the quest for the luckless author of the fated words:

"My last dollar; good-by."

SCHOOL FOR NURSEMAIDS.

Girls Learn to Care for Babies—Demand for Graduates Far Exceeds Supply.

[New York Tribune:] Cooking schools are legion and domestic science departments flourish in nearly every woman's college nowadays, but the training school for nursemaids, in connection with the Babies' Hospital, is almost unique in the line of specialized instruction.

In the hospital, which is at Lexington avenue and Fiftieth street, such a department has been in operation for some years, and its students, after six months of training, are sent forth with the dignity of a diploma and a knowledge of children's needs that they might not otherwise have gained in a lifetime.

The first thing the student is taught is how to wash and dress the baby. The proper temperature of the water, the best kinds of soap, the length of time to be given to the bath and precautions against taking cold, all are carefully taught, with the convalescent babies as subjects.

The easier methods of dressing the little one so that it shall not be irritated by thoughtless handling are next in order, and the process is made a festivity rather than an ordeal. How to put the pins in so that they shall not assert themselves with uncomfortable emphasis is unquestionably an item of knowledge well worth acquiring, in the opinion of the babies.

Each student has her little charges, who are attended as carefully and methodically as if they were the children of wealth, and they repay the affectionate attention they receive with cooings and smiles that their attendants consider "too sweet for anything."

How to keep the feeding bottles perfectly clean and how to "modify" the milk for the babies are taught with scrupulous exactitude, and the hospital pantry forms an admirable object lesson. Scores of tiny mugs are ranged on shelves, each mug holding a rubber mouthpiece in an antiseptic solution, and marked on the outside with its baby owner's name. Every bottle also has a metal name tag attached, so that each child is fed from its own bottle at all times.

The students are taught how to prepare meat pulp for delicate babies, and how to care for them in ordinary ailments. They are instructed also in the dangers of infection from tuberculosis and other diseases, and in a variety of ways are rendered competent to give such care as was once the province of the grandmother.

No student is accepted without an investigation into her antecedents, and any one with the slightest tuberculous taint is refused. Good health, good character and intelligence are the requisites for admission to this practical college.

Six months are given to the course of training, and then the student leaves as a kind of "probationer," for she does not receive a full certificate until she has been three months in a private situation and filled the place satisfactorily. She is then a full-fledged graduate. In her various situations the hospital follows her career, and keeps a record of her behavior and qualifications for reference.

So popular is the school that there is always a waiting list, for the wages received by its graduates range from $20 to $30 a month. Every one in the class to graduate in September is already engaged, and the demand is ten times the supply, says Miss Marianna Wheeler, superintendent of the hospital.

The nursemaids who graduate from this school retain the neat hospital uniform, which removes the difficulty in regard to dress that many employers encounter. A dark blue gown with white apron and cap is the costume, the apron having bib and shoulder straps.

THE LAGGARD.

The morn was fair that broke above
  The April green upon the hills,
And from the bough the robin's love
  Was poured in endless, eager trills.

I sang along the pleasant way
  With high resolves and boundless hopes
And smelt the fragrance of the clay
  Fresh turned upon the fertile slopes.

The noon was fair upon the plain,
  The far-off spires glistened white,
And all the brooks sang one refrain—
  The love I dreamed of through the night.

Through all the afternoon I heard
  The wooing winds that passed along,
Where each dry blade and stalk they stirred
  Was lovelier for the gentle song.

I heard Love calling through the day
  That made me glad and was so fair—
At night my hope was torn away,
  The damps of death were in the air.

At night another held her fast,
  He had not stayed to hear and see
The endless glories where he passed,
  But got there just ahead of me.

WOMAN'S WEIGH

Does not always keep pace with woman's will. There are energetic, home-loving women who by sheer force of will keep themselves going, and fancy that strength of will can take the place of strength of body. But it can't. Every day will see a loss of strength, and that loss will be indicated by a loss of weight. When the weight begins to fall below the normal it is time to ask, Why?

In general, ill health in women may be traced to those womanly diseases which sap the strength and undermine the vitality. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. Where the disease is marked by loss of flesh, there is a steady regaining of weight coincident with the cure which proves the renewal of health to be thorough and permanent.

"Three years ago," writes Mrs. John Graham, of 2018 Plumb Street (Frankford), Philadelphia, Penna. "I had a very bad attack of dropsy which left me with heart trouble, and also a very weak back. At times I was so bad that I did not know what to do with myself. I came to Philadelphia two years ago, and picking up o[illegible] your little books one day began to read what your 'Favorite Prescription' had done for others, I determined to try it myself. I took seven bottles, and to-day I am a strong, well woman, weighing 162 pounds. Have gained 2[illegible] pounds since I started to use your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

RUPTURE..

Rupture Sufferers, by this time you know that I am not a stranger here, proposing to do what I cannot do, but a resident of Los Angeles for six years, with a record of cures that speaks for itself, as hundreds of Los Angeles citizens have been cured by my Rupture Treatment, without injection or operation, nor detention from business one hour, no matter how long standing or severe the case may be. Age is no bar to cures, as I have cured children, 8 months, to the aged of 84 years, and have done this without guarantee or false promises. As my work speaks for itself, I have no time to run down other people's treatment; also will say I need not beg rupture sufferers to come to me for treatment, as is done by other traveling agents, who come and go before their trunk is unpacked, and who the first day began begging for patients by offering free consultation and no cure, no pay, but cannot show the cures.

I feel it my duty, as a benefactor to suffering humanity, to warn you against treatments by injections, as I find it a daily complaint from those who have been so treated, that they have been injured in various ways, such as blood poisoning, etc., and to these poor sufferers I can only say that I do not care to offer my treatment as "Injection Treatments," greatly complicate the trouble. I have no objection if you have been operated upon by honest surgeons, many of whom can be found in Los Angeles, but I again warn you against being butchered by injection, which is only a slow method of torture.

DEADLY PARASITES.

TAPE WORMS, Stomach, Intestinal, Thread Worms and all other parasites which infest the human body, which are the cause of so many Chronic Troubles, can be removed without inconvenience or fasting.

Are there times when you have a ravenous appetite, and other times when the thought of food is revolting? Do you get dizzy? Is your mind dull? Is your memory poor? Are you easily dazed? Do your limbs get numb? Do you have headache? Are you easily excited? Do your temples throb? Do your hands tremble? Does your heart flutter? Are you easily irritated? Are you always anxious? Do your muscles twitch? Do you suffer from sleeplessness? Are you easily frightened? Does sleep not refresh you? Do you suffer from neuralgia? Do you have horrible dreams? Do you start up in your sleep? Does the least thing annoy you? Do you have pains in top or back of the head? Do you have pains in the back? Do you have languid or tired feeling? Is there rush of blood to the head? Does a lump come up in your throat? Do you see queer things in the dark? Do you wake up in a cold perspiration? Have you wandering pains over the body?

We have within the past six months cured over FIVE HUNDRED cases of so-called stomach trouble, and have absolutely cured five cases of epilepsy.

These parasites, or worms, can also cause consumption, affecting the liver and lungs very often, for these animals feed upon the nutritive juices, thus debilitating little by little the individual. It would be tiresome to try to enumerate the many diseases that are caused by these parasites. These facts are confirmed by many competent authors.

We diagnose and tell you whether you have any of these parasites or not. All charges for treatment are moderate. No charge if you are not satisfied.

CONSULTATION AND DIAGNOSIS FREE. Hours 9 a.m. to 12; 1 to 4 p.m.

Thousands of People Killed

Annually from catarrh of the kidneys and bladder. A peculiar acid is generated and set at liberty by this disease, which permeates the blood, weakens and destroys its renovating power and allows the system no opportunity to throw off this malady until the poison is neutralized and expelled from the system. Brick dust sediments indicate uric-acid poisoning. It is here that S. B. Catarrh Cure becomes of the most vital consequence, because unless arrested at this stage the disease makes rapid progress to an early grave. S. B. Catarrh Cure permeates every fluid of the body, cleanses it from all impurities and is the greatest uric-acid solvent ever discovered. One bottle will convince the most skeptical of this fact. MEDICAL ETHICS.

Had the Physicians of the Electro-Chemic Institute, 244½ South Broadway, Adhered Strictly to the Ethical Code They Would Not Have Announced the Establishment of Their Institution in Los Angeles.

The Natural Result of Such a Course Would Have Been That Few Would Have Known of Their Coming and What They Are Accomplishing by Means of the Scientific Application of Electro-Chemistry.

When the business manager of the Electro-Chemic Institute reached Los Angeles some months ago he was somewhat disconcerted by the number of physicians and medical institutions already in the field. It appeared to him that there was hardly room for more. In visiting a prominent office building it seemed to him that every other suite was occupied by a physician. The newspapers teemed with medical advertisements. One prominent street seemed almost entirely given up to institutions for the relief of the afflicted. Besides the regular practitioners there were Osteopathists by the score. There were Electric Exterminators and Electric Eradicators of disease. There were Masseurs and Christian Scientists. There were Water Cures, Sun Cures and Faith Cures. There were Electric Light Baths and Mud Baths, but notwithstanding all this, after mature deliberation it became a settled conviction that in spite of an apparently over-crowded field there was a decided need in Los Angeles of an institution founded upon late discoveries in Electro-Chemistry as applied successfully in the treatment of serious diseases usually incurable under older and less scientific methods. Acting upon this conviction the Electro-Chemic Institute was established. It cost a great deal of money to install the magnificent instruments required in this twentieth century practice, but no mistake has been made and already the public appreciates the magnitude of the work contemplated by the Institute. Already the regular profession realizes that instead of physicians who criticise and disparage the noble work which it is doing for the relief of suffering humanity, the Electro-Chemic physicians fully understand and appreciate that amongst God's greatest creations is the sincere and over-worked family doctor. Every fair-minded person realizes that the scope of modern medicine is too great for any one mind to master it all. There must be specialties and specialists. The Electro-Chemic physicians are experienced and trained specialists and they wish the public and the regular profession to know what they do—what they are eminently fitted to do, both as to the knowledge of their work and their equipment for it.

As conscientious physicians we hate to be unethical and will only transgress the code in one particular, and that is to tell the people what we can do—what we are doing—and the best way to do this is by speaking through the medium of the daily press.

There are already many happy homes in Los Angeles and vicinity, rendered happy by dear ones who have been cured quickly and painlessly after hope had been all but abandoned. There have been cures of Cancer, Deafness, Asthma, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Epilepsy, (Fits,) Piles, Fistula, Appendicitis (without surgical operation,) serious diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Special Diseases of Women, Distressing and Disfiguring Blood and Skin Affections. Chronic and Painful Diseases of Men and all have been cured pleasantly, no pain, no cutting, no burning.

The greatest and most popular clergyman of his time, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, spoke the words which follow:

"I am glad that the doctor cured him; I am glad that the doctor put it in the paper that he could cure him, and if any doctor is certain that he can cure such disease and does not put in it the paper, I am sorry. What a pity it would have been had this doctor, with his wealth of science and experience, left him uncured! What a pity it would have been if the afflicted man had been so prejudiced against advertising as to read the responsible certificate of the doctor and yet give him the go-by as a quack! What are the newspapers for if not to circulate information? What more valuable information can a newspaper give than to tell a sick man where he can be cured? If a man has devoted his life and labor to the study of a special class of disease, the necessity of saying so becomes all the more pressing. His duty to advertise becomes imperious. The remedy for the lying advertisements of quacks is for the honest man to tell the truth. A really able man, whatever may be his gifts, makes a great mistake if he fails to use those gifts through want of advertising."

We claim that this great preacher has spoken prophetic words. We know what we can do. We advertise what we can do, and we do what we advertise.

We cure Cancer by X-Ray treatment. This treatment of Cancer is painless. The germs of the disease are destroyed by this chemical light pouring into them. Most disease germs cannot stand the light, especially the chemical light of the X-Ray. There is no heat about the Electro-Chemic X-Ray light, and even though a cancer may be very raw and sore, there is no pain from this new treatment, and the healing begins with the first application of the Ray.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Electro-Chemic physicians are very busy men, they have reserved one hour daily, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., during which they give a free demonstration of the X-Ray.

This demonstration is particularly interesting to persons suffering from obscure diseases, troubles that are causing the family physician considerable trouble to locate. The X-Ray stops guessing and in connection with the isolation of the Bacillus Tuberculosis, it is possible to discover consumption in the earliest stages and when diagnosed early, consumption is always a curable disease.

We cure Consumption with the X-Ray and active oxygen treatments. The Bacillus Tuberculosis cannot live under the light of the Ray, and the active oxygen goes directly into the blood, strengthening it and making it possible for the sufferer to gain weight and strength. We do not claim to cure Consumption in cases which have gone so far as to leave no foundation upon which to build. Nevertheless this new treatment will benefit consumptives, no matter how far the disease is advanced, and in cases in the early stages it offers great assurance of permanent cures.

We cure Deafness by Electrical Massage and Cataphoric Electrical applications to the partially-paralyzed nerves of hearing. We cure cases that are pronounced hopeless by physicians who do not know of this treatment, or at least who have not gone to the expense of learning about it and of installing the proper instruments for its application. It doesn't matter how long one may have been deaf, there is always a great probability of a cure by the Electro-Chemic treatment.

We cure Catarrh of the Throat, Nose and Lungs by our new method quickly and permanently. We restore the loss of voice and cure hoarseness. Singers who find it impossible to reach their high notes comfortably and satisfactorily will soon find the voice growing strong and normal under the influence of this new treatment of ours. Asthma is cured. The smothering and choking and fighting for breath which asthmatics undergo is needless suffering, for we can control the paroxysms in a short time, and cure the trouble permanently by the careful course of treatment which we have formulated for this serious disease.

We cure Piles and Fistula without cutting. Our treatment in these serious cases is painless and quick and amongst our most grateful patients are ladies and gentlemen who have been perfectly cured of Piles and Fistulas. The reason we can do these things is because we know how and because we have the necessary tools to do it with, and in the event of our not having them, we have the money to buy them or to have them made according to our orders.

The ladies who have taken the Electro-Chemic course are staunch friends of the Institute. Many suffering women are being cured by pleasant and painless methods, who have been looking forward with fear and trembling to the surgeon and operating table. A few Electro-Chemic treatments has brought the bloom back to the cheeks of many weary, worn and pain-racked women. A few treatments will take the pain out of the tired back, will regulate the sufferer and will thicken weak and watery blood.

Just a few words to the men. More men are victimized and made miserable for life through misrepresentations by doctors than one can imagine. They are frequently fooled into believing simple physiological phenomena to be evidence of serious and deeply-seated disease action. They are frightened by the fake doctor until they give up their money for something they do not need, and often become really sick through worrying over some imaginary ill. To discouraged, fooled and disappointed men, to those who really are sick, the Electro-Chemic course offers prompt and permanent relief, whether the trouble be one of the Nervous System, the Physical System, or a Constitutional Malady of the Blood.

Consultation and examination are free. Those who can do so should call at the office, 244½ South Broadway, one door south of City Hall, and those who cannot call may write for full instructions regarding a course of treatment to be used at home. The office hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and 7 to 8 p.m. daily, and on Sundays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Pleasant waiting-rooms have been provided especially for ladies, and the men have a waiting-room of their own in another part of the building. It must be remembered that the Electro-Chemic Specialists are accredited and registered physicians, as well as graduates of the very best Colleges of Electro-Therapeutics.

Los Angeles Shall Ring

With the Fame of Hale Suits.

More than a thousand new garments are here.

Who's doing the suit business this year?—"It's Hale's." Can you wonder? Such clever tailoring surpasses a woman's very hopes. Hale suits seem to fit the exact needs, they add a touch of beauty to the most perfect form, they beautify every figure, and they fairly radiate with tailored smartness.

Prices go ever so low—ridiculously low. Even the best of them are well within your reach. Not a suit here that does not seem worth half as much again as you're asked to pay.

Note the fascinating values for Monday.

Real Description of This Suit.

A Lovely Suit

We'll Sell at $11.50.

This is a charming little eton suit and we must insist on your seeing it. Of course, if you wish a higher priced costume, we have a wealth of them to show you, but provided it is your intention to get something that is tasteful and refined for just as small a price as possible this is certainly a suit that you can't pass by.

First of all you will be much taken with its jaunty eton style and you will like also the handsome gray covert cloth of which it is made, and every thread is wool. Has a vest of black moire silk which gives such a pretty contrast with the gray material. Comes with bell shaped sleeves, prettiest of flounce skirts with the prettiest of flare effects. Skirt is tastefully trimmed and the jacket is silk lined. Do you wonder that we say Hale's suit department will be crushed with well dressed women tomorrow?

Another Wonderful Suit

This One $15.00.

This is an all wool basket cloth suit, and you will be delighted with its picturesque effect. It has that clever tailored air that after all is what a woman most admires in a costume. You would never dream it cost but $15.00 if you saw it on your friend or neighbor. It has the smartest little eton jacket buttoned down the front, trimmed with taffeta. Comes with a new shaped collar, nicely stitched, and cuffs to match. The skirt is prettily trimmed. You may have your choice of gray, blue or black. Our New York buyer inserted a note in these suits telling us how popular they had proved in some of the favorite New York stores. Los Angeles women will be quick to take advantage of the chance $15.00 seems a most ridiculous little price for a neat, tasteful costume in pure woolen material. Not by any means a big quantity of them on sale.

New Jacket $5.00

Made of fine covert cloth with a double breasted dip front, handsomely stitched edges, lined in Romaine silk, in tan only.

A Stunning, Clever, Tailor Made Suit $22

There are many, many women who mean to pay just this price for a suit. Needn't go to an exclusive suit store or to a high priced dry goods store and spend your money for some one's profit. Suits couldn't be more charming than this one. You understand how the Hale store reaches into the very heart of Dame Fashion's workshop and picks out the cleverest, smartest, newest costumes the moment they appear.

This suit comes in a handsome brown cheviot. It has an eton jacket in a double breasted style, new shaped velvet collar, square cut reveres, dip front, and jacket is handsomely silk lined. The skirt is attractively and tastefully trimmed. Other suits at the same price are made with a blouse effect with flounce stitched skirt. They are marvelous costumes for the money, and we wonder ourselves how it is possible to sell them so low.

Spring Jacket $8.00

This comes 19 in. long, made of a fine quality of broadcloth with silk velvet collar, lined with silk serge; has turnback cuffs, six pearl buttons, handsome silk tucked reveres, black or tan.

Read description of this suit.

Lovely, Stylish, Suit.

Hale's Price Is $25.

This suit, like the others we have mentioned today, is a more than remarkable value; yet we could speak of dozens of other designs just as worthy your quick response. You see the department is fairly loaded with tasteful costumes at all sorts of tempting prices.

And the suit—It comes in the prettiest new spring style, made of etamine goods, with the popular Gibson blouse waist, with vest of moire silk. The skirt has a narrow flounce with fold edge with moire silk. The costume is light weight and most women will think it just what they have been looking for. Colors are castor or black.

No tailor in the country could fit you so smoothly and effectively. From top to bottom the suit has an aspect that is bewitchingly becoming.

AMONG REAL ESTATE OWNERS AND DEALERS.

A PERIOD OF HEALTHY DEVELOPMENT IN PROGRESS.

Several Sales of Business Properties, That are to Be Followed by Erection of Business Blocks—Buying Active in Residence Section.

The market opened with a sale of Broadway business property at a good figure, and this was followed by several other large transactions. Trading has been brisk, and active all the week, and in closing the market is stronger and healthier than ever before. A period of active development is in progress.

In Ventura County.

An English syndicate has purchased the Rancho Santa Clara del Norte, owned by Leopoldo Schiappa Pietra, for $1,113,880. The deal, which was referred to in The Times of Wednesday, has been on for the past year, and was only closed within the past few days. The property was deeded first to E. L. Temple, who transferred it to the California Fruit and Farming Company, Limited, of Manchester, Eng. H. G. Mirfin represented the Manchester capitalists. The tract conveyed includes 7000 acres of the richest and choicest land in that portion of the country, and embraces one of the finest lima-bean ranches in the world. It is proposed to set out between 1000 and 2000 acres to lemons, and out of the land available for walnuts, 3000 to 4000 acres will be set out to that product. Every acre that is available for that purpose will be set to lemons and walnuts. The rest will be used for general farming. The general plan proposed will include the founding of a town and the syndicate will build homes for its employés.

Included in this transfer is 55 per cent. of the stock of the Santa Clara Water and Irrigation Company, of which Schiappa Pietra owned the controlling interest. The rancho is one of the old Mexican grants. It originally consisted of 13,000 acres. It is five miles from Montalvo, two miles from Saticoy, nine miles from Hueneme, ten miles from Ventura, and four miles from Oxnard. This deal will doubtless be of great benefit to Ventura county.

Broadway, Below Third.

One of the purchases of business property noted last week was that by which A. C. Bilicke secured from Mrs. Jesus A. de Sepulveda, through the agencies of Taylor & Albaugh and Strong & Dickinson, a lot 50x155 feet on the west side of Broadway 150 feet north of Fourth street, with three small single-story brick buildings, of nominal value, for the asserted price of $120,000. This is at the rate of $2400 per front foot, which is the highest price yet paid for inside lots in this locality, but it was an all-cash transaction, and the purchase is followed by an announcement of intention to improve the property in the near future with a four-story brick business block. It is reported that the actual price paid is about 15 per cent. less. This means additional development and more money to be put in circulation.

The constantly-growing number of such transactions is undoubtedly indicative of a period of greater expansion than has been experienced here for the past few years, but it does not necessarily follow that the old-time features of strong, healthy growth which have hitherto characterized the development of this city are to be discarded.

Third Street.

Mrs. Jesus A. de Sepulveda, who recently sold the remaining fifty-foot frontage of her old homestead on the west side of Broadway between Third and Fourth streets, for $120,000, has reinvested $50,000 of the money in a lot 50x120.9 feet, located on the north side of Third street between Broadway and Hill streets, and just east of the Conservative Life building. The property was bought of W. H. Beman of Denver, Colo., through the agency of R. A. Rowan. It is improved with a three-story brick business building, with handsome pressed-brick front, which is occupied as a restaurant and sanitarium by the California Medical, Missionary and Benevolent Association, and it yields a rental that pays a fair interest on the investment. It was purchased by the present grantor in the early part of this year for about $45,000. The price at which it has just been sold is some advance upon that figure, but it is not a greater advance than that experienced in the prices of other well-placed business properties.

On Main, Below Fifth.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Leffingwell has purchased of the Santa Ema Land Company, as an investment, through Culum C. Chapman, 50x155 feet on the west side of Main street about midway between Fifth and Sixth streets, with frame dwelling, of nominal value, for $32,500. This is at the rate of $650 per front foot, which is top notch so far for frontage in this locality. The property was bought by the present grantors about three months ago for $22,500, or at $450 per front foot. It seems that the predictions made by The Times concerning an increase of values in Main-street property are beginning to be realized.

Opposite Central Park.

Some of the week's purchases were of properties on streets parallel with the principal thoroughfares of trade. One of these was the deal by which J. H. Spires secured from Dr. Henderson Hayward, for $25,000, through the agency of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., a lot, 60x170 feet, on the west side of Olive street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, with a thirty-eight-room three-story frame building, known as the Virginia Hotel. The property is well located, fronting Central Park. It now pays a fair interest on the purchase price, and as the city grows and expands, it is certain to receive a good share of the increase in values that will result.

Buying Outside the Business Districts.

Roy T. Goff buys of I. L. Loman, through W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., 60x165 feet on the east side of Figueroa between Tenth and Eleventh streets, unimproved, for $5000. The same firm sells for the estate of Mary Ulyard, deceased, to A. W. Rhodes, 50x155 feet, on the west side of Flower, fifty feet south of Eighth street, with five-room dwelling of small value, for $5000. It also sells for J. M. Clute and John Tilotson to I. L. Loman 150x165 feet, on the east side of Flower street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, unimproved, for $6000, and for Isaac Norton to C. E. Sumner, 25x138 feet, on the east side of Los Angeles street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, with small building of little value for $5000. Purchases were all made as investments.

An Acreage Tract.

J. A. Graves sells to a local investor through W. L. Carter, 15.75 acres of land located on Alhambra road, just south of the Southern Pacific Railroad near its junction with the Santa Fé, west of the G. A. Hodgkins tract, which extents to the west bank of the Los Angeles River, and about a quarter of a mile north of Macy street, without valuable improvements, for $25,000.

Some Recent Purchases.

J. W. Gibbs sells to T. W. Brotherton, through Neiswender & Raymer, 35x90 feet, on the north side of First street between Spring and Broadway, and just west of the Larronde Block, with three small single-story brick buildings, for $20,000. This is valuable property and should be improved.

The same firm has sold for Robert Hale to J. W. Gibbs, 46x165 feet on the east side of Hill street between Fourth and Fifth streets, improved, with a two-story frame building known as the Hotel Le Roy, for $31,000. It has also sold for T. W. Brotherton to Louis Kleinpeter, 50x165 feet unimproved, on the east side of Maple avenue 150 feet north of Sixth street, for $3000, and purchaser will improve property with a modern flat building which will cost about $10,000.

On Main, Below Second.

Dr. West Hughes and Dr. Henderson Hayward have purchased through Ion L. Clark 60x178 feet on the east side of Main between Second and Third streets, without improvements of great value, for $45,000, and will build a three-story brick business block on property at an early date. It is said that several applications for space in proposed building have already been received.

On Broadway and Elsewhere.

Charles W. Munger buys of L. Florence Heine, through Alex MacKeigan, 55x115 feet on the west side of Broadway 66 feet north of Eighth street, with seven-room dwelling worth about $1500, for $29,000. The same agency sells to H. E. Huntington and associates 250x145 feet on the northwest corner of Los Angeles and Washington streets, and the same size plot of ground on the northeast corner of the streets named, without valuable improvements, for $12,000. It also sells for Harry Turner to Dr. Joseph Kurtz, the southwest corner of Toberman and Eighteenth street, 100x100 feet, unimproved, for $3000, and the purchaser will build a handsome home on premists for himself and family.

Halsey Flats Sold.

The property known as the Halsey flats, was sold last week by A. E. Halsey to W. R. Ireland, for $19,600. It consists of a two-story frame apartment building, containing four six-room flats, with lot, 100x165 feet, on the west side of Hope street, between Eighth and Ninth streets.

The building was completed in June, 1901, and a sketch of it was shown on the real estate review page of The Times, on the 7th of July. It is a pretty piece of architectural work, and thoroughly modern in design. It is said to bring in $140 per month rent. The sale was made through the agencies of Richards & Robinson and W. H. Allen & Son.

Other Sales.

Other sales, made during the week, some of which have already been reported in The Times, including the following:

Mrs. Florence Vandervort, as executrix of last will of Robert F. Vandervort, deceased, to John D. Foster, a two-thirds interest in a lot, 60x155 feet, on the west side of Spring, between Sixth and Seventh streets, with two-story brick and cement business building, for $34,000. Mrs. Vandervort also conveys her individual one-third interest in the property, to the same grantee, for $15,000.

Henry C. Green to Augustus Hine, through W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., two lots, each 50x155 feet, on the east side of Olive street, between Twelfth and Pico, one of them improved with sixteen-room two-story frame dwelling, the other unimproved, for $10,000. Bought as an investment.

Samuel C. Brown to B. W. Foster, who buys as an investment, 65x123 feet, on the northwest corner of Main and Eighteenth streets, with nine-room two-story frame dwelling, for $7000.

J. Burkhart, from W. H. Perry, as an investment, 94x100 feet, on the northwest corner of Fifth and Crocker streets, unimproved, for $7000.

A Pasadena Sale.

The contemplated improvements on the Hotel Green at Pasadena are already having their effects. James Smith and others have transferred the northeast corner of West Green and South Delacy streets, to a local investor, for $4000. The sale was made through the agency of J. Edward Kent of North Pasadena.

Real Estate Notes.

George R. Crow sold last week to a local investor, as was noted at the time exclusively in The Times, a lot, 40x148 feet, on the east side of Spring street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, and extending through the block to Main street, with a forty-five-room two-story frame lodging-house covering the lot, and fronting on both thoroughfares, for $35,000. The building is worth about $15,000, which brings the estimate of the lot to $20,000, or $500 per front foot.

Franc Tecklenborg has purchased of D. A. Van Vranken, through Bowen & Chamberlin, a lot 60x165 feet, on the west side of Hope street betwen Fourth and Fifth streets, unimproved, for $3500, and will erect an apartment building upon the premises that will contain four seven-room flats. The same firm has sold for Norris Goff to C. M. Parton and S. A. Parish, Jr., practical builders, recently of Seattle, 50x150 feet, unimproved, on the south side of Twenty-ninth street, 200 feet east of Vermont avenue, for $9000; the purchasers will build a two-story frame dwelling on the place as an investment.

The Barr Realty Company has purchased of Dr. Joseph Kurtz an unimproved lot, 75 by 150 feet, on the west side of Avarado street, between Ocean View avenue and Sixth street, for $3000, and will improve the property with a handsome dwelling, as an investment. They also buy of Peter Edler, for $1100, an unimproved lot, 50x138 feet, lying on the north side of Eleventh street, between Blaine and Valencia streets, extending through the block to Connecticut street, and will build two cottages upon the property.

H. Haskell has purchased of A. G. Godfrey, through Richards & Robinson, an unimproved lot, 54x150 feet, on the north side of Maryland street, between Bixel and Lucas streets, for $1250, and will build a substantial dwelling upon the property as an investment.

J. M. Pirtle buys of the National Bank of California, through the same agency, an unimproved lot 50x150 feet, on the south side of Fifth street between Bonnie Brae street and Burlington avenue, and will build a two-story frame residence upon the same for the use of himself and his family, at an additional cost of about $3000.

O. H. Leefeld buys of Capt. G. W. Malen, through J. D. Bethune, for $2100, a lot, 50x150 feet, lying on the east side of Second street between Utah and Oregon streets, Santa Monica, improved with a six-room seaside cottage.

W. H. McHenry has bought of D. W. Eldred, through Nance & Miller, two lots of the Highland Park tract, 50x160 feet each, on the south side of Avenue 57, between Pasadena and Monte Vista avenues, unimproved, for $1000, and will build a $2200 two-story frame dwelling on each lot, as an investment. Lumber to begin work on buildings is already on the ground.

Victor Ponet has bought of Allison Barlow 150x150 feet, unimproved, on the north side of Third street, between Lucas avenue and Bixel street, for $3500, and will build a handsome modern residence for himself upon the property. Property on the high plateau betwen Boyiston street and Lucas avenue is beginning to attract attention on acount of its commanding view of the surrounding country and narness to the business center of the city.

W. R. Kelley of Omaha, Neb., has purchased of Mrs. J. M. Witmer a lot 126x237 feet, on the southwest corner of Third street and Lucas avenue, with an elegant twelve-room two-story frame dwelling, for $12,000. The premises are now ocupied by Mr. Kelley's parents.

William Kapitz has purchased of Leonardt Rohdenhuber, through Lang & Co., 51x140 feet, unimproved, on the northwest corner of Pico and Catalina streets, for $1250, and will erect an apartment building upon the premises that will cost about $5000.

Balfour, Guthrie & Co., sell to J. G. Warren, through Palmer-Norman Company, 50x150 feet on the west side of North Main street, north of Temple street and just south of the postoffice sub-station, with a two-story brick business building, for $6750.

Dr. West Hughes sells to J. Norris, who buys as an investment, through Kalisher & Golsh, 120x165 feet on the northeast corner of Twelfth and Olive streets, with two cottage dwellings, for $13,000.

Calvin W. Brown sells to Curry & Schmitz, through Winton, Evans & McEwen, lot 51 feet fron by an average depth of 65 feet, located on the east side of Broadway, the second lot north of Eleventh street, extending through the triangular block to Main street, and fronting 52 feet on that thoroughfare, with seven-room dwelling of nominal value, for $10,500.

J. G. Gunsolus conveys to John Metcalfe, who buys as an investment, through Nolan & Smith, 170 unimproved lots in M. Solomon's Washington and First street tract, for $12,500.

Alex Williamson buys of Frank Higgins, for a home, through Drew & Lapworth, an eight-room dwelling and lot, at 922 Burlington avenue, for $5500.

Contracts were made yesterday for the erection of eight residences on the Ocean View tract, at Hollywood. The buildings will cost from $4000 to $8000 apiece, and are to be occupied as homes by business men of this city.

The Stanton & Douglas flats on the corner of Ingraham and Bixel streets have been sold through E. L. Hopper & Son, to Mrs. Monroe Markham, for $15,000.

DOINGS OF BUILDERS AND ARCHITECTS.

BUILDING KEEPS PACE WITH REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENTS.

Buildings Begun and Completed in Various Parts of the City—Sketch Showing Some Buildings Provided for the Care of the Sick.

During the week new buildings were completed as follows:

First Ward	2
Second Ward	1
Third Ward	9
Fourth Ward	9
Fifth Ward	12
Sixth Ward	5
Seventh Ward	3
Eighth Ward	1
Ninth Ward	3

Of these thirty-nine were dwellings and six business buildings.

The number of buildings begun was seventy-three, nine of them being business buildings and the remainder dwellings, distributed as follows:

First Ward	12
Second Ward	8
Third Ward	6
Fourth Ward	10
Fifth Ward	6
Sixth Ward	17
Seventh Ward	7
Ninth Ward	7

Little or no change is noticeable in the conditions prevailing in the building line, except that the number of new buildings that are being undertaken is increasing. The material men, however, manage to meet the demands upon them with a fair degree of promptness, and the work of building up the city goes steadily onward.

The total number of permits issued by Julius W. Krause, City Superintendent of Buildings, during the past week, was eighty. The improvements authorized amounted to $148,285, and were divided as follows:

Ward.	Number of permits.	Valuations.
First	12	$ 11,900
Second	8	7,800
Third	8	22,500
Fourth	10	26,560
Fifth	8	15,400
Sixth	16	23,855
Seventh	7	10,570
Eighth	3	3,550
Ninth	8	26,150

CALIFORNIA HOSPITAL.

California Hospital.

On this page is found a sketch of the California Hospital, as it appears looking west. The picture shows the main building, which stands on the east side of Hope street just north of Fifteenth street, and the last addition, which is just north of the main building and faces in the same direction. A view of the south front of the hospital would include another addition, which faces Fifteenth street, and it would present about the same appearance as the west front.

The main building is a frame structure of four stories and a basement. It was finished in June, 1898, at a cost of $30,000. In July, 1899, a contract was let for an annex. That is the addition facing Fifteenth street. It is not shown in the picture, but it is a handsome four-story frame building with basement. It was erected at a cost of $20,000, and is connected with the main building by a bridge. The annex was filled shortly after it was opened for patients. In the summer of 1901 work was begun on the last addition, and it was finshed the latter part of last month. That addition is shown in the sketch. It is a four-story brick structure with slate roof, is connected with the main building by a bridge and represents an expenditure of $35,000. The plans of all of the building are from the office of Architect John C. Austin, and they were all erected under his supervision.

The three buildings which together constitute the California Hospital contain 126 rooms. They front 326 feet on Hope by 188 feet on Fifteenth street, and make up what is probably one of the largest private hospitals in the country. It is owned by a company of physicians, who had the buildings planned and erected to suit themselves.

The rooms are all large and well ventilated. They are heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

Building Notes.

The contracts for work on the County Jail have been awarded by the Board of Supervisors. The house will be built by John Nelson, at a cost of $78,900. The cell work will be done by the Pauly Jail Building and Manufacturing Company of St. Louis for $68,958. The elevator will be installed by the Baker Iron Works, representing the Otis Elevator Company of New York, for $2850, and the heating plant by Blumve & Jay, at a cost of $2140. Total, $152,848.

Following are among the plans for new buildings taken from the Builder and Contractor:

Mrs. C. E. Hastings has had plans prepared by Architects Morgan & Walls for a two-story, basement and attic residence of twelve rooms, to be erected at University.

The plans drawn by architect C. H. Brown for the new Town Hall which will be built at Santa Monica have been accepted by the Trustees, and bids will be called for. It will be a two-story building without an auditorium, and will cost about $20,000.

For the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company, at Fourth and Anderson streets, a two-story brick roundhouse building, to cost $19,600.

For Andrew N. Jung, at No. 809 Green avenue, a ten-room residence, to cost $7000.

NEW QUAKER COLONY.

IN THE OWENS RIVER VALLEY.

Seven families from Long Beach have recently gone to Inyo county to settle on the lands of the William Penn Colonial Association in the Owens River Valley. This is the beginning of a new Quaker colony started by some of the Friends who have been prominent in the founding and upbuilding of the prosperous town of Whittier. The new town, which is located about 180 miles northeast of Los Angeles, is called Owenyo, a combination of the names Owens and Inyo. It is situated in a beautiful valley, where the association has 13,000 acres of fertile fruit and farming land, under a fine irrigation system comprising forty-two miles of main canals. The valley has an outlet to the Tonopah mining district in Nevada, which affords a market for the products of the new colony. The only outlet by rail at present is via the Carson and Colorado Railroad, which connects with the Central Pacific at Reno, Nev. The Carson and Colorado road has been purchased by the Southern Pacific with a view of extending it through to Mojave, thus making the country traversed by it directly tributary to Los Angeles. The founders of the colony had the Los Angeles market in view when they selected their lands. About six hundred acres have thus far been sold to settlers. The railroad company has put in a side track and made Owenyo a station. A postoffice petition has been signed by thirty-two persons, who will get mail at Owenyo as soon as a postoffice can be established. A petition for a public school is now in the hands of the settlers. About twenty-five of those who have already located are Friends, and a Friends meeting will be established in the near future. Dr. W. V. Coffin, assistant superintendent of the Whittier State School, is president of the association. W. E. Cox is secretary and general manager.

The notices of street work will be found on page following the classified advertisements.

PURER MILK WANTED.

Milk Board Decides at Meeting to Appoint an Assistant Milk Inspector at Its Expense.

At a meeting of the Los Angeles Milk Board of Trade, last night, it was decided that an assistant inspector is necessary in order that the board may safely guarantee the purity of the milk which is supplied by its members. The purity of the milk delivered is already guaranteed, but it was thought advisable to maintain a more thorough inspection of milk handled by all dairies, grocery stores and other places where it is sold.

The inability of one man to do all this work properly has been impressed on the board, and as the City Health Office has several times asked the Council for an assistant, it was decided by the members that they would have an assistant at their own expense. More definite action will be taken at the next meeting.

COAL OPERATORS POOL.

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) March 22.—The bituminous coal operators of the field in Indiana, north of the national road, have perfected a pooling arrangement for the sale of the product, about 2,000,000 tons annually. It is believed this particular pool will be followed by others covering the southern field of the State.

Yesterday's Report and Forecast.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, March 22.—[Reported by George E. Franklin, Local Forecast Official.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.85; at 5 p.m., 29.82. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 48 deg. and 62 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 93 per cent.; 5 p.m., 82 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., southwest, velocity 2 miles; 5 p.m., northwest, velocity 10 miles. Maximum temperature, 65 deg.; minimum, 47 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions.—The pressure is lowest in Arizona and relatively high on the coast, resulting in southwest winds in Southern California, and cloudy weather. It is clear and cool north of the Tehachepi. Frost is reported from Northern California. Rain is falling from Puget Sound to the Columbia River. Cold weather continues in the mountain and plateau sections, but the temperature is beginning to rise.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair weather tonight and Sunday, but with some fog or clouds.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Weather conditions and general forecast. San Francisco data: Maximum temperature, 58 deg.; minimum, 43 deg.; mean, 50 deg.

The pressure has fallen rapidly during the past twelve hours from Cape Mendocino northward. A storm of moderate energy overlies the Washington coast, and is apparently moving southward along the coast rapidly. Rain is already falling from Cape Blanco northward. Another disturbance overlies Southeastern California and Arizona, and is apparently backing westward over Southern California. High winds and heavy rain are reported at San Bernardino, and light rains at Riverside. Rain is now falling at San Diego. The temperature continues about 5 deg. below the normal over most of California. Forecast:

For Northern California: Rain Sunday; brisk southerly winds, probably high off northern coast.

Southern California: Showers Sunday, with rain in the north; brisk southwest winds, changing to northerly.

San Francisco and vicinity: Cloudy, unsettled weather Sunday, with showers; brisk southerly winds, probably high off shore.

Southeast storm warnings are displayed from San Francisco to Eureka.

Sacramento and vicinity: Rain Sunday; fresh south winds.

FOR SALE—
HOLLYWOOD HEIGHTS.
At Hollywood, 3 miles west of Los Angeles city, five minutes' walk from electric road, 40 REMAINING UNSOLD LOTS of the above tract, containing about 148 ACRES OF LAND, will, owing to circumstances, be sold as a whole for —$35,000—
Terms, one-half cash, balance on time at 5 per cent. per annum interest.
No suburb of Los Angeles has in the past year grown like Hollywood, and it has only just commenced.
Hollywood Heights contains some of the finest building spots of the Cahuenga foothills.
If you will not buy the entire tract we will sell you less.
Lot No. 9, containing 14 acres, is unsurpassed for a fine residence with view over city, valley and ocean; we will sell you this lot for $8000 cash, restricting you to build residence of not less than $5000 in value.
Hollywood Heights remains yet comparatively in its natural state.
A few thousand dollars expended in beautifying the tract with streets graded, shrubbery planted, bridges built, water developed and piped, cannot help to bring a fortune to the one who buys the entire tract.
Go out to Hollywood today; get off at Cahuenga ave., and walk toward the hills for about 3 minutes. A large map sign east of Cahuenga ave., close to the road, will show you every lot of Hollywood Heights. Examine the tract closely.
Apply by letter to owner, IVAR A. WEID, P. O. Box 905, Los Angeles.
Or see GOODWIN & BYNON,
Sole Agents,
23 Hollywood, Cal.

FOR SALE—

FOR SALE—
HOLLYWOOD HEIGHTS.
At Hollywood, 3 miles west of Los Angeles city, five minutes' walk from electric road,
40 REMAINING UNSOLD LOTS
of the above tract, containing about
148 ACRES OF LAND,
will, owing to circumstances, be sold as a whole for
—$25,000—

Terms, one-half cash, balance on time at 5 per cent. per annum interest.

No suburb of Los Angeles has in the past year grown like Hollywood, and it has only just commenced.

Hollywood Heights contains some of the finest building spots of the Cahuenga foothills.

If you will not buy the entire tract we will sell you less.

Lot No. 9, containing 14 acres, is unsurpassed for a fine residence with view over city, valley and ocean; we will sell you this lot for $8000 cash, restricting you to build residence of not less than $5000 in value.

Hollywood Heights remains yet comparatively in its natural state.

A few thousand dollars expended in beautifying the tract with streets graded, shrubbery planted, bridges built, water developed and piped, cannot help to bring a fortune to the one who buys the entire tract.

Go out to Hollywood today; get off at Cahuenga ave., and walk toward the hills for about 3 minutes. A large map sign east of Cahuenga ave., close to the road, will show you every lot of Hollywood Heights. Examine the tract closely.

Apply by letter to owner, IVAR A. WEID, P. O. Box 905, Los Angeles.
Or see GOODWIN & BYNON.
Sole Agents,
23 Hollywood, Cal.

FOR SALE—
$8000—Fine home place of 10 acres; oranges, peaches, apricots; 6-room house, pumping plant, barn, all complete and say, the house is all furnished; horse, cow, fowls, top buggy; all goes at above price; on East Colorado st., Pasadena, 2 miles from Hotel Green; also, $3500, nice home place of 5 acres, well improved and income yearly $1500; 6 miles from our office; might take a little trade.

HOLLY, HOLLYWOOD.

Reader, we have a good proposition to offer at Hollywood of 24 acres; fine, high, sightly, with numerous buildings, sight prospect, boulevard bounds land on south, near the foothills and frostless; the present income is about $5000 with only ½ improved to oranges and lemons; there are good buildings on the place; this could easily be subdivided into small tracts and sold at big profits; the present owner is a non-resident and must sell.

$1600—Only $1600; 2½-acre orange grove with small house; right in the town of Azusa; nice little home place.

Reader, are you looking for an orange grove? If so, call on us and we will direct you to one of the best-paying 20 acres, in the vicinity of Azusa, halfway to Glendora; frostless; with abundance of water; grove thoroughly fertilized and fumigated.

$10,000—Another 20 acres, at Redlands, 10 acres navel oranges, 10 acres Valencia lates.

$18,000—Another 20 acres at Redlands; all navel oranges; fine buildings.

$25,000 — Another fine grove at North Pomona; 44 acres; finest home in all Southern California.

$25,000 — In Rivera district, 47½ acres walnuts, 14 years old. Reader, here is a paying proposition, worthy of your attention.

FOR SALE—
HOLLYWOOD HEIGHTS.
At Hollywood, 3 miles west of Los Angeles city, five minutes' walk from electric road,
40 REMAINING UNSOLD LOTS
of the above tract, containing about
148 ACRES OF LAND,
will, owing to circumstances, be sold as a whole for
—$35,000—
Terms, one-half cash, balance on time at 5 per cent. per annum interest.
No suburb of Los Angeles has in the past year grown like Hollywood, and it has only just commenced.
Hollywood Heights contains some of the finest building spots of the Cahuenga foothills.
If you will not buy the entire tract we will sell you less.
Lot No. 9, containing 14 acres, is unsurpassed for a fine residence with view over city, valley and ocean; we will sell you this lot for $8000 cash, restricting you to build residence of not less than $5000 in value.
Hollywood Heights remains yet comparatively in its natural state.
A few thousand dollars expended in beautifying the tract with streets graded, shrubbery planted, bridges built, water developed and piped, cannot help to bring a fortune to the one who buys the entire tract.
Go out to Hollywood today; get off at Cahuenga ave., and walk toward the hills for about 3 minutes. A large map sign east of Cahuenga ave., close to the road, will show you every lot of Hollywood Heights. Examine the tract closely.
Apply by letter to owner, IVAR A. WEID, P. O. Box 905, Los Angeles.
Or see GOODWIN & BYNON,
Sole Agents,
23 Hollywood, Cal.

HOLLY, HOLLYWOOD.

Reader, we have a good proposition to offer at Hollywood of 24 acres; fine, high, sightly, with numerous buildings, sight prospect, boulevard bounds land on south, near the foothills and frostless; the present income is about $5000 with only ½ improved to oranges and lemons; there are good buildings on the place; this could easily be subdivided into small tracts and sold at big profits; the present owner is a non-resident and must sell.
$1000—Only $1000; 2¼-acre orange grove with small house; right in the town of Azusa; nice little home place.
Reader, are you looking for an orange grove? If so, call on us and we will direct you to one of the best-paying 20 acres, in the vicinity of Azusa, midway to Glendora; frostless; with abundance of water; grove thoroughly fertilized and fumigated.
$10,000—Another 20 acres, at Redlands, 10 acres navel oranges, 10 acres Valencia lates.
$18,000—Another 20 acres at Redlands; all navel oranges; fine buildings.
$25,000 — Another fine grove at North Pomona; 44 acres; finest home in all Southern California.
$25,000 — In Rivera district, 47½ acres walnuts, 14 years old. Reader, here is a paying proposition, worthy of your attention.

NOTE—Arrangements for its cultivation of this grove can be made with a reliable fruit grower, insuring a safe and very profitable investment to a non-resident. 23

FOR SALE—YOU KNOW THAT A FINE Washington navel orange grove, 10 or 12 years old, and in the city limits of a place like Monrovia or Rialto, and that will pay you from 10 to 20 per cent. net, is a fine thing to have, but you are going to wait until everybody else is buying and prices go up, aren't you? Well, you can suit yourself about that, but if you buy this month and from me, you can get one (18 and 20 acres) for from $16,000 to $25,000; I will agree to lease the one at Monrovia for 2 years (I have owned it for 7) and pay all expenses; take fine care of it, fertilize it every year, pay for all water, taxes, cars, etc., and give you 10 per cent. on your investment. Would give you more, but I want to make that much myself. If you want a fine proposition in this line, see owner, ROOM 445 WILCOX BLK. 23

FOR SALE—
Two orange groves in foothills at Corona; splendid view and lovely climate.
One 19 acres, containing about 1900 trees, some lemons, 10 years old, in full bearing, with water; with this grove there is a large barn and cistern, and a windbreak of eucalyptus trees.
The second, 10 acres, principally lemon trees; this is not so good a grove as the first, but is also supplied with water.
I will sell these groves cheap. For further information inquire of every man to stand by the President in his great work.

SHORTRIDGE ELOQUENCE.

Toastmaster Lawler introduced Samuel M. Shortridge, whose response to the toast, "Western Diplomacy" was witty and eloquent and kept the hall ringing with applause. By way of introduction he said:

"As a citizen of the port of San Francisco I feel at home in the port of Los Angeles. This is not remarkable, for a sailor is at home in any port. I am not a stranger to your splendid city or to your many and wonderful resources, and I trust I am not altogether a stranger to your hearts. San Francisco is a little nearer to the trade of the Philippines, but Los Angeles is a little nearer to the trade of South America—both are in reaching distance of Australasia, and so, there is, there can be, nothing but generous and helpful rivalry between us.

"I love this commonwealth of unequaled natural resources and splendid possibilities, of matchless men and peerless women. Something more I love—and thus, step by step, I reveal my diplomacy—I love this city of wondrous past and greater future and here and now announce that, if I ever change my residence from picturesque and altogether beautiful San Francisco, I shall come and make my home among you—for I know that even though your oranges cost money the perfume of their blossoms is free. They tell us, however, that your climate enervates; but let us see. Greece boasted of the mighty Achilles, Persia of the all-conquering Rustem; but Los Angeles will have a theme for higher song than Homer or Ferdusi ever sang; for who and what was Achilles or Rustem compared with Champion Jeffries?" [Applause.]

For this speech the banqueters voted Mr. Shortridge a born diplomat, and they paid close attention to the serious side of his subject, which he unfolded in many eloquent periods. He said that 40,000 Republican majority for McKinley and Roosevelt should give California a seat and a voice in the Cabinet. Of suitable timber for the position he said California has abundant stock. Also suitable timber for the Presidency, and especially an abundance of Senatorial timber. The diplomacy of this country, he said, has always been of the kind that exalteth a nation. It has always stood for the right. It has resulted in the enlargements of the rights of man and of nations all over the earth. The doctrine of neutrality, the right of expatriation and the Monroe doctrine were cited to prove the assertion.

"Who among those who denounced William McKinley for his caution, his diplomacy, foresaw the end? Who could lift the bloody veil Who could foresee where duty, destiny, God would lead us?

"Humanity called; Freedom cried. Forth leaped the American sword, swifter than lightning we fell upon the foe. Manila, El Caney, San Juan Hill, Santiago—and all was over. The ever victorious American sailor, the undefeated American soldier, rested. The sword returned to its scabbard and the work of the diplomat commenced."

LIKES LOS ANGELES.

Elijah Kennedy of New York was introduced and made a few extemporaneous remarks, and caught the banqueters with his timely witticisms. He said that the average of buildings recently constructed in Los Angeles would compare favorably for beauty with any city of the world. As a traveler over three continents he paid a glowing tribute to Los Angeles.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE.

After a musical selection by the orchestra, D. E. McKinley responded to the toast, "Industrial America." His remarks were attentively followed and frequently marked by applause. He said that only now is the country beginning to reap the benefits of over a third of a century of sagacious, industrial legislation. He told how American manufactures are finding markets in England, and said that today we are actually "carrying coals to Newcastle." He described how McKinley had stood before the people at Buffalo for the last time, and with more than a century of achievement behind him had declared that "American ships must go forth from American ports, manned by American seamen, under the American flag, bearing our products to every country in the world."

In accordance with the old saying, "The King is dead! Long live the King!" he said that America is still marching on to new conquests in the field of enterprise.

MOTT LOOKING AHEAD.

In responding to the toast, "Our future," John G. Mott made an eloquent address. He dealt with the advantages of a republic over a monarchy, foresaw the day when Europe would follow America's example, and foretold that the love of the American citizen for the principle of freedom would eventually affect the whole world. He thought the danger from combinations of capital greatly overestimated.

It was nearly midnight when the speechmaking ended, and the "400" adjourned to talk it over.

GIVEN HER FREEDOM.

State Unable to Make a Case Against Florence Burns, Accused of Murder of Walter Brooks.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Florence Burns, the young Brooklyn woman who has been in the custody of the police of this city since February 15, under suspicion of knowing how Walter Brooks met his death, was discharged from custody by Justice Mayer tonight.

Brooks, who was a young commission merchant here, had been keeping company with Florence Burns. He was found dead the night of February 14 in a room at the Glen Island Hotel. The gas in the room was turned on, and there was a bullet wound in the head.

The District Attorney tried to show that Florence was likely to have killed Brooks, because he was trying to break off his association with her.

FOUR MEN WOUNDED.

Members of the Posse That is in Pursuit of the Outlaws Who Attacked Lytton Springs Hotel.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) March 22.—News from Lytton Springs today is to the effect that a posse is still in pursuit of outlaws who shot into the Palmer House last night. It is now known that four of the posse have been shot and injured as follows:

JOHN PALMER, shot in foot.
TOM ROBERTS, shot in hand.
LOUIS CARDWELL, shot in hand.
FRANK WILLIAMS, shot in hand.

None of the men are seriously injured.

Walthour Sets His Price.

ATLANTA (Ga.) March 22.—Walthour said today that he had been offered $4000 to go to Paris. His reply to Secretary Reeves, Walthour said, was that he would go for $5000, but would not ride on Sunday. The biggest Paris races are held on Sunday.

Gardner and O'Brien Matched.

BOSTON, March 22.—George Gardner and Jack O'Brien have signed articles to box at the Southern Athletic Club, Louisville, May 2. The men will weigh in at 160 pounds.

Aristocratic Fat Women Try Somersault Cure.

Charity Bazaar for Coronation Week—Trouble on Lewis Island.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, March 23.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Society is much exercised regarding the probable action of the clubs toward Lord Rodney, whose wife, when she obtained a divorce from him on Thursday, testified that on one occasion he struck her in the eye with his clenched fist. There are rumors that his resignation will shortly be handed in at the Carleton, and other aristocratic clubs to which he belongs.

One paper, referring to the details revealed in the divorce court, says: "No more sordid tae was ever told in a police court than the story Lady Rodney related of her husband's conduct toward her."

The latest London novety is the "somersault cure" for fat women. A West End surgeon's house has been fitted up as a luxurious gymnasium, where aristocratic patients turn somersaults on Swedish principles, in the hope of reducing their obesity. The "cure" is supposed to be most efficacious.

The great charity bazaar, arranged in celebration of King Edward's coronation, will be opened about July 7, probably by ueen Alexandra. Mrs. Choate, wife of the United States Ambassador, and Mrs. Cornelius Adair, will have charge of the American stall and bar, in which many novelties will be introduced. Most of the leading society women here are interested in the bazaar, which promises to be one of the most interesting functions of coronation festivities.

TAKE CHURCH BY STORM.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, March 22.—Eight police constables from the vicinity of Inverness, Scotland, landed on the Island of Lewis today and proceeded northward to Ness Church. They there forced a barricade erected by the parishioners, and held by them for months against all the police and other forces sent by the authorities of the United Free Church to take possession of the church. The local feeling was wholly opposed to the recent union of the Scottish churches. Parties of policemen previously sent to the island had been mobbed, and had been compelled to retreat to stornaway, but the force sent today was so strong that the parishioners were obliged to capitulate.

DILLON'S SUSPENSION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Arthur Balfour promised to bring forward on Friday a motion in the House of Commons limiting the term of Dillon's exclusion to one week, says the Tribune's London correspondent. This obviously was the proper course, and had been generally anticipated. But a surprising development in the situation was Redmond's instant demand for an opportunity to debate the motion. Mr. Balfour pointed out that there could be nothing to discuss, because it would be out of order to refer to the circumstances in which Mr. Dillon had been suspended.

There is some reason to believe that the Irish members intended to carry the incident further, but if more disorder should take place, the government will not have much trouble in securing the assent of the house to the new rules of procedure.

TOBACCO WAR ON THIS SIDE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—In retaliation for the American Tobacco Company's attempt to seize the English markets, the Imperial Tobacco Company of England will, according to the Herald, carry the war into the enemy's country.

Plans are now being perfected and are nearly consummated as a result of which millions may be spent in this country in a war against the American company that will be stupendous.

It is through the Universal Tobacco Company and its allied corporations that the war will be waged here. This alliance, it is learned, is now almost ready to begin an aggressive campaign, one of the main objects of which will be to keep the American company so busy at home that it will have neither opportunity nor desire to further continue its foreign aggressions, so far, at any rate, as Great Britain is concerned. With the Universal Tobacco Company in a close, offensive and defensive alliance with the Imperial Tobacco Company are associated the Havana Commercial Company, the Havana Companies, Limited, the Henry Clay-Bock Company, the Weissinger Company of Louisville, Ky., and the Anderson Tobacco Company of this city.

WOMAN'S PRIVILEGE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, March 22.—Mrs. Brown Potter this afternoon changed her mind again, and decided to play the part of Calypso in Stephen Philips's "Ulysses." Her decision was the result of strenuous peace-making on the part of Beerbohm Tree's management.

OBITUARY.

Ernest Bissell.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Ernest Bissell, son of W. A. Bissell, assistant traffic manager of the Santa Fé road, died today of heart disease at his father's home in Alameda. Young Bissell was 16 years of age.

Judge Russell S. Taft.

BURLINGTON (Vt.) March 22.—Judge Russell Smith Taft, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of this State, died today, aged 67 years. Judge Taft was a leading figure in Vermont legal circles, and had served his State as Lieutenant-Governor.

John F. Mussell.

NEW BRITAIN (Ct.) March 22.—John F. Mussell, for several years the leading rush in the National Polo League, died tonight of consumption, aged 28 years.

SUGAR GOES UP.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—The jobbers and refiners of sugar have arrived at an understanding under which all kinds of sugar was advanced today an eighth of a cent per pound. Some time since the refiners broke up a pool on the sugar price, and ever since the price of sugar has been the subject of cutting. A further advance may be expected shortly.

COWARDLY MURDER.

Rejected by a Young Woman, John Adams Shoots His Rival, Frank Rushing, in the Back.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

VIENNA (Ill.) March 22.—At a spelling match given at the schoolhouse at Double Bridges, Simpson Township, this county, a desperate shooting affray occurred. Frank Rushing and John Adams, two young men of the neighborhood had been paying their respects to the same young woman, and she had told Adams that she would have no more to do with him. This so enraged him that he swore vengeance on his rival, it is said. At the close of the exercises as Rushing came out of the school-house door, Adams walked up behind him, and without a word of warning shot Rushing in the back. Rushing fell off the porch, and Adams shot him twice after he had fallen, inflicting fatal wounds.

Adams then shot Greeley Jones, the teacher of the district, inflicting a slight wound in the shoulder, after which he escaped.

PROPOSED TO LOCATE MAGNETIC NORTH POLE.

TASK THAT CAPT. AMUNDSEN HAS TAKEN UPON HIMSELF.

Next Spring the Norwegian Explorer Will Start on Arctic Expedition for the Purpose of Verifying and Completing the Observations of Ross.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Next spring an important Arctic expedition under Capt. Amundsen, the Norwegian, will start out with the purpose of locating the magnetic North Pole, and verifying and completing the observations of Sir J. C. Ross in 1831.

Capt. Amundsen was the first officer of the Belgica in Coriacho's Antarctic expedition of 1897-99. After his return he consulted Prof. Neumayer of Hamburg, the greatest authority on terrestrial magnetism, who declared that expert determination of the earth's magnetic North Pole would be of immense value to science. After studying with Prof. Neumayer, Capt. Amundsen has purchased the whaler Gjoa, reputed to be one of the strongest and best of the Arctic fleet. She can be handled by a crew of seven. She will be fitted with a petroleum engine, and equipped for a four years' stay.

In addition to the most complete meteorological and oceanographic instruments, Prof. Neumayer has designed a traveling magnotometer of the type that Nansen used on the Fram, but with several improvements. The Richmond Observatory is also making a special inclinatorium. Prof. Nansen will superintend the general equipment of the expedition.

Capt. Amundsen's plan is to leave in the spring for West Greenland, where he will embark dogs. Then he will go to Lancaster Sound, West Booth Island, where he will leave a depot as near as possible to the point where Ross located the magnetic pole in 1831. He will winter at Matty Island, and take observations.

On approach of spring Capt. Amundsen and three men with two sledges, and all the dogs will proceed to the point Ross located, where they will make a long series of most careful observations during the summer, and, if possible, during the whole twelve months, and establish observation stations throughout the regions in which the needle assumes a vertical position. When one sledge can be spared, two of the men will return to the ship, and Capt. Amundsen and the others will remain, and make observations during the winter, living in snow huts like the Esquimaux.

During the first and second winters they hope to erect an inclinatorium and declinatorium for the purpose of taking regular hourly readings. In the spring of 1905 they will revisit the old stations, and take fresh observations and check those of 1904. Then they will return to the ship, if possible, and continue to the westward, returning by the Northwest Passage.

PAID OVER A MILLION FOR COPPER PROPERTY.

M'CLELLAND MINES IN ALASKA CHANGE HANDS.

Company of Which Havemeyer is President is the Purchaser and is Expected to Build a Railroad from the Mines to Tide Water.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Advices from Valdes, Alaska, state that the Alaska Copper Company, of which H. O. Havemeyer, the sugar king, is president, has purchased the McClelland copper mines in Chittyna district, paying $1,100,000 for ten-elevenths of forty-five claims. The property also includes 320 acres of coal lands. Authenticity is given to this report by the statement of the Alaska Prospector, which says the agreement for the sale has been filed in the commissioner's office.

Maj. W. B. Abercrombie and B. F. Millard own the remaining one-eleventh, and so far they have not come into the sale. Deeds from all the owners, except Abercrombie and Millard have been placed in escrow. Twenty-five hundred dollars has been paid, $5000 is to be paid November 1, 1903, and the remainder by November 1, 1904. It is believed in Alaska that the company will build a railroad to the property so as to get the copper and coal to tide water.

RUSH TO PHILIPPINES.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Efforts are being made by a number of local capitalists to take advantage of the low railroad rates from the East and send a number of colonists to Manila. The projectors of the enterprise hope to get up a rush to the islands that will equal if not eclapse the rush to the northern gold fields.

As soon as the legislation relating to the islands, now pending before Congress, is finally passed, a wholesale descent will be made upon the islands It is the expectation of the promoters that the land laws of the United States will be applied to the islands, and that the thousands of acres now idle will be filled with American farmers and miners.

SHE HAD A WOMAN FOR A HUSBAND.

SAYS SHE DID NOT KNOW THE SEX OF HER MATE.

Strange Case, That is Complicated by the Fact the Widow of a Woman Who Passed as a Man Has a Nursing Babe—Death's Disclosure.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CANANDAIGUA (N. Y.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William C. Howard died at his home in this town yesterday, leaving a widow and two children. He was 50 years of age. After his death it was discovered that Howard was a perfectly-developed woman. He had been married ten years. His wife had all these years been kept in ignorance concerning the fact that her husband was not a man; at any rate, that is what she swore to before the Coroner. She held in her arms a nursing baby only a few months old.

The existence of the baby deepened the mystery so much that the Coroner decided upon holding an autopsy in order to determine the cause of Howard's death. The autopsy showed that Howard died a natural death, the verdict of the Coroner being that death was due to heart disease.

Mrs. Howard, when questioned about her married life, said it had been a happy one and that she worshiped "Will," as she called her husband. She said that after they had been married about a year they adopted a child, which died. In about four years more they adopted another, which is still living with her. When questioned about the nursing baby of which she is the mother she made no reply, except to say that "Will" thought the world of it.

WILD MAN IN CAPTIVITY.

SALINAS, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A wild man, who for four years has been terrorizing the people from Carmel to Gorda on the coast line of Monterey county, was captured late last Thursday night by Philip Dolan and others near Gorda. The man called at the residence of G. Dana, asking for food, but when he noticed one of Dana's sons, fled like a deer. Search was made later in the chaparal, where the man was found asleep in a hollow tree, and captured after a struggle.

When brought to the County Jail a silver watch and $3 were found on him. In one pocket of his ragged overalls pass book No. 100,960, Germania Saving and Loan Society, San Francisco, in the name of Julius Fuyal, with a balance due August 5, 1896, the date of last deposit, of $483.88 was discovered. The man eats ravenously of food, tearing it like a wild beast. He has lucid spells, during which he says he worked for Louis Frank of Redwood City. He is about thirty-seven years old, a Swiss or Slavonian, with a foreign accent. When not watched he picks up trash from the cell floor and eats it.

The authorities hope the name found in the pass book may prove a clew to identification. People on the coast rejoice over the capture, as many families had arranged to leave through fear of the wild man.

LAW TAKES A HAND.

Bogus Investment Companies Which Have Swindled People Out of Millions Put in Hands of Receivers.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 22.—The Chronicle's Lexington correspondent telegraphs that a number of mutual and industrial mutual investment companies have been put into the hands of receivers. The first of these bond investment schemes was started twelve years ago and after a severe battle with the postoffice authorities, who refused it the mails, won the suit, and from that time they have spread to nearly every State in the country where the laws would permit their existence. They promise returns of three for one, making monthly redemptions and finally they offered weekly redemptions.

It is estimated that the poor people of the vicinity of Lexington alone have invested in the fourteen companies $2,000,000. The grand jury has commenced an investigation of the conduct of the companies. It is said no assets can be found.

RIDES THE WATER.

Torpedo-boat Destroyer Named After Commodore Barry Launched at the Shipyard of Beafie and Levy.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) March 22.—The Barry, the third of the series of torpedo-boat destroyers, which have been built for the United States government by Beafie & Levy, was launched at noon today. Miss Charlotte Barnes, a descendant of Commodore Barry, after whom the craft is named, chirstened the boat. The little fighter had steam up, when the launching took place, and took a short spin down the Delaware River.

The Barry is 245 feet long, with a 23-foot beam. She will have 450 tons' displacement, thirty tons more than the original contract called for.

The speed originally contracted for was 29 knots, but on account of the increased displacement, it will be 28 knots. The engines are four cylinder triple expansion, of 8000, estimated, 8500 actual, horse power. She will carry five 6-pounders and two 12-pounder rapid-fire rifles.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRES

The Catholic Laymen's Association of Chicago is to develop into a national organization, according to active members.

Dr. Thomas Dunn English is thought to be on the road to recovery.

Five miles east of Noble Okla., two unknown men on horseback killed Frank Harman at his home and wounded his wife and daughter.

Yale-Harvard Boat Races.

NEW HAVEN, March 22.—It is announced here today that Yale and Harvard have agreed upon the terms for the annual boat race to be held at New London on Thursday, June 26, with William Micleham as referee. There will be three races as usual. A four-mile race between the 'varsity eight-oared, a two-mile race between the four-oared, and a two-mile race between the Freshman crews.

MAXNIC CAPTURES BIG STAKE AT OAKLAND.

BURNS AND WATERHOUSE COLT SHOWS IN FINE FORM.

Bookmakers Recover a Portion of Their Losses of Friday, as Only Two Favorites Win First Money—Turner and Birkenruth Going to Memphis.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Maxnic, the clever Burns and Waterhouse colt won the rich Western Produce Stake for two year olds at Oakland today, from Sylvia Talbot of the Schreiber Stables, while Vinctides, carrying the colors of Charles Boots, was third. The event, which was transferred by the San Francisco Jockey Club to the new California Jockey Club, had a value of almost $10,000, the association adding $5000.

A field of nine went to the post with the Schreiber Stables' Sylvia Talbot and Deutschland, favorites. Maxnic and his stable companion, Thaddeus, were next in demand. To a good start Sylvia Talbot went out in front. Nash Turner got Maxnic away running, and after lying in a nice position moved up at the stretch turn. The colt gradually cut down the lead of the Balgowan filly, and when straightened away for home quickly caught and passed her, and landed Maxnic a winner by a length. Maxnic was bred by Burns and Waterhouse, being by Altamax-Picnic. He is one of the best youngsters shown here. The winner's share of the purse was $6930, while $2000 went to second. The owner of the third received $950.

Only two favorites won during the afternoon. In the first race Ada N., at 9 to 1 got up in time to beat Prestano a head. Jockeys Turner and Birkenruth will leave Monday for Memphis. Results:

Six furlongs, selling: Ada N., 109 (Birkenruth,) 9 to 1, won; Prestano, 98 (Hoar,) 8 to 1, second; The Weaver, 105 (L. Daly,) 2 to 1, third; time 1:15. Dorlian, King Dellis, Midnight Chimes, Jerid, Katie Walcott, Sanvenado, Eldred and Montana Peeress also ran.

Second, six and one-half furlongs selling: Dr. Boyle, 110 (Conley,) 7 to 1, won; Mike Strauss, 110 (Hoar,) 4 to 1, second; Reina de Cuba, 106 (Rozeman,) 8 to 1, third; time 1:22. Saul of Tarsus, Gusto, Satan Rose of Hilo and Royal Prize also ran.

One mile selling: Dr. Bernays, 98 (L. Daly,) 3 to 1, won; Fridolin, 92 (Winslett,) 12 to 1, second; Tizona, 101 (Stuart,) 15 to 1, third; time 1:43. Expedient, Gawaine, Einstein, Irate, Jingler, Free Lance and La Borgia also ran.

Five furlongs, Western Produce Stakes, value $9880: Maxnic, 116 (Turner,) 11 to 5, won; Sylvia Talbot, 115 (J. Daly,) 8 to 5, second; Vinctides, 106 (Hoar,) 15 to 1, third; time 1:02½. Thaddeus, The Fog, Deutschland, Orfeo, Katanga and The Forum also ran.

Six furlongs selling: Tower of Candles, 94 (Jackson,) 7 to 10, won; February, 94 (Knapp,) 20 to 1, second; Doublet, 105 (Hoar,) 9 to 2, third; time 1:14¼. Sly, Botany, Vantine and Mission also ran.

One mile, selling: Artilla, 103 (Birkenruth,) 5 to 1, won; Huachuca, 97 (L. Daly, 7 to 2, second; Dean Swift, 101 (Goodyear,) 60 to 1, third; time 1:42¾. John McGurk, Oscar Tolle, Diomed, Commissioner Forster and Quadra also ran.

Crescent City Results.

every man to stand by the President in his great work.

SHORTRIDGE ELOQUENCE.

Toastmaster Lawler introduced Samuel M. Shortridge, whose response to the toast, "Western Diplomacy" was witty and eloquent and kept the hall ringing with applause. By way of introduction he said:

"As a citizen of the port of San Francisco I feel at home in the port of Los Angeles. This is not remarkable, for a sailor is at home in any port. I am not a stranger to your splendid city or to your many and wonderful resources, and I trust I am not altogether a stranger to your hearts. San Francisco is a little nearer to the trade of the Philippines, but Los Angeles is a little nearer to the trade of South America—both are in reaching distance of Australasia, and so, there is, there can be, nothing but generous and helpful rivalry between us.

"I love this commonwealth of unequaled natural resources and splendid possibilities, of matchless men and peerless women. Something more I love—and thus, step by step, I reveal my diplomacy—I love this city of wondrous past and greater future and here and now announce that, if I ever change my residence from picturesque and altogether beautiful San Francisco, I shall come and make my home among you—for I know that even though your oranges cost money the perfume of their blossoms is free. They tell us, however, that your climate enervates; but let us see. Greece boasted of the mighty Achilles, Persia of the all-conquering Rustem; but Los Angeles will have a theme for higher song than Homer or Ferdusi ever sang; for who and what was Achilles or Rustem compared with Champion Jeffries?" [Applause.]

For this speech the banqueters voted Mr. Shortridge a born diplomat, and they paid close attention to the serious side of his subject, which he unfolded in many eloquent periods. He said that 40,000 Republican majority for McKinley and Roosevelt should give California a seat and a voice in the Cabinet. Of suitable timber for the position he said California has abundant stock. Also suitable timber for the Presidency, and especially an abundance of Senatorial timber. The diplomacy of this country, he said, has always been of the kind that exalteth a nation. It has always stood for right. It has resulted in the enlargements of the rights of man and of nations all over the earth. The doctrine of neutrality, the right of expatriation and the Monroe doctrine were cited to prove the assertion.

"Who among those who denounced William McKinley for his caution, his diplomacy, foresaw the end? Who could lift the bloody veil Who could foresee where duty, destiny, God would lead us?

"Humanity called; Freedom cried. Forth leaped the American sword, swifter than lightning we fell upon the foe. Manila, El Caney, San Juan Hill, Santiago—and all was over. The ever victorious American sailor, the undefeated American soldier, rested. The sword returned to its scabbard and the work of the diplomat commenced."

LIKES LOS ANGELES.

Elijah Kennedy of New York was introduced and made a few extemporaneous remarks, and caught the banqueters with his timely witticisms. He said that the average of buildings recently constructed in Los Angeles would compare favorably for beauty with any city of the world. As a traveler over three continents he paid a glowing tribute to Los Angeles.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE.

After a musical selection by the orchestra, D. E. McKinley responded to the toast, "Industrial America." His remarks were attentively followed and frequently marked by applause. He said that only now is the country beginning to reap the benefits of over a third of a century of sagacious, industrial legislation. He told how American manufactures are finding markets in England, and said that today we are actually "carrying coals to Newcastle." He described how McKinley had stood before the people at Buffalo for the last time, and with more than a century of achievement behind him had declared that "American ships must go forth from American ports, manned by American seamen, under the American flag, bearing our products to every country in the world."

In accordance with the old saying, "The King is dead! Long live the King!" he said that America is still marching on to new conquests in the field of enterprise.

MOTT LOOKING AHEAD.

In responding to the toast, "Our future," John G. Mott made an eloquent address. He dealt with the advantages of a republic over a monarchy, foresaw the day when Europe would follow America's example, and foretold that the love of the American citizen for the principle of freedom would eventually affect the whole world. He thought the danger from combinations of capital greatly overestimated.

It was nearly midnight when the speechmaking ended, and the "400" adjourned to talk it over.

GIVEN HER FREEDOM.

State Unable to Make a Case Against Florence Burns, Accused of Murder of Walter Brooks.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Florence Burns, the young Brooklyn woman who has been in the custody of the police of this city since February 15, under suspicion of knowing how Walter Brooks met his death, was discharged from custody by Justice Mayer tonight.

Brooks, who was a young commission merchant here, had been keeping company with Florence Burns. He was found dead the night of February 14 in a room at the Glen Island Hotel. The gas in the room was turned on, and there was a bullet wound in the head.

The District Attorney tried to show that Florence was likely to have killed Brooks, because he was trying to break off his association with her.

FOUR MEN WOUNDED.

Members of the Posse That is in Pursuit of the Outlaws Who Attacked Lytton Springs Hotel.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) March 22.—News from Lytton Springs today is to the effect that a posse is still in pursuit of outlaws who shot into the Palmer House last night. It is now known that four of the posse have been shot and injured as follows:

JOHN PALMER, shot in foot.
TOM ROBERTS, shot in hand.
LOUIS CARDWELL, shot in hand.
FRANK WILLIAMS, shot in hand.

None of the men are seriously injured.

Walthour Sets His Price.

ATLANTA (Ga.) March 22.—Walthour said today that he had been offered $4000 to go to Paris. His reply to Secretary Reeves, Walthour said, was that he would go for $5000, but would not ride on Sunday. The biggest Paris races are held on Sunday.

Aristocratic Fat Women Try Somersault Cure.

Charity Bazaar for Coronation Week—Trouble on Lewis Island.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, March 23.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Society is much exercised regarding the probable action of the clubs toward Lord Rodney, whose wife, when she obtained a divorce from him on Thursday, testified that on one occasion he struck her in the eye with his clenched fist. There are rumors that his resignation will shortly be handed in at the Carleton, and other aristocratic clubs to which he belongs.

One paper, referring to the details revealed in the divorce court, says: "No more sordid tae was ever told in a police court than the story Lady Rodney related of her husband's conduct toward her."

The latest London novety is the "somersault cure" for fat women. A West End surgeon's house has been fitted up as a luxurious gymnasium, where aristocratic patients turn somersaults on Swedish principles, in the hope of reducing their obesity. The "cure" is supposed to be most efficacious.

The great charity bazaar, arranged in celebration of King Edward's coronation, will be opened about July 7, probably by ueen Alexandra. Mrs. Choate, wife of the United States Ambassador, and Mrs. Cornelius Adair, will have charge of the American stall and bar, in which many novelties will be introduced. Most of the leading society women here are interested in the bazaar, which promises to be one of the most interesting functions of coronation festivities.

TAKE CHURCH BY STORM.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, March 22.—Eight police constables from the vicinity of Inverness, Scotland, landed on the Island of Lewis today and proceeded northward to Ness Church. They there forced a barricade erected by the parishioners, and held by them for months against all the police and other forces sent by the authorities of the United Free Church to take possession of the church. The local feeling was wholly opposed to the recent union of the Scottish churches. Parties of policemen previously sent to the island had been mobbed, and had been compelled to retreat to stornaway, but the force sent today was so strong that the parishioners were obliged to capitulate.

DILLON'S SUSPENSION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Arthur Balfour promised to bring forward on Friday a motion in the House of Commons limiting the term of Dillon's exclusion to one week, says the Tribune's London correspondent. This obviously was the proper course, and had been generally anticipated. But a surprising development in the situation was Redmond's instant demand for an opportunity to debate the motion. Mr. Balfour pointed out that there could be nothing to discuss, because it would be out of order to refer to the circumstances in which Mr. Dillon had been suspended.

There is some reason to believe that the Irish members intended to carry the incident further, but if more disorder should take place, the government will not have much trouble in securing the assent of the house to the new rules of procedure.

TOBACCO WAR ON THIS SIDE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—In retaliation for the American Tobacco Company's attempt to seize the English markets, the Imperial Tobacco Company of England will, according to the Herald, carry the war into the enemy's country.

Plans are now being perfected and are nearly consummated as a result of which millions may be spent in this country in a war against the American company that will be stupendous.

It is through the Universal Tobacco Company and its allied corporations that the war will be waged here. This alliance, it is learned, is now almost ready to begin an aggressive campaign, one of the main objects of which will be to keep the American company so busy at home that it will have neither opportunity nor desire to further continue its foreign aggressions, so far, at any rate, as Great Britain is concerned. With the Universal Tobacco Company in a close, offensive and defensive alliance with the Imperial Tobacco Company are associated the Havana Commercial Company, the Havana Companies, Limited, the Henry Clay-Bock Company, the Weissinger Company of Louisville, Ky., and the Anderson Tobacco Company of this city.

WOMAN'S PRIVILEGE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, March 22.—Mrs. Brown Potter this afternoon changed her mind again, and decided to play the part of Calypso in Stephen Philips's "Ulysses." Her decision was the result of strenuous peace-making on the part of Beerbohm Tree's management.

NEW BRITAIN (Ct.) March 22.—John F. Mussell, for several years the leading rush in the National Polo League, died tonight of consumption, aged 28 years.

SUGAR GOES UP.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—The jobbers and refiners of sugar have arrived at an understanding under which all kinds of sugar was advanced today an eighth of a cent per pound. Some time since the refiners broke up a pool on the sugar price, and ever since the price of sugar has been the subject of cutting. A further advance may be expected shortly.

COWARDLY MURDER.

Rejected by a Young Woman, John Adams Shoots His Rival, Frank Rushing, in the Back.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

VIENNA (Ill.) March 22.—At a spelling match given at the schoolhouse at Double Bridges, Simpson Township, this county, a desperate shooting affray occurred. Frank Rushing and John Adams, two young men of the neighborhood had been paying their respects to the same young woman, and she had told Adams that she would have no more to do with him. This so enraged him that he swore vengeance on his rival, it is said. At the close of the exercises as Rushing came out of the school-house door, Adams walked up behind him, and without a word of warning shot Rushing in the back. Rushing fell off the porch, and Adams shot him twice after he had fallen, inflicting fatal wounds.

Adams then shot Greeley Jones, the teacher of the district, inflicting a slight wound in the shoulder, after which he escaped.

PROPOSED TO LOCATE MAGNETIC NORTH POLE.

TASK THAT CAPT. AMUNDSEN HAS TAKEN UPON HIMSELF.

Next Spring the Norwegian Explorer Will Start on Arctic Expedition for the Purpose of Verifying and Completing the Observations of Ross.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Next spring an important Arctic expedition under Capt. Amundsen, the Norwegian, will start out with the purpose of locating the magnetic North Pole, and verifying and completing the observations of Sir J. C. Ross in 1831.

Capt. Amundsen was the first officer of the Belgica in Coriacho's Antarctic expedition of 1897-99. After his return he consulted Prof. Neumayer of Hamburg, the greatest authority on terrestrial magnetism, who declared that expert determination of the earth's magnetic North Pole would be of immense value to science. After studying with Prof. Neumayer, Capt. Amundsen has purchased the whaler Gjoa, reputed to be one of the strongest and best of the Arctic fleet. She can be handled by a crew of seven. She will be fitted with a petroleum engine, and equipped for a four years' stay.

In addition to the most complete meteorological and oceanographic instruments, Prof. Neumayer has designed a traveling magnotometer of the type that Nansen used on the Fram, but with several improvements. The Richmond Observatory is also making a special inclinatorium. Prof. Nansen will superintend the general equipment of the expedition.

Capt. Amundsen's plan is to leave in the spring for West Greenland, where he will embark dogs. Then he will go to Lancaster Sound, West Booth Island, where he will leave a depot as near as possible to the point where Ross located the magnetic pole in 1831. He will winter at Matty Island, and take observations.

On approach of spring Capt. Amundsen and three men with two sledges, and all the dogs will proceed to the point Ross located, where they will make a long series of most careful observations during the summer, and, if possible, during the whole twelve months, and establish observation stations throughout the regions in which the needle assumes a vertical position. When one sledge can be spared, two of the men will return to the ship, and Capt. Amundsen and the others will remain, and make observations during the winter, living in snow huts like the Esquimaux.

During the first and second winters they hope to erect an inclinatorium and declinatorium for the purpose of taking regular hourly readings. In the spring of 1905 they will revisit the old stations, and take fresh observations and check those of 1904. Then they will return to the ship, if possible, and continue to the westward, returning by the Northwest Passage.

PAID OVER A MILLION FOR COPPER PROPERTY.

M'CLELLAND MINES IN ALASKA CHANGE HANDS.

Company of Which Havemeyer is President is the Purchaser and is Expected to Build a Railroad from the Mines to Tide Water.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Advices from Valdes, Alaska, state that the Alaska Copper Company, of which H. O. Havemeyer, the sugar king, is president, has purchased the McClelland copper mines in Chittyna district, paying $1,100,000 for ten-elevenths of forty-five claims. The property also includes 320 acres of coal lands. Authenticity is given to this report by the statement of the Alaska Prospector, which says the agreement for the sale has been filed in the commissioner's office.

Maj. W. B. Abercrombie and B. F. Millard own the remaining one-eleventh, and so far they have not come into the sale. Deeds from all the owners, except Abercrombie and Millard have been placed in escrow. Twenty-five hundred dollars has been paid, $5000 is to be paid November 1, 1903, and the remainder by November 1, 1904. It is believed in Alaska that the company will build a railroad to the property so as to get the copper and coal to tide water.

RUSH TO PHILIPPINES.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Efforts are being made by a number of local capitalists to take advantage of the low railroad rates from the East and send a number of colonists to Manila. The projectors of the enterprise hope to get up a rush to the islands that will equal if not eclapse the rush to the northern gold fields.

As soon as the legislation relating to the islands, now pending before Congress, is finally passed, a wholesale descent will be made upon the islands It is the expectation of the promoters that the land laws of the United States will be applied to the islands, and that the thousands of acres now idle will be filled with American farmers and miners.

SHE HAD A WOMAN FOR A HUSBAND.

SAYS SHE DID NOT KNOW THE SEX OF HER MATE.

Strange Case, That is Complicated by the Fact the Widow of a Woman Who Passed as a Man Has a Nursing Babe—Death's Disclosure.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CANANDAIGUA (N. Y.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William C. Howard died at his home in this town yesterday, leaving a widow and two children. He was 50 years of age. After his death it was discovered that Howard was a perfectly-developed woman. He had been married ten years. His wife had all these years been kept in ignorance concerning the fact that her husband was not a man; at any rate, that is what she swore to before the Coroner. She held in her arms a nursing baby only a few months old.

The existence of the baby deepened the mystery so much that the Coroner decided upon holding an autopsy in order to determine the cause of Howard's death. The autopsy showed that Howard died a natural death, the verdict of the Coroner being that death was due to heart disease.

Mrs. Howard, when questioned about her married life, said it had been a happy one and that she worshiped "Will," as she called her husband. She said that after they had been married about a year they adopted a child, which died. In about four years more they adopted another, which is still living with her. When questioned about the nursing baby of which she is the mother she made no reply, except to say that "Will" thought the world of it.

WILD MAN IN CAPTIVITY.

SALINAS, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A wild man, who for four years has been terrorizing the people from Carmel to Gorda on the coast line of Monterey county, was captured late last Thursday night by Philip Dolan and others near Gorda. The man called at the residence of G. Dana, asking for food, but when he noticed one of Dana's sons, fled like a deer. Search was made later in the chaparal, where the man was found asleep in a hollow tree, and captured after a struggle.

When brought to the County Jail a silver watch and $3 were found on him. In one pocket of his ragged overalls pass book No. 100,960, Germania Saving and Loan Society, San Francisco, in the name of Julius Fuyal, with a balance due August 5, 1896, the date of last deposit, of $483.88 was discovered. The man eats ravenously of food, tearing it like a wild beast. He has lucid spells, during which he says he worked for Louis Frank of Redwood City. He is about thirty-seven years old, a Swiss or Slavonian, with a foreign accent. When not watched he picks up trash from the cell floor and eats it.

The authorities hope the name found in the pass book may prove a clew to identification. People on the coast rejoice over the capture, as many families had arranged to leave through fear of the wild man.

LAW TAKES A HAND.

Bogus Investment Companies Which Have Swindled People Out of Millions Put in Hands of Receivers.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 22.—The Chronicle's Lexington correspondent telegraphs that a number of mutual and industrial mutual investment companies have been put into the hands of receivers. The first of these bond investment schemes was started twelve years ago and after a severe battle with the postoffice authorities, who refused it the mails, won the suit, and from that time they have spread to nearly every State in the country where the laws would permit their existence. They promise returns of three for one, making monthly redemptions and finally they offered weekly redemptions.

It is estimated that the poor people of the vicinity of Lexington alone have invested in the fourteen companies $2,000,000. The grand jury has commenced an investigation of the conduct of the companies. It is said no assets can be found.

RIDES THE WATER.

Torpedo-boat Destroyer Named After Commodore Barry Launched at the Shipyard of Beafie and Levy.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) March 22.—The Barry, the third of the series of torpedo-boat destroyers, which have been built for the United States government by Beafie & Levy, was launched at noon today. Miss Charlotte Barnes, a descendant of Commodore Barry, after whom the craft is named, chirstened the boat. The little fighter had steam up, when the launching took place, and took a short spin down the Delaware River.

The Barry is 245 feet long, with a 23-foot beam. She will have 450 tons' displacement, thirty tons more than the original contract called for.

The speed originally contracted for was 29 knots, but on account of the increased displacement, it will be 28 knots. The engines are four cylinder triple expansion, of 8000, estimated, 8500 actual, horse power. She will carry five 6-pounders and two 12-pounder rapid-fire rifles.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRES

The Catholic Laymen's Association of Chicago is to develop into a national organization, according to active members.

Dr. Thomas Dunn English is thought to be on the road to recovery.

Five miles east of Noble Okla., two unknown men on horseback killed Frank Harman at his home and wounded his wife and daughter.

Yale-Harvard Boat Races.

NEW HAVEN, March 22.—It is announced here today that Yale and Harvard have agreed upon the terms for the annual boat race to be held at New London on Thursday, June 26, with William Micleham as referee. There will be three races as usual. A four-mile race between the 'varsity eight-oared, a two-mile race between the four-oared, and a two-mile race between the Freshman crews.

Spokane Gets Fitzpatrick.

SPOKANE (Wash.) March 22.—The baseball management of Spokane has forwarded a contract to "Fireman" Fitzpatrick, the speedy pitcher of the California league. It is also announced that "Father Tom" Kelly, a pitcher and outfielder, formerly with Spokane, has decided to sign with Helena.

MAXNIC CAPTURES BIG STAKE AT OAKLAND.

BURNS AND WATERHOUSE COLT SHOWS IN FINE FORM.

Bookmakers Recover a Portion of Their Losses of Friday, as Only Two Favorites Win First Money—Turner and Birkenruth Going to Memphis.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Maxnic, the clever Burns and Waterhouse colt won the rich Western Produce Stake for two year olds at Oakland today, from Sylvia Talbot of the Schreiber Stables, while Vinctides, carrying the colors of Charles Boots, was third. The event, which was transferred by the San Francisco Jockey Club to the new California Jockey Club, had a value of almost $10,000, the association adding $5000.

A field of nine went to the post with the Schreiber Stables' Sylvia Talbot and Deutschland, favorites. Maxnic and his stable companion, Thaddeus, were next in demand. To a good start Sylvia Talbot went out in front. Nash Turner got Maxnic away running, and after lying in a nice position moved up at the stretch turn. The colt gradually cut down the lead of the Balgowan filly, and when straightened away for home quickly caught and passed her, and landed Maxnic a winner by a length. Maxnic was bred by Burns and Waterhouse, being by Altamax-Picnic. He is one of the best youngsters shown here. The winner's share of the purse was $6930, while $2000 went to second. The owner of the third received $950.

Only two favorites won during the afternoon. In the first race Ada N., at 9 to 1 got up in time to beat Prestano a head. Jockeys Turner and Birkenruth will leave Monday for Memphis.

Results:

Six furlongs, selling: Ada N., 109 (Birkenruth,) 9 to 1, won; Prestano, 98 (Hoar,) 8 to 1, second; The Weaver, 105 (L. Daly,) 2 to 1, third; time 1:15. Dorian, King Dellis, Midnight Chimes, Jerid, Katie Walcott, Sanvenado, Eldred and Montana Peeress also ran.

Second, six and one-half furlongs selling: Dr. Boyle, 110 (Conley,) 7 to 1, won; Mike Strauss, 110 (Hoar,) 4 to 1, second; Reina de Cuba, 106 (Rozeman,) 8 to 1, third; time 1:22. Saul of Tarsus, Gusto, Satan Rose of Hilo and Royal Prize also ran.

One mile selling: Dr. Bernays, 98 (L. Daly,) 3 to 1, won; Fridolin, 92 (Winslett,) 12 to 1, second; Tizona, 101 (Stuart,) 15 to 1, third; time 1:43. Expedient, Gawaine, Einstein, Irate, Jingler, Free Lance and La Borgia also ran.

SHOPLIFTERS IN CUSTODY.

Gang of Smooth Men and Women in Jail.

Officers Make Another Clever Catch.

Men Worked Card Swindling Games—Women Filched Valuable Goods.

The regular end-of-the-week catch of criminals was made by the police Friday and yesterday, and as a result of the vigilance of the officers, three men and two of their women associates are in the City Jail, charged with shoplifting, bunco-steering and possibly other crimes. One more woman, who has been associated with the party, probably will be in custody before this account is read.

It is a bad gang, and the evidence that has been secured against them probably will send them to prison for long terms. Through the implication of the men in the swindling of two strangers, the entire party was run down and in their possession was found more than a thousand dollars' worth of goods, most of which, it is thought, has been stolen from stores in this city.

Friday the police were informed that three men had been operating a card swindling game in a saloon at the corner of Seventh street and Broadway. They had enticed an old man, whose name is unknown, into a card game. Everything was lovely, as usual, for the victim until he had been induced to make a bet of $75 on his ability to judge who held the best hand, then the money he had wagered was claimed by one of his gentlemanly opponents. The old man protested, claiming that he had been cheated, and his protestations were so vigorous and his threats of prosecution so strong that the bunco men refunded $25 on the promise of their victim saying nothing.

The old man immediately reported his experience at the Police Station, and, as a report of similar experience had been made by another person, the officers lost no time in getting after the trio of smooth workers. Detectives Talamantes, Shields and Kelly soon located two of the men and one woman and took them to the station. They said they were from St. Louis. Chief of Police Elton immediately wired their descriptions to the authorities of the Missouri metropolis, and the reply which came said the men were clever bunco-steerers, and that two other women, and another man were associated with them. The women, it was said, usually engaged in shoplifting and pocket-picking, while the men worked card and other swindling games.

Yesterday the third man and another woman were arrested, while the third woman, in a place of seclusion, is known to have tried frantically by telephone whether or not her partners were in custody. She was still in ignorance of their whereabouts last night, but the coils of the law were tightening closely about her, and her enlightenment probably will come only when she joins them behind the bars.

The men are M. A. Jewett, alias Miller; E. J. Morrison, alias Lyons, alias Furry; and Charles Harris, alias Barnett. The women under arrest claim to be the wives of Morrison and Harris, while the third woman passes as Mrs. Jewett. The men are well dressed and of athletic build, and, it is said, they are skilled in the use of firearms. Morrison had $100 in his pockets, and wore a diamond ring and other jewelry. The Harris woman had $160 in her possession. They said they had been in Los Angeles two weeks, but the police say they have not been here that long.

When the search began for the lodgings of the gang, the officers found that they had moved frequently from place to place, each couple living apart from the others. When their separate lodgings finally had been located, they were found to be veritable storehouses of stolen goods, and when a part of the booty had been taken to the Police Station and spread out in the private office of Chief Elton, the apartment had the appearance of a section of a department store.

There were more than a dozen specimens of the latest styles of women's hats; several silk raglan coats; valuable silk waists; silk and lace dressing gowns; a mink boa; tailor-made jackets; rich silk skirts; a bath robe, costly stockings and many other articles of value. The shoplifters had used rare discrimination in the selection of booty, and had taken only the most valuable goods. In addition to the articles named, there were two large trunks filled with goods, and several more trunks that had been located had not been taken to the station. In the room of one of the women fourteen hats were found.

It is expected that most of the goods will be identified by proprietors of different stores in the city, and charges of shoplifting will be placed against the members of the gang in whose possession the property was found. The charge of swindling may fall flat, as the old man who made the complaint against the trio has disappeared, and may not appear against them.

FIRE IN TAILOR SHOP.

Timely Discovery of Blaze in a Broadway Store—Much Smoke, but Little Damage—Twenty-third-street Loss.

The stock and fixtures of the tailor shop of M. Berry, No. 430 South Broadway, were damaged slightly by fire at 7:50 o'clock last evening. When the firemen arrived, they found the fire burning fiercely, but owing to the lack of ventilation, it had spread but little, and was extinguished with chemicals. The blaze started from a gas stove, which had been left burning. A rubber extension from the gas fixture had melted from the heat generated by the stove, and the escaping gas evidently had ignited from another burner. The damage to the building and fixtures probably is not more than $100, but the entire store was filled with smoke, which caused some loss on the stock of fabrics.

Fire from an unknown source at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning, caused $150 damage to the one-story frame dwelling at No. 234 West Twenty-third street, owned by W. D. Williams, and occupied by W. H. Stone. The contents were damaged $25. The building was insured.

LONDON, March 22.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Lahore, says the plague mortality has reached 2000 daily. The outbreak, which is the worst on record, is attributed to the policy of non-interference in caste customs.

IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION.

Newcomers Should Be Able to Read.

Associated Charities is Sure About It.

Strong Resolutions Indorsing Boston Bill to Restrict by Education.

Immigration and its evils were considered at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Los Angeles Associated Charities, yesterday. President H. W. Frank was in the chair, and the other directors present were J. C. Kays, Mrs. J. D. Hooker, Mrs. M. P. Doran, H. G Bath, H. Jevne and Mrs. L. C. Ducommun.

Secretary Stuart read a communication from the Immigration Restriction League, with headquarters in Boston, asking that the local Associated Charities take notice of the evils resultant from immigration as at present permitted, and asking for aid in securing the enactment of laws for further restriction. The Boston league is very eager to secure the passage of its bill now pending in Congress, which lays emphasis on the educational test as the best restrictive measure.

The proposed bill would amend the act of March 3, 1891, "by adding to the class of aliens excluded from admission to the United States all persons over 15 years of age and physically capable of reading, who cannot read the English language or some other language; but an admissible immigrant or a person now in or hereafter admitted to this country may bring or send for his wife his children under 18 years of age, and his parents or grandparents over 50 years of age, if they are otherwise admissible, whether they are able to read or not."

Section 2 of the proposed law reads: "That for the purpose of testing the ability of the immigrant to read, the inspection officers shall be furnished with copies of the Constitution of the United States, printed on uniform pasteboard slips, each containing not less than twenty nor more than twenty-five words of said Constitution in the various languages of the immigrants in double small pica type. Each immigrant many designate the language in which he prefers the test shall be made, and shall be required to read the words on a slip in such language. No two immigrants listed on the same manifest shall be tested with the same slip. An immigrant failing to read as above provided shall not be admitted, but shall be returned to the country from which he came at the expense of the steamship or railroad company which brought him."

The object of this section is to provide a simple, uniform and thorough method of applying the educational test, and one which cannot be defeated by the "coaching" so often given to immigrants.

Such is the bill that the local Associated Charities indorse n the following interesting resolutions:

Whereas, it is impossible to make the condition of the very poor substantially better when every arriving steamer brings more of the ignorant and unskilled to compete for the employments that are open only to the ignorant and unskilled; and, whereas, the difficulty of securing universal education is greatly increased, when every year sees landed an army of one hundred thousand (100,000) illiterates, whose children will start upon their career as American citizens from ignorant homes under practically foreign surroundings; and, whereas, our standard of public morality is endangered when there are annually added to our great cities whole communities which are unfit for the responsibilities of American citizenship, and whose members, whatever their good intentions, become helpless victims of the corrupt boss, or of the irresponsible agitator; and, whereas, the forces working for morality and enlightenment cannot prevent the growth of the most dangerous forms of anarchy and lawlessness, while we continue to make constant additions to the great masses of ignorance that we already have; and, whereas, the illiteracy test seems on the whole to be the best practical way of reducing the most undesirable elements of our present immigration; and, whereas, a bill prepared by the Immigration Restriction League is now pending in Congress, which embodies the illiteracy test,

Now, therefore, the Associated Charities hereby indorses said bill, bill, and urges upon all Senators and Representatives in Congress the importance of prompt and favorable action to restrict immigration by means of such an educational test.

Expulsion from the Methodist Episcopal Church carries with it expulsion from the Epworth League without further action being necessary. Such is the decision of the Board of Bishops of the church.

NEW STYLES.

A Complete First Showing of Novelties.

If we were to add music and flowers to the generous display of new styles in furniture we would be justified in calling this exposition a "Spring opening," but you will find no flowers, no music, no decorations. In their stead you will find an unparalleled assortment of furniture. In making selections for Spring and Summer we have taken great pains. Three buyers visited the East and bought whatever was unique and artistic and new. Our show windows are constant reflections of the elegance that this store contains, but of course we can show only a few samples in the limited window space.

We handle the finest furniture produced in Grand Rapids. We have the exclusive selling right for many of the notable firms located in that city; thus it is that we show many exclusive styles. We have received carload after carload of the finest furniture produced in America.

Old English.

Scattered throughout our store is a choice collection of these grandfather clocks. The picture shows one of the styles. There are all sorts of designs and all the popular woods to correspond with interior finishes and furniture; Mahogany, Oak, Flemish, Weathered, etc. The works are the celebrated Seth Thomas or the best imported movements. The showing is a most comprehensive one; Some of them hang and some of them stand--Every taste will find its ideal among these old fashioned clocks.

New Draperies---Carpets.

An immense assortment of new styles in draperies and window curtains. The richest upholstery materials and drapery stuffs to be found in Los Angeles are shown here. By the richest, we mean those unusual sorts which possess a color, brilliancy and richness of design that is seldom found in cheap materials; even the somber hues and the conventional designs possess a beauty seldom seen in like materials.

We are showing the finest assortment of the new French soutache curtains. They are extremely popular at present.

The new carpets were selected with an idea of harmonious blending with the drapery materials and of forming a fitting contrast to the furniture of the various rooms. The new monotone carpets are attracting no end of attention and are selling rapidly. They reflect an entirely new idea in floor covering.

BUSINESS.

The clearances sent by the city banks yesterday were far below recent averages, being only $492,736.19. For the corresponding day a year ago the amount was also small, $334,066.88.

For the week ending at noon yesterday the clearings were $4,101,622.07, the smallest amount in four weeks. For the corresponding week last year the figures were $2,930,931.78.

Activity in the New York stock market yesterday was confined to a few specialties. The statement of the New York associated banks for the week was reassuring, but slightly out of proportion. Bears had the floor in the Chicago grain pit and prices took a tumble.

GEN. MILES'S CONTENTION.

It is unfortunate—unfortunate for Gen. Miles, for the army and for the country—that the Lieutenant-General does not "hitch" with the President and the Secretary of War any better under the present administration than he did under that of President McKinley.

The commanding general of the army has an indubitable right, when called before a Congressional committee, to answer such questions as are asked him, and to answer those questions in his own way. Gen. Miles did this, in his testimony before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. Moreover he has a right to advocate any plan of army organization and to oppose any other plan not yet enacted into law. But when Gen. Miles declared, as he is reported to have done, that if the pending bill for the organization of the general staff of the army should become a law, he would resign his commission, he gave utterance to language which was, to say the least, unsoldierly. He may have arrived at a decision in his own mind to tender his resignation, in the contingency mentioned, but it was a clear breach of military discipline and propriety to make threats to that effect.

The position of Gen. Miles as to the general staff, aside from his unsoldierly threat, appears to be well taken and his argument is sound. The commanding general of the army should be such in fact as well as in name. A general staff officer is not a commanding officer, and cannot act as such until he shall have been relieved from staff duty and assigned to the command of troops by the President. The general staff should be subordinate to the commanding general, who himself is subordinate to the President as Commander-in-Chief, under the Constitution, and the commanding general should not be the chief of staff, as the pending bill proposes.

The duties of general officers—officers available for the command of troops—and those of officers of the staff are essentially different, and these duties should not be intermixed.

As Gen. Miles declared, the plan proposed is subversive of the interests of the military service, and if the bill should become a law it would have the effect of destroying the unity and efficiency of the army. It is absolutely necessary that the army, in order to maintain its highest effectiveness, should have an active controlling head under the President. The dividing up of military authority is confusing, and might in a grave emergency prove disastrous. With the President, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, rests the supreme authority. The War Department is the civil medium through which the President's authority reaches the officer in active command. Under the President, the general of the army should be in fact, as in name, the absolute head of the army, and the heads of staff and supply departments in Washington, as well as in the field, should be subject to his orders. Any plan which contemplates a distribution of the supreme authority among members of a staff, or to an army board, is not merely wrong in principle, but positively mischievous and demoralizing in operation, especially during times of war, leading to endless confusion, insubordination and bickering, greatly lowering the morale of the entire army, and correspondingly reducing its efficiency.

The position of Gen. Miles is in the main right, though he has often appeared to lack loyalty to his superiors, and was indiscreet in his expressions before the Senate committee.

The good of the military service imperatively demands a centralization of both authority and of responsibility. As the general of the army must bear a large proportion of the latter, it is just, right, and expedient that he should possess the former.

A WONDERFUL TOWN.

Ohio is in many respects a wonderful State. Not the least of the wonderful things in that wonderful State is a wonderful little town, with less than 10,000 population, which does a larger business than Los Angeles. At least, that is what is said by T. J. Mercer, formerly of the Marietta (O.) Printing Company, and now located in Los Angeles, who writes to the Marietta Register a communication, of which the following is an extract:

"Los Angeles and the surrounding country is gifted with a climate that makes me think I am as near paradise as I will ever get in this world. But beyond that there is very little to draw attention, for I will venture the assertion that Marietta, with one-sixth the population, does more business than this town. Wages are low, and there are a dozen applicants for every job that is open."

Marietta, according to the United States census of 1900, has a population of 8273, so that, instead of having one-sixth of the population of Los Angeles, it has less than one-twelfth, which makes the wonderful business transacted there all the more wonderful, not to say extraordinary, and almost incredible. For instance, a town of 8000 people which disburses more than $4,000,000 in wages—the amount expended in Los Angeles during the year ended June 30, 1900, according to the United States census—is truly an exceedingly wonderful place, for that represents an annual income from wages, in the manufacturing industry alone, of $500 for every man, woman and child in Marietta, or say $2500 for each family. This does not include the income of the proprietors, and there certainly must be other profitable industries there besides manufacturing, so that, taking it all together, Marietta must be one of the most wonderful and wealthy towns, not only in the United States, but in the world, or perhaps we might even say in the universe. Such a place as this should no longer hide its light under a bushel. By properly circulating these facts, the population of the place should soon be increased by at least several people, who would undoubtedly rush in to obtain their share of this large per capita distribution of wealth.

We should, however, like to see the plans and specifications of Marietta's enormous income. It is just possible that Mr. Mercer may be—well, let us be charitable, and say mistaken. As to the reference to the number of applicants for every vacant job in Los Angeles, that is true, and it is quite natural, for every sensible person in the United States would wish to live in Los Angeles, if he had a chance, and many of them are coming to do so.

It is true that there are many applicants for every vacant job here. There are also many vacant jobs to be filled—perhaps not quite so many as in Marietta, O., but still a large number. Among others, there is a promising opening for an able-bodied fool-killer.

NO FIGHT COMING.

Mr. Fitzsimmons seems to be a man of fits rather than fights. He has been in a state of conniptions ever since the big bid of the Los Angeles club, inviting the eminent disciples of the theory and practice of Delsarte to exhibit in the City of the Angels, staggered the sporting world. Yesterday his condition bordered on epilepsy. He frothed at the mouth with unpleasant references to the distinguished Mr. Jeffries and the town he lives in. He gave out that he positively would not come here and get walloped. There will be no weeping in any quarter over this decision, and many people will rejoice thereat. The local "sports" have made up their minds that Fitzsimmons has no fight in him, and is therefore uninteresting, while the opponents of slugging matches are freed from the necessity of showing how much fight there is in them.

CHEAP WIT.

Recent disclosures of the United States census, recording the rapid concentration of population in the large cities, has awakened renewed interest in the question of encouraging the settlement of country land, and the cultivation of the soil. "Back to the farm" is the watch-word of many social reformers, and it is not by any means a bad kind of a war cry. Benevolent private enterprise is doing something along this line, but its power is limited. The greatest impetus in this direction will be received from the irrigation of the arid lands, owned by the government. Then we may expect to see a movement back to the farm worth talking about.

Meantime, while on the one hand we are thus striving to encourage the popularity of a healthy country life, on the other we are constantly doing that which discourages sensitive and high-spirited boys from taking up farm work. We refer to the cartoons constantly appearing in the so-called comic papers, where the farmer is depicted as a bewhiskered and ridiculous freak. The American comic papers are fond of poking fun at the solemn and threadbare wit of John Bull's venerable journal, Punch, but in all fairness, it must be admitted that these exponents of American humor cannot boast much superiority along these lines. If we eliminate from their pages the book agent, the mule, the mother-in-law and the hayseed, with an occasional close imitation of Gibson's young men and young women, there is little left.

The farmer is the only member of a civilized community who is absolutely indispensable. We may get along, in a pinch, without mechanics, or soldiers, or preachers, or doctors, but we could not possibly get along without the farmer. Why, then, should he constantly be made the subject of undeserved satire and ridicule—the butt of every paragrapher's cheap wit?

We enter our protest against these pictorial lies. The farmer, in his work clothes, may make a fine contrast to the dummy in the latest English style, but these cartoons, and the spirit encouraged by them, have driven many a farmer's boy from the vocation for which he was fitted, in which he would have made a success—driven him to the city to become a kid-glove nonentity, a far more fit subject for jest and cartoon than his long-whiskered father. Stop cartooning things honorable, for 'tis the devil's weapon to smirch the good. Cartoon only that which is low, wrong, vicious, dishonorable. Then will the artist's skill become a power for good, a mighty help in purifying society.

A DELEGATE FOR ALASKA.

The Chamber of Commerce at Nome has sent an agent to Washington to urge that the Territory of Alaska be given a Delegate in Congress. This agent—George Murphy—as noted in a special dispatch from Washington to The Times, published Wednesday morning, points out that great injustice is inflicted upon the business interests of Alaska, through lack of the desired representation in the national Legislature. He declares that, although Alaska pays an annual revenue of nearly half a million dollars into the national treasury, scarcely one-third of that amount is appropriated by Congress for the needs of the Territory. It is held that with "a friend at court," in the form of a Congressional Delegate, the needs of the Territory could and would be more clearly brought to the attention of Congress and the country—which is probably true.

"Congress does not always receive accurate and impartial information in regard to existing conditions," says Mr. Murphy, "and it is not possible for people living at such a distance from the seat of national government, and with limited means of communication, to protest against legislation detrimental to their interests." He adds that "the expense now incurred by various departments of government in obtaining the information necessary to guide them in recommending legislation would be largely reduced, and a far more satisfactory state of affairs would be possible, if the people of Alaska were accorded the privilege of electing a Delegate to Congress."

There can be little doubt that Congress ought to consider this application favorably. The population and the business interests of Alaska have enormously increased during the past three or four years, and this increase is likely to continue rather than to subside. So far as can be perceived, no particular harm could come from according to this Territory—an empire in geographical area—the slight representation asked for. Territorial Delegates have only limited powers in Congress, and an Alaskan Delegate would not be able, were he so disposed, to exert an injurious influence upon any legislation pending before Congress. He might, on the other hand, render an invaluable service in bringing before the national legislative body the needs and desires of his constituency. The whole question should at least receive thorough and careful consideration at the hands of Congress.

POST-CHECK CURRENCY.

A bill was recently introduced in the Senate by Senator McMillan of Michigan, and later in the House by Representative Gardner of the same State, "to prevent robbing the mails, provide a safer and easier method of sending money by mail, and to increase the postal revenues." The bill has the indorsement of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, of many large commercial houses, manufacturers, and others. Its provisions, briefly stated, are that hereafter all paper money issued by the government, of the denominations of $1, $2 and $5, with the exception of national-bank notes, shall be printed with blank spaces on the face for the writing of the individual or firm name and postoffice address of the payee. These notes, when the blank spaces are unfilled, are to be used as ordinary paper money of their respective denominations, and can circulate as such indefinitely or until they are worn out, in the same manner as our paper money now circulates. When it is desired to send a small amount of money through the mails—$1, $2 or $5—it is only necessary for the sender to write the name and postoffice address of the payee in the blank spaces, place a stamp in the blank space reserved for it in one corner of the bill, and cancel the stamp with his initials, when the note ceases to be currency and becomes a check on the government, which the government, at any of its postoffices or depositories, will honor after it has received the indorsement of the payee. Without the latter's indorsement the check is as worthless as is any individual check without the indorsement of the person to whom alone it is made payable. With proper indorsement, upon presentation at any postoffice or government depository, the postal check is redeemed in cash, or another note of like denomination, with blank spaces unfilled, is exchanged for it, which in effect would amount to the same thing.

It is evident that this plan, if carried out as proposed, would furnish a method of sending small amounts through the mails as safely as by the present postal money-order system, but without anything like the trouble and delay now experienced in transmitting money by that method. The sender would merely take a bill from his pocketbook and cancel it as currency by converting it into a postal check. When it had served its purpose in this capacity it would find its way to the United States Treasury, to be redeemed by fresh notes, dollar for dollar, and destroyed. By the issuance of fresh notes for all those canceled, the volume of this form of currency would be kept practically constant, and there would be the additional advantage that the paper currency of the denominations named would be kept fresh and clean by the constant reissues.

The proposed post-check currency system, if adopted, would to some extent take the place of the present postal money-order system, though the latter would still be in favor for amounts larger than $10. It is proposed, also, to issue $75,000,000 of post-check currency in denominations less than $1, to be used in the same manner as the $1, $2 and $5 notes, but requiring only a one-cent stamp. The advantages of the system as a time saver are apparent at a glance. One of the difficulties of the present system is that only about half the postoffices in the country are money-order offices, whereas the post-check system would extend to all the postoffices in the land. The vexation and delay of going to the postoffice to secure a postal money order for a small amount would be obviated, to a considerable extent, and the danger of loss from sending money through the mails would be in large part done away with.

It is claimed by those who have made a study of the subject that the revenues of the Postoffice Department would be materially increased by the adoption of the post-check system. At all events, the experiment would seem to be worth trying, as there is practically no doubt that the system would be of very great convenience to the public at large.

A somewhat unusual feature of the post-check proposition, as noted by the Washington Evening Star, in an editorial on the subject, is the fact that "the inventor is a successful business man, who has for years realized the urgent necessity for a simpler way of making small remittances in the mails, and who has devoted a great deal of his time and means to the perfection of the idea, and offers, in case of its adoption, to turn the patents, and all rights under them, over to the government; free of any cost or charge whatever. He considers that should the system be adopted the consciousness of having accomplished a reform of such importance to the general public and business men will more than compensate him for his time and trouble."

TRIALS OF A DIRECTORY MAN.

He was tired, hot and dusty, and when he stopped in front of a little shack of apparently two rooms and a lean-to, on the outskirts, the woman who had been pulling weeds in the yard looked up and said:

"Well, what'll you have?"

"Madam," remarked the man, taking a seat on the doorstep, and opening his book, "I represent the——"

"H'm-m-m. Another book agent. Well, I don't want your old book. I ain't got no time to waste a-readin' books."

"Ha, madam, very good," and the man smiled as he mopped his forehead. "Very good, indeed. Book agent—ha! ha!"

"Well," she snapped, "you needn't laugh. If you was pestered every day like I be with book agents, sewin' machine men, furniture-polish scamps an' newspaper solicitors, I guess you'd git mad. Can't git my hands in the dishwater any mornin' but what the door bell'll ring an' I find one o' you sharpers a standin' at the door a-smilin' an' a-bowin' like a reg'lar chessy cat. I'm sick of it, an' it's a shame that us poor wimmen have got to be bothered every day with sech a lot o' dead beats," and the woman paused for want of breath.

"But I'm the directory man, madam."

"Oh, you be. Well, land sakes, I thought you was a book agent sure, but come to look at you, you do look a leetle more refined than them sort o' fellers. Wait an' I'll bring out the rocker."

"I s'pose you want our fam'ly," she said as she dragged out a broken-backed rocker and dusted off the seat with her apron.

"Yes, just give me the names," and the man took the chair and sharpened his pencil.

"Well, now let me think. There's me. My name's Saphrony Almiry Crum—got that down? Then there's my husband, Elnathan Ebenezer Elias Crum—put him down. He ain't a-workin' now, but he drives a sprinklin' cart when he is. Then there's my biggest boy, John Henry Crum, an' Emily Francis an' Hattie Lobelia Crum—am I a-goin' too fast? I mos' forgot the twins, Jason an' Adonirum. The baby comes next. His name is Elnathan Ebenezer Elias—named after his pa. My husband's father's niece, Arrandy Hepburn Hopkins, an' Cousin Rube's folks an' their children, they live here, too. Yes, we sort o' have to double up and sleep three or four in a bed, an' if Uncle Jim an' his family come next week a-visitin' I declare, I guess some on us'll have to sleep out in the cow barn. Be you goin' so quick? Well, be sure you git them names all right now, er I'll pick a bone with you when you come ag'in."

The directory man walked away in a sort of dazed condition, but hopes are entertained for his ultimate recovery.

CUTS STEEL LIKE WAX.

Owners of Big Safes are Uneasy Because of the Invention of a Chicago Electrician.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Julius E. Haschke, a Chicago electricitn, in discovering a way to apply electricity to iron and steel so as to cut or burn the metal as a warm knife does a hard chunk of butter, has brought to bankers and other guardians of public treasure a feeling of insecurity. Mr. Haschke did not invent his carbon point—the name given the metal-cutting device—for the purpose of opening bank safes, nor does he wish, so he says, to aid or abet in any way the dark-lantern fraternity, yet he is able to cut into two pieces the thickest iron bar or steel plate.

It makes no difference to Mr. Haschke whether he is called upon to cut int two a big boiler plate in Milwaukee or sever asunder great steel ribs in the Rookery building, Chicago—he goes about his labor with full confidence that he can carry out his part of the contract. Mr. Haschke's experience in Milwaukee a few days ago is being reported far and near as an example of what his carbon point will do. A big boiler foundation was to be removed from the basement of a building. It was almost impossible to get the great mass of metal out as it lay and then it was equally preposterous to think of cutting the plate in two.

Mr. Haschke's simple invention was mentioned to the interested persons, and he was invited to go to the Cream City. The article concluded: "Will somebody tell us what Santa Monica would get from the usual encampment of 1000 men, where the city is required to put up $2500 in advance?" Past Commander Andrew J. Bell read the article, and denounced the insult offered to the Committee of Location of the Veterans' Association, who did not go to Santa Monica asking for anything, but had been invited there to look over the ground with a view to possible location. He declared that "the author of the article or the man who owns him is a fool or knave to make such a lying statement as is contained in the article. The most that had ever been asked on behalf of the Encampment Association was $1200 at Ventura six years ago, which the people gave willingly. Past Commander Kanouse, Maj. Brady and Dr. Bartlett also emphatically denounced the Outlook for its assertion that the veterans had tried to hold up the citizens of Santa Monica. Commander Mitchell stated that, speaking for himself and the committee, he thought they had gone down there very quietly; they did not go down there to ask for any money; they had not asked Santa Monica, Coronado, Long Beach or any other place for money. The people of those localities had looked upon the encampment as a business proposition, and had made their offers voluntarily. It was the sentiment of the meeting, apparently, that Santa Monica had been eternally damned, as far as the old soldiers are concerned, by the unwarranted and outrageous statement of the Outlook.

VOTED FOR LONG BEACH.

After this discussion the board of control decided in favor of Long Beach for the annual encampment, which will commence September 2 and last ten days. The only other competitor in the field was San Diego.

The following committees and their members were appointed: Committee on Programme, W. S. Daubenspeck, Los Angeles; B. Jarvis, Pasadena; H. E. Baker, Long Beach; Comrade Parker, Santa Ana. Committee appointed to draft new by-laws: Dr. H. H. Bartlett, Los Angeles; A. J. Bell, Ventura; P. Q. Kanouse, Glendale. Committee of Sons of Veterans, Col. C. E. Washburn and Capt. G. W. Conart.

PHOTOGRAPHIC SALON BY CAMERA CLUB.

ATTRACTIVE FEATURE DURING CLUB CONVENTION.

Photographers of Los Angeles to Come into Friendly Competition With the Whole Country—Preparations Under Way for Fine Exhibition.

The Los Angeles Camera Club, which now has 250 members, has launched an elaborate plan for conducting a photographic salon, during the meeting of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, in this city, May 1 to 10.

It is not an exhibit of amateur photography, they design to have, but one in which leading professional photographers from all over the United States will meet in competition with amateurs and professionals, without distinction. In both classes, Los Angeles can boast of some of the finest artists in the West, and they are anxious to cross swords with the best.

There is a threefold purpose in making the exhibit. To offer an additional attraction to the thousands of visitors to the city at that time; to show a concrete collection of California views, to which the local exhibit will be practically limited, and to awaken new interest in photographic art.

The entire six rooms and hall of the Camera Club will be devoted to the display, and neither trouble nor expense will be spared to give the pictures an artistic setting. The large exhibition room will be divided into many fancy booths, presenting three sides for the display of pictures, making not only a very attractive feature, but vastly increasing the wall space.

Leading photographers and amateurs in every part of the country have been asked to enter the competition, and yesterday the first exhibit arrived from a leading photographer in San Francisco.

In order to avoid even the semblance of favoritism, the selecting and hanging committee will be chosen from photographers and artists, both inside and outside of the club. The jury of award is likewise impartially chosen, and is is as follows: J. Bond Francisco, artist, Los Angeles; Prof. W. C. Judson, College of Fine Arts, Los Angeles; Prof. H. B. Perkins, Throop Institute, Pasadena; Will E. Chapin, cartoonist, Los Angeles; C. H. Newcombe, Northwestern Photographic Association, Minneapolis. Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, chairman of the salon committee, is in general charge.

The prizes will consist of a club medal for the best picture, certificates of merit for class pictures and a diploma for the best collection. The rules in brief are as follows: Not over ten pictures, no charge to exhibitors; all pictures to be separately framed with or without glass, or matted under glass; title, name and address of exhibition on back; pictures that have formerly drawn prizes, not eligible; all pictures to be in by April 20; pictures receiving awards to become property of Camera Club, 321 South Hill street.

On Long Tramp.

Friends of Misses Louise Gauss and Grace Fosland, pretty young women who set out from Chicago to walk to San Francisco without spending a cent of their own money, are watching the progress of the pedestrians with interest and amusement.

Both young women are capable musicians. Their acquaintances were much surprised to hear that they had reached Mendota, Ill., yesterday.

Miss Gauss is a brunette of slight stature and retiring disposition. Her parents live in Lockport, but she has been in Chicago much of her time during the past three years studying music in the American Conservatory of Music. She has a sweet soprano voice of great range and power.

While studying at the conservatory she became acquainted with Miss Fosland, who is an orphan. Miss Fosland is a blonde of bright countenance and merry disposition. She is a pianist of some ability, and has an income from her father's estate in California. She graduated from the State Normal School at San José, Cal., before her parents died. Miss Fosland came to Chicago and lived at different hotels until her departure on her present peculiar trip.

The young women planned their expedition secretly and confided in but one friend, who willingly furnished car fare and money enough to carry the pair to Aurora, where they arrived early Monday morning. From there they walked twenty miles to Millbrook, where they remained over night, being driven to Sandwich by interested residents of the village in the morning.

They expect to reach San Francisco some time this summer. They will not receive money, but will accept contributions of railroad tickets, lodging and meals.—[Chicago Chronicle.

FOR HOUSING BIG THRONGS.

Preparations for Week of La Fiesta.

Homes for the Army of Clubwomen.

Mrs. Wiggins Says Hotels Have Made Satisfactory Rates for All Comers.

Arrangements for housing and feeding the thousands of visitors to be here Fiesta time are proceeding with method and dispatch under the direction of efficient local committees. Hundreds have already been located with complete satisfaction to all—the visitors, hotel men and the committee.

The task is monumental, as the variety of tastes and the means of the women delegates to the biennial and others is unlimited. Suitable quarters are found for all classes of applicants and reservations made for exact dates if desired, and it is possible. This involves a vast amount of mail and telegraphic correspondence, which is increasing in volume daily.

Mrs. Frank Wiggins is the capable chairman of the Hotel Committee for the biennial. Headquarters and an information bureau are maintained at the Hotel Westminster. Hundreds of letters are received here daily, with all manner of requests, showing the extensive advertisement of the events of Fiesta week. Mrs. Wiggins states that the arrangements already made have pleased the prospective visitors and are perfectly satisfactory to the hotel men and all others concerned.

"The hotel proprietors have not put their rates way down for the convention of the General Federation," said Mrs. Wiggins yesterday, "and they shouldn't be expected to do so. The first-class hostelries have made a rate of $3.50 and $4 a day, American plan, to delegates, and that is reasonable for the accommodations afforded. Of course, that is for a single room, and the prices range upward to $8 and $10 a day for finer quarters.

"It all depends on what the patron demands. A front room, from which the parade could be viewed might cost $5 or $6 a day. If a person has made no reservations, cannot secure a single room and is determined to stay at the finest hotels, a suite with bath would cost $8 or $10 a day, as one individual would occupy apartments which would otherwise accommodate a family of three or four. It is a case of pay for what you get. Every one has been well satisfied so far. We have had no trouble at all on that score.

"Delegates tell us exactly what is wanted, and what price they are willing to pay. We find the most suitable quarters possible under the conditions stated and send details. If desired, the parties are booked at the hotels for certain rooms on certain dates, and the reservations are made without question.

"The entire Illinois delegation, including the Chicago Culture Club, will have headquarters at the Westminster, the full number of rooms required having been already secured. The Kansas delegation of sixty or more women has arranged for accommodations at the Bellevue Terrace. The New England delegation will probably go to the Van Nuys Broadway, and the Colorado women have been recommended to the Abbotsford Inn. Other State delegations or clubs will be located as soon as arrangements can be concluded which are mutually satisfactory."

A neat little booklet called the "Biennial Guide" has been issued containing much information about Southern California and women's clubs. Twenty thousand copies have been printed, and one will be sent every women's club in the United States.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Biennial Affairs.

Reports of committees on progress of work for the biennial were heard yesterday afternoon at the mass meeting in the Woman's Club House. Mrs. W. J. Washburn reported very generous offers from Barker Bros., the Los Angeles Furniture Company, Niles Pease and Isaac T. Martin, of lumber and furniture needed for the convention. A request was made for loan of Turkish rugs from club members or others.

It was announced that Dr. Follansbee has agreed to act as resident physician during the sessions.

Mrs. Matthew Robertson of the Decoration Committee stated that one of the rooms in the Simpson Auditorium is to be transformed into a Turkish, another into a Japanese room. The red room will be Indian, and designated as "The Wigwam."

Mrs. Cowles announced that there will be a memorial service on the last day of the convention.

The most recent appointment for the convention is that of Mrs. C. P. Bartlett as sergeant-at-arms. This office is a new one, and was created in accordance with a recommendation made at the Milwaukee biennial. It will be one of the most important positions during the convention, and calls for a large amount of executive ability, as Mrs. Bartlett will have charge of all the doors at the six daily meetings, and will appoint and arrange for the work of about eighty women to act as doorkeepers, etc. She has long been a quiet, but very effective worker in the Ebell Society, and the appointment is a formal recognition of her ability as an organizer and leader. Under her curatorship the tourist section of the Ebell has grown from a membership of little more than a dozen to so large a size that the auditorium of the club is used for its meetings.

RAILROAD RECORD.

BIG SETTING OF EGGS AND NECESSARY HEN.

CONDITIONS RIGHT FOR HATCHING OF GREAT DEALS.

Extraordinary Gathering of Railroad Notables Lends Color to Reported Purchase of Rock Island by Harriman. More Startling News Coming.

The telegraphic report published in The Times yesterday that E. H. Harriman had secured control of the Rock Island system, created a great deal of interest among the railroad men here. One of them put it this way:

"There is a 'hen and a big setting of eggs.' What are all these people doing here? E. P. Ripley, Paul Morton and J. W. Kendrick, the three heads of the Santa Fé, are here, and the road back East is running itself. Then comes W. B. Leeds, president of the Rock Island, and no sooner does he get here, than he flies back to Chicago. Then comes the report that Harriman has gained control of Leeds's road.

"Mr. Harriman leaves the East and comes to El Paso, from which point he goes into Mexico. J. C. Stubbs, his right hand man, comes on here ahead of Mr. Harriman, meets O. E. McCormick, and William Sproul here. J. Kruttschnitt is already with Harriman. Stubbs and the other Southern Pacific men spend two days, and make it known they do not want to see any one, especially you newspaper people. Then they all go back to El Paso, by special train, to meet Mr. Harriman again, and they will all be here about the middle of next week.

"President Eddy of the El Paso and Northwestern was here. Yoakum was here.

"I tell you, if it means nothing special, it is the most extraordinary meeting of so many big railroad men away out here by accident that I ever heard of. I should not wonder if the Rock Island story proved true, and I would not wonder if other startling stories followed."

That is just what Messrs. Stubbs, McCormick and Sproul have done—gone East again to meet Mr. Harriman coming West.

Black-and-white pictures are given of a type of every employé from ticket agent to track-walker, accompanied by some interesting facts, figures and claims of the Burlington system.

LIVE IN JERUSALEM.

THE AMERICAN COLONY OF "OVERCOMERS."

BY REV. CLIFTON HARLY LEVY.

[Specially Contributed to The Times.]

LIVING permanently at Jerusalem is an American colony. It is not like the American colony at Paris or London, living abroad because the United States is not sufficiently aristocratic for its members, but this colony of Americans has settled at Jerusalem because it wished to approach the simple righteousness of Jesus as nearly as it might by breathing the same air which He breathed and seeing the same places that were seen by Him when on earth.

The idea and personnel of the colony are alike American. It originated in a little band of enthusiasts who lived in Chicago about twenty-five years ago. These simple folk studied the New Testament, and, casting aside all the dogmas of the sects, saw there what seemed to them to be the plain doctrine of Jesus, that it is the duty of man to live at peace with his neighbor and love his neighbor as himself.

The leaders of this little band of believers in action rather than dogma were Horatio Spafford and his wife and William Rudy. After four or five years, in which they attempted to realize their ideals in Chicago, it seemed to the leaders and their fellow believers that the atmosphere of that wicked city made it almost impossible to realize their ideals while living there.

After looking all over the world for a good place in which to settle, it occurred to these good men and women that there was no better place on earth to try to realize the dreams of Jesus than in the very city where He had stood and taught. So it happened that some twenty years later fourteen of these energetic Christians, with their wives and children, left Chicago for Jerusalem.

There they have lived in peace and good will, being joined some four years ago by other emigrants from the United States and some Swedes, who had been persuaded that the American colony suited their ideas of thrift and righteousness. So now there are about one hundred and sixty souls in the colony, which is one of the most remarkable features of that wonderful city, Jerusalem.

FAITH OF THE "OVERCOMERS"

All kinds of reports as to the belief of the "Overcomers," as they are popularly called, have been circulated. It has been said that this band of fanatics came from America to Jerusalem to await the coming of Jesus. It was said that their leader, Horatio Spafford, received inspirations in a dark room and that his followers obeyed him implicitly. It was further added that the members of the colony ascend the Mount of Olives every day to catch the first view of Jesus among the clouds, believing that He will reveal Himself and then descend to earth to judge the "quick and the dead."

It was also stated that milk was kept warm at night, ready for the Lord and Master, and that asses were kept saddled, so that they might immediately leap into the saddle when Jesus appeared in the distance, and thus they would be the first to welcome Him on Olivet. Some stated that when this colony reached Jerusalem they held that they would never die, because the Scripture says, "The wages of sin is death," but, as they had overcome sin, death could not reach them. It was also reported that when a burial ground was offered them they refused it, holding that they did not need any, as they would never die, but would live until the second coming of Jesus and then exist forever. All of these reports are emphatically denied by the members of the colony, who resent, if they resent anything, this constant misrepresentation to which they have been subjected.

It is true that they differ from other sects, but it is chiefly in the rejection of those very dogmas which have led to the multiplication of Christian sects.

Going back to the New Testament in the Greek they found a single word—pistis—which has been twisted to mean faith. They say that it means nothing but confidence, and has no reference whatever to dogmas of belief or faith; that if men will but have confidence in each other all the social problems will be solved, and the hard places in life smoothed over. In other words, in order to reach the primitive, simple teaching of Jesus the theologists of the schools must be thrown away and His teaching of love for God and man must be followed implicitly.

They are not awaiting the second coming of Jesus with anxiety as to how to receive Him, for they do not believe that He will come until the world has been conquered by His spirit.

The people must learn how to overcome evil—all the temptations, jealousy, pride, vanity, covetousness, voluptuousness, passion and lawlessness. The way to do this, they hold, is to place God above everything and to love our neighbors as ourselves.

"The will must be fashioned into a tool in God's hand, and action is the outward sign that the life of Jesus has been taken as the practical example. If the neighbor is loved as ourselves is not all evil abolished? I cannot then be jealous, hate any one or deceive, nor do evil to any one, because that other one is as myself.

"When all manifest love toward all others the lack of harmony which is the disorganizing force in the world, vanishes. Competition is given up because under the spell of mutual love all questions as to the 'market,' the ascertaining of the workmen's terms, the misery of poverty vanish, for whatever the rich man has the poor man shares with him. The ridiculous, petty distinctions of rank lose their force, because here all are brothers and sisters. Even law becomes unnecessary, for there is no need to enforce laws against those who do not trespass."

THEORIES APPLIED TO LIFE.

These are not merely theories which have been suggested in similar ways before, but the theory is realized in the life of this peculiar people. They can hardly be called a colony, like the socialistic Ruskin colonies and similar enterprises, for all organization is lacking. There are no directors or leaders, save such as lead by force of wider experience and knowledge. Each individual man and woman does what and how he or she pleases. There is a common purse into which all earnings are put, and when any one requires any money he or she takes it out of the purse, and no one asks any questions.

Complete confidence is the basis of the entire arrangement, and it might be more correct to call the aggregation of individuals a family than anything else, for their relations are truly fraternal.

One of the oldest members of the American family is another Jacob (Elihu,) who has been a member for twenty-one years. Spafford died some four years ago. Brother Jacob is a marvel of learning, speaking no less than twelve languages.

Every member of this great family of 120 follows some trade suited to his or her tastes. Some weave, others make rag carpets, some attend to the household duties, baking and cooking and cleaning; others do the washing. Some make shoes; others are tailors and dressmakers. There are goldsmiths and photographers among the members of this family, and some are trained teachers. Olive wood is fashioned into all kinds of articles, beautiful and useful, and the plants and the flowers of the Holy Land are gathered and pressed in albums for sale all over the world.

A late visitor reports entering the weaving-room and noting the different kinds of cloth woven: "When I looked at them and found some rough and ugly, while others were fine and tasteful, I asked the attendant, 'When there is such a great difference between the pieces of cloth you weave, does not one sister get jealous of the other one who gets the finer dress?' In case any one feels like that, then it is the time to overcome it,' she answered with a glittering light in here eye and a friendly smile on her lip."

MADE HIM SIGN FOR IT.

Messenger Boy Hired to Call a Sleepy Man Early Took a Certificate That He Performed the Task.

[New York Tribune.] At 1 o'clock the other morning a well-dressed man strolled into one of the uptown messenger offices. He had been dining out, and evidently, from the rakish tilt to his opera hat, the dinner had been a success.

"I want one of your trustworthy alarm clocks," he said to the man who receives calls and endeavors to keep the force of messenger boys in subjection.

"Alarm clocks," exclaimed the clerk. "This is no jewelry store."

"You don't understand," returned the man. "How careless of you. I want a messenger boy to come and waken me in the morning."

"What hour?" The clerk was all business again, for the request was not unusual after all.

"Seven o'clock; I've got to catch a train," he explained.

"All right, sir; 7 o'clock," assured the clerk.

The man turned as he was going out of the door. "Have the boy hammer the door hard," he cautioned. "I'm a 'dead one' when I get to sleep, and I've got to catch that train." Then he went home, which was around several corners and up several flights of stairs, and went to sleep with absolute confidence.

The whistles were blowing 7 o'clock, and the gray dawn was giving way to the more solid light of positive day. A small boy in uniform hammered with a club, his "wakener," on the door of the man who had dined the night before. "Get up in there," he cried; "get up, you old sleepy-head!"

"You go away from my door," comes in sleepy tones from the room. "It's a mistake. I don't want to get up."

"Oh, yes, you do, my dodo bird," is the fresh reply, and the tattoo on the door goes on with redoubled strength.

"All right, boy; I'm awake now," howls the man who has been sleeping. "You can go away now."

"Not till you've signed this receipt," the boy insists.

The man has to crawl out of bed and come to the door. The boy has a paper ready, and as he is a careful man, he reads before signing. It certifies that he has been thoroughly awakened by Messenger No. 432, and that he is not going back to bed again that day.

"Is this a joke?" he asks the boy.

"Naw, 'tain't no joke," replied the messenger through his teeth. "If we'se didn't make you'se do this you'd be down to de office about noon a-howlin' dat we didn't wake you'se. Now, if you'se goes back to your bag o' feathers we'se got yet in black an' white, an' no mistake."

Not Necessary.

"I suppose you had to study anatomy as a preliminary to your art work."

"Hardly. Why, that would be a handicap. My business is to draw fashion-plate figures."—[Chicago Post.

"That's right!" exclaimed old Mr. Bull, approvingly, after reading of the proposed legislation against anarchists. "It's a good thing to keep anarchy out of this country altogether."

"The idea!" cried Mrs. Bull; "why, they ain't nothin' better to rub on bruises and burns."—[Philadelphia Press.

The Story of the Return of Miss Stone from Captivity.

BACK TO SALONIKA.

[FROM THE LONDON GRAPHIC.]

SALONIKA, March 27.—"Tout vient a point a qui sait attendre." The prisoners are at liberty. The "Mission" that released them is no more. The Turks have been tricked, and the Stone affair fills a soiled page in the history of the eastern question. Improbable as it appeared a week ago, I have talked and shaken hands with the heroine of the story. I have sketched and photographed her in a dozen different attitudes. What is more remarkable still, I was the sole representative of the press of Europe and America at the meeting of the captives and their deliverers at Strumnitza. The journey of the Mission thither from Seres is worthy to be recorded, for it was marked by some important developments of the affair.

HOW THE NEWS WAS RECEIVED.

It is necessary, therefore, to hark back to Sunday morning, the 23d, when the Mutesarif received a telegram from Strumnitza informing him that Stone, Tsilka and the "newly arrived" had been released—all well—at daybreak, on the outskirts of the village of Garguchur, two hours distant from the town. I was writing quietly in the little room of five windows and two doors that has been my home so long, when an official of the Konak entered in a breathless condition, and between his gasps informed me that His Excellency, the Governor, had sent him post haste with the news. He told me also that he had given the same message to Mr. Gargiulo, and that gentleman had "kissed his hands and his feet"—a Turkish figure of speech—while begging him not to come to me. Under these circumstances a backsheesh was clearly indicated, and the messenger left with many blessings upon the head of the Daily Graphic. Then commenced a great packing up of mule trunks, followed by a series of farewell visits to various notables of Seres. There is only one train a day from Seres to Salonika, and the hour of its departure is seldom exact. The station is, moreover, half an hour's drive from the town. Therefore the traveler needs a wide margin of time if he will go by it. The Mission and myself were of one mind on this point, and we found ourselves on the platform with half an hour to spare. The interval, however, did not hang heavy on our hands, for the news of our departure had spread like wildfire, and crowds of people came down to see us off. Among them was the Governor of Seres himself, who talked long and low to Mr. Gargiulo. Before the train arrived I was informed that a telegram had been sent to Miss Stone, warning her on no account to make any statement about her captivity until the arrival of the Mission. It was obviously, then, no use my trying to get to her first, and I therefore adhered to my principle of shadowing the Mission, and traveled with it to Salonika, where we rested for the night.

LEFT BEHIND.

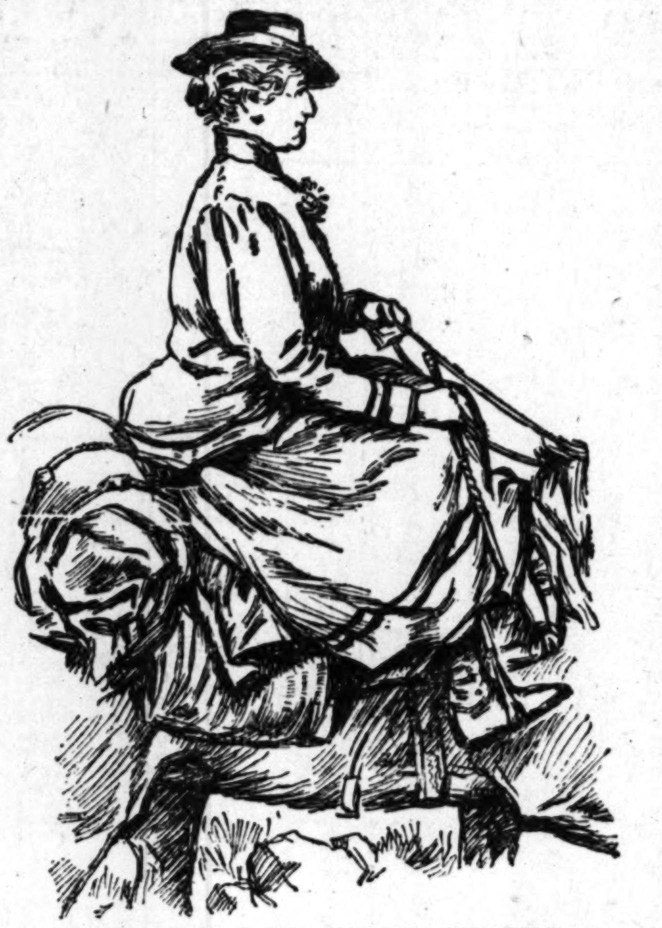
The next morning at daybreak we met again at the station, where Tsilka's husband was waiting, bag in hand, ready for departure. There were several police officers on the platform, and at the last moment they refused permission for him to go, even though Mr. Gargiulo promised to be answerable for him. Let the evidence against him be what it may, one could only feel a profound pity for the bitter disappointment of Ligord as he watched the train steam out of the station. Throughout the journey I tried to realize that we were going to see Miss Stone, but the idea even escaped me. It seemed certain that something would happen—as it had happened so often before—to thwart our wishes. Even the bundle of ladies' rugs and capes which Dr. House had with him failed to carry conviction, and I doubted it was only one more ruse to throw me off the scent. The part of Macedonia we were now traveling through was new to me, and deeply interesting. The railway track lay over a real South African veldt, upon which huge droves of horses and herds of cattle grazed. The horizon was bounded here, as elsewhere, by snowclad mountains, all aglow in the rays of the rising sun. Chief of them all was the stately Kalmak-Cholon, "the robber of sugar," as the Turks call him, for he is whiter than his fellows. Near Strumnitza Station the rail has bored itself a passage along the cliffs of a magnificent gorge, through which rushes the Varda River, the Axius of ancient time, and "the fairest stream that flows in all the earth," according to the "Iliad." Its wide-reaching waters are crossed repeatedly by girder bridges, and these were all guarded by soldiers, who stood at attention as the train steamed over.

AN ILLITERATE LINGUIST.

Strumnitza Station is a mere stopping place in this wild country, for the town itself is five hours distant by the horse road and eleven hours by the chaussée, and it lies over a pass 4000 feet high. Horses had been telegraphed for to await our arrival, and these, we found, were ready, with guides and a mounted escort. The party consisted of Mr. Gargiulo, Dr. House, his son, myself and my dragoman, Herman Charri. A record of my chase of the Mission would be incomplete without a reference to this man, who has been my faithful attendant through every turn and twist of it, and if at the end I was "in at the death" it is largely owing to him. The narrative of his experiences in the Orient would fill a readable volume if he could only write it, for he was many years a servant of Gen. Gordon in the Soudan, and only escaped his master's fate by being sent down to Cairo with dispatches shortly before the siege of Khartoum. A man who speaks four or five European languages has some right to be called a linguist; but here is an illiterate with a perfect command of eleven. The conditions of life out here, and the mixture of races are such that every ragged peasant can talk in more than one tongue. The guides who accompanied us spoke alternately to Mr. Gargiulo in Greek, to Dr. House in Bulgarian and to me in Turkish.

STRUMNITZA.

The escort accompanied us to the top of the pass, a stiff climb of two and a half hours, where we found a blockhouse, a big log fire, and Turkish coffee made by the soldiers. The view from this lofty mountain ridge was the finest of many I have seen in this beautiful country. Looking back upon the zigzags by which we had come up, the eye traveled down to the rich flat lands of the valley, with villages here and there, and the silver-gleaming waters of the Varda between them. A turn to the right-about, and how changed the aspect of the country. Here there was nothing but mountain rising behind mountain, jagged, desolate and barren. Between the ranges a rolling wave of mud-hills, the débris of an ice age, torn and rent with torrents. Not a sign of life or cultivation anywhere, only an eagle with broad-stretched wings, circling leisurely in the sky. Here, indeed, was a country meet for brigands. I began to feel that Miss Stone was near. The soldiers at the blockhouse had told us that Strumnitza was three hours further on. More than that time had passed, our horses still floundered in the mud, and no city was in sight. All at once, through a narrow gorge, there appeared an ancient ruin of a castle perched upon a rock, and then the roofs of many houses, climbing, step by step, up the hill toward us. Our arrival was evidently expected, for two police officers were waiting on the road, and after taking down the names of the party, they escorted us to the Konak, whither we were followed by an ever-growing crowd of men, women and children. The interview with the Caimacan was a brief one, only sufficiently long for the discussion of the coffee and cigarette, which a Turk offers to every visitor, and the exchange of compliments. From the Konak it was but a few steps further down the hill, and then came the end of the journey.



MISS STONE, ON THE ROAD FROM STRUMNITZA.

[Sketched from life by London Graphic Artist-Correspondent.]

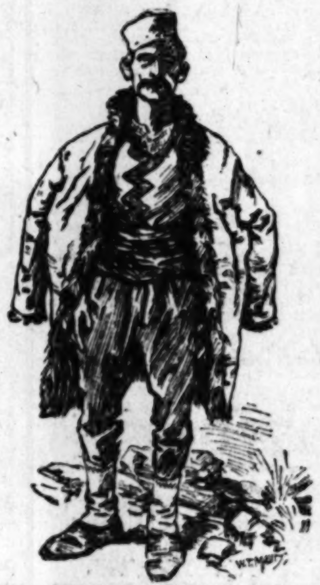
THE FIRST GLIMPSE OF THE LADIES.

In an overhanging house at the corner of the street, I saw two women looking from an upper window, and one of them held a baby in her arms. They were utter strangers to me, but I knew them at a glance. In the gateway we were met by a frock-coated gentleman in a fez, who welcomed us in English, and led the way, up a narrow stairway, crowded with children, into the reception room, which was empty. Dr. House introduced their host, Mr. Kimoff, Protestant pastor of Strumnitza, and they then left the room together. Mr. Gargiulo remained, however, and some of the children, too, so I felt perfectly safe, and waited, taking notes of the room meanwhile. Half an hour went by, but the ladies did not appear, and I could see that Mr. Gargiulo was getting angry. Was it right that the representative of the United States government should be kept in waiting thus? He called the host, and asked him to fetch Dr. House. This message had the desired result, and Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka entered, followed by the doctor. The rescuers and the rescued were face to face at last. I had prepared myself for an affecting scene, something, perhaps, taht would recall the relief of Ladysmith.

A FORMAL RECEPTION.

The reception accorded by Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka to the man who had played the principal part in their release was doubtless American, but it was disappointing. They greeted him, as they greeted me, with a hearty shake of the hand, and smilingly acknowledged our congratulations, but nothing more. Was it the blighting presence of a newspaper correspondent that closed their lips, or was it that they were weak and exhausted by the terrible experiences of their long imprisonment? If the latter was the cause there was certainly no trace of it apparent, for both ladies assured us that they were in perfect health, and their good looks bore them out. Miss Stone limped slightly from a strained knee, which, I understood from Mme. Tsilka, had been caused by a fall from her horse, but Miss Stone told me later that it was the result of putting her foot through a trap door in the floor of a room which she entered in the dark. The official character of the meeting between the ladies and the Mission was further maintained by the arrival of the Caimacan, and he was shortly followed by Mme. Tsilka's baby. She was presented to the company by her mother, who was evidently very proud of her. For a child of seven weeks she was wonderfully big and strong, and it was something to know that in spite of the exposure to the elements and the want of proper clothing she had never once suffered from a chill or any other disorder.

When Mme. Tsilka brought her baby into the room to be introduced to her rescuers, she was followed by a wild-looking mountaineer, with a sheepskin coat thrown over his shoulders. This was Aguiah, the Albanian, who found the two ladies on Sunday morning at daybreak, outside the village of Garguchur, and brought them in to Strumnitza. From the picturesque point of view his advent was a very happy one, for he imparted to this conventional afternoon tea party the needful spirit of romance. He entered the room like a whirlwind from the mountain. The preponderant frock coats and starched collars of the company vanished from our view. In the presence of this man we were face to face with the brigands. Abrupt in movement and in speech, lean and wiry in form, he needed but a rifle in his hand to serve as model of the mountain robbers of Macedonia. And yet, withal this rough exterior, there was a great gentleness in his dark, keen eyes when he bent over the mother's chair and looked at the little one lying in her arms. One might have thought he was the father, so proud he seemed of his charges. He told us when and where he found them, and emphasized his superior claim upon the baby by wetting his finger and touching her forehead. Miss Stone took advantage of the presence of the Caimacan to ask him—through Mr. Gorgiulo—to return the shepherds' cloaks that she and Mme. Tsilka were wearing when they came from the brigands, and which had been seized by the police. This the polite Caimacan at once consented to do, though I doubt whether many magistrates in England would have so readily surrendered the only tangible clew that they possessed to the identity of the brigands.



THE GUIDE OF THE RANSOMED LADIES.

Aguiah, the Albanian, Who Found Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka on the Mountains.

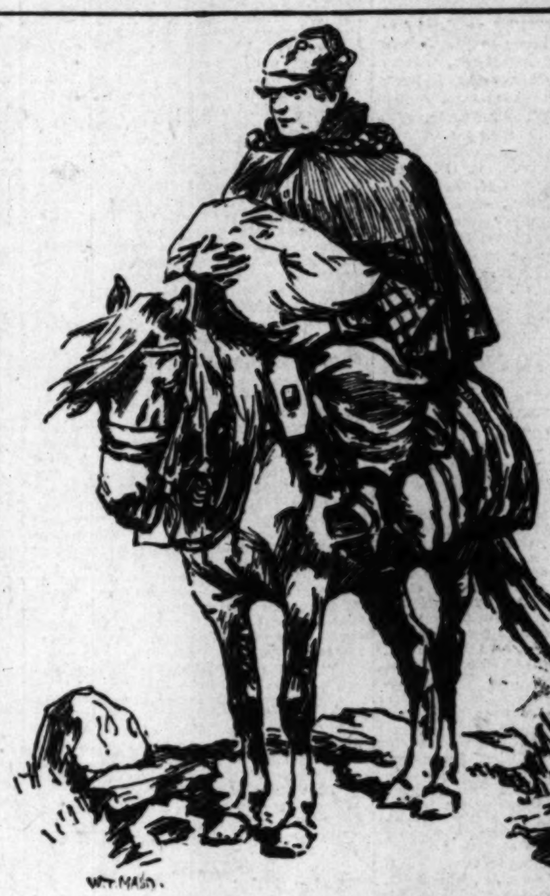
[Sketched by London Graphic Artist-Correspondent.]

MME. TSILKA'S NARRATIVE.

Mme. Tsilka, beside whom I was seated, was painfully uncommunicative, and the result of my efforts to interview her on this occasion may be told in a very few words. She spoke of Miss Stone with unbounded admiration, for that lady had been her only attendant during her accouchement, and she had done everything that was possible under the extraordinary circumstances. The baby had enjoyed remarkable health during its seven weeks of existence in the gloom of a cave that was filled with smoke, and in the journeys by night over the frozen mountains. Although, as I saw, she was now dressed in a little frilled cap and a smart pelisse, with everything correct underneath, she had until last Sunday had nothing to cover her but the thick coarse cloth that the mountaineers wrap around their legs puttie-fashion. Although their captors had never come actually into contact with the Turkish troops, they had more than once been in their neighborhood, and preparations were made for a combat. It was during these moments that the ladies, blindfold, and seated on their horses, which were each held by a brigand, had experienced a "mauvias quart d'heure," not knowing whether they, by chance, might not be in the line of fire. I gathered from Mme. Tsilka that they had been traveling continuously during the last three weeks. The daylight was now beginning to fade; the conversation also commenced to flag, and Miss Stone rose to go. The "Mission" then departed to make preparations for the final journey on the morrow, and I went with Mr. Gargiulo to the house of the Pasha, where we were quartered most luxuriously for the night.

THE DEPARTURE FROM STRUMNITZA.

The next morning the horses were ready, as ordered, to start at 10 o'clock, but it was more than an hour later when the procession left Strumnitza. The whole population was fizzling with excitement, and the escort and police had hard work to make a way for us through the crowded streets. There was so much kissing and handshaking between the ladies and their Bulgarian friends that it seemed we should never get clear of the town. It was just at the bottom of the gorge, where the houses end and the road commences to climb the mountain, that a party of Miss Stone's converts were grouped and sang the hymn "God keep you till we meet again." The "Kismetli"—the luck-child, so christened by the brigands—was carried in the arms of a servant at the head of the column, which was now of a considerable length, for several Strumnitza people profited by the escort to journey down to the railway. From the top of the hill we gained an extensive view of the broad valley in which Strumnitza lies. Here the villages are unusually numerous for Macedonia, and the population is amost entirely Bulgarian. I ventured to remark to Miss Stone upon the number of villages and the well-tilled fields that lay spread out below us, and her reply was: "Yes; but how will those poor people escape when the trouble begins?" We who have been free to travel this country so long know something of what the Turks are saying about the future, but it is worthy of note that those with whom Miss Stone has been in contact should also speak with apprehension of it. As we rode along there were frequent cries of "Haidev" from Mr. Gargiulo, who began to fear that we should miss the train at Strumnitza station.



MME. TSILKA WITH THE BABY BORN IN CAPTIVITY.

[Sketched from life by London Graphic Artist-Correspondent.]

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

The sun was hot, and the horses sweated as they labored through the boggy ground, but near the Turkish village of Chipelli we got upon the rock, and commenced to climb the pass. Chipelli is a mere collection of mud huts plastered to the mountainside, and just below the snow line. On a little patch of grass some young Turks were wrestling with each other, stripped to the waist, and utterly heedless of the biting wind that swept through the pass. We were near the top of it now; the blockhouse stood up like a beacon against the sky, and it chanced that I was riding in front with the kerragi (horseman.) Suddenly, from round a bend in the narrow track, a dark figure came running toward us at full speed. He rushed past me like a hunted man, and I saw that it was Ligord. His wife was riding close behind us, and with a startled, happy cry she bent for his embrace. There was a brief halt while they, together, unwound the wrappings that covered the face of their little daughter, and the father then walked beside his wife, carrying the infant in his arms. At the blockhouse all descended from their horses, and climbed by a rickety ladder up to the room where the guard is quartered. Here we squatted round the fire on the floor, while the soldiers, who rose to the occasion, handed round cups of coffee, such as only a Turk can make. The remaining two and a half hours' ride to the railway passed without incident, and at the station a room had been prepared in which the distinguished travelers awaited the arrival of the train.

"NO FLIRTING WITH MISS STONE."

I have said that Miss Stone had been warned by Mr. Gargiulo from the moment of her release to be on her guard against the attacks of all correspondents anxious to interview her. For this reason, therefore, there was little opportunity given me for conversation with her, and, indeed, as was right, her old friend, Dr. House rode beside her all the way, and Mr. Gargiulo acted as a sort of "flanker" to the convoy. Once, indeed, I did endeavor to abstract some information by asking her pointblank if she had really been taken into Bulgaria by the brigands, but she declined to make any answer, and Mr. Gargiulo, who was riding just behind us, called out, "There must be no flirting with Miss Stone." The interested public of two continents must, therefore, be content to wait until the lady has committed her story into the hands of the American publisher who has bought all rights for £2000. It is not likely that they will be quite satisfied even then, for I have authority to state that both ladies are under a bond to the brigands to give no compromising details of their captivity. It is for this reason that their mouths are practically closed, and the story—fully and truly told—will never be given to the world.

RAILROAD AGITATION IN NORTH ARIZONA.

SANTA FE PACIFIC BILL NOT IN GENERAL FAVOR.

Two Rights-of-way Through San Francisco Mountain Forest Reserve—Commonwealth Mining Company Will Have its Own Branch Line.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 21.—The Santa Fé Pacific bill is agitating the northern tier of Arizona counties. The County Supervisors appear to have the idea that the Santa Fé Pacific is trying to put itself into a position to utterly defy the tax collectors. The railroad company disclaims this, and evinces a willingness to aid in the support of the counties through which its line passes. In earnest of this, an offer has been made by the Santa Fé to pay an annual tax of $175 a mile on its trackage in Arizona and New Mexico. This, figured on the mean rate of taxation in the counties affected, would signify a tax levy of about $4000 a mile. Now the railroad voluntarily pays on $2500 a mile. The Arizona authorities are willing to take the offer of $175 a mile, but want it embodied in the bill. New Mexico's Delegate objects to the specification of any amount.

The United States Senate has passed a bill, introduced by Senator Burton, granting the Central Arizona Railway Company permission to build a line through the San Francisco Mountain forest reserve. Another report is that the Senate has passed a bill granting a right of way through the same reserve to the Arizona Mineral Belt Railway Company. Whether these two roads are coincident is not known. There is such a road as the Central Arizona Railroad. It is eleven miles long, and runs from Flagstaff into the pine woods to the southward. It is owned by the Arizona Lumber Company, and used only as a logging road. It is the successor of a line incorporated in 1880 under the name of the Arizona Mineral Belt Railway, which was designed to reach Globe by way of Tonto Basin. Several attempts have been made to secure a feasible route from Flagstaff to Jerome. Senator Clark had surveying parties in the field for months, but the grades by any possible route down the rim into the Verde Valley were found too excessive, and the idea was abandoned. It is understood that it is designed to run a branch of this Globe line to Jerome, though it must meet with the same difficulties that Clark was unable to overcome. A report from Washington is to the effect that the Central Arizona charter provides for a road to run from some Pacific Coast point, supposed to be San Diego, eastward, crossing the Colorado about at the mouth of Bill Williams Fork, and thence through North-Central Arizona to an indeterminate connection in the northeast.

SOUTHERN OPERATIONS.

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 21.—Active work has been begun on the College Peak-Fairbank Railway cut-off of the El Paso and Southwestern road. The preliminary surveys have been completed, and grading camps have been established between Fairbank and Tombstone. The distance is only about ten miles, and none of the work is heavy. It is understood that as grading is finished on the eastern end near El Paso, the grading camps will be moved to the line of the cut-off.

General Manager John Brockman of the Commonwealth Mining Company, tired of waiting for the promised branch railway from the Southern Pacific, has announced that his company, unaided, is about to build a branch road from Cachise Station to the mine at Pearce, eighteen miles. It is denied that the Southern Pacific has any interest in the enterprise. The road is to have a connection also with the new Bisbee line cut-off, thus giving Pearce camp the advantage of competitive railway transportation.

The crossing of the Southern Pacific Railway line at Lordsburg by the Arizona and New Mexico Railway Company, and the beginning of track laying on the Lordsburg and Hachita road, was accomplished without incident a few days ago, the Southern Pacific Company withdrawing all obstacles heretofore in the way.

Luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Clark entertained at dinner Thursday evening, the occasion being one of the many delightful affairs that have been arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Clark, Jr., during their visit to Los Angeles. An exquisite centerpiece of white roses and asparagus plumosus formed the chief decoration of the beautifully-appointed table, to which the pink shades on the candles gave a touch of pretty color. Other guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Connell, Miss Leboux of Butte, Mont., Miss Hammond from San Francisco, and E. T. Earl.

For Sweet Charity.

The reception given by Mrs. C. B. Woodhead at her home, No. 852 Buena Vista street, last week for the benefit of section three of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, was a marked success, about two hundred guests accepting her hospitality. The rooms on the lower floor were thrown together and beautifully decorated with potted plants and flowers, iris, choice varieties of roses, baskets of flowers and vines adding their beauty. Miss Williamson served fruitade in the hall, which was bright with red and green. The dining-room, which was presided over by Mrs. J. Wood Porter, assisted by Misses Pearl King, Laury, Poindexter, Churchill, Connell, Patton, La Fetra and Woodhead, was in pink and lavender, the table in peach blossoms and asparagus fern, the buffet in wisteria, violets and other flowers. The long hall was an Eastern scene in lilies and papyrus. Seventy-five feet of the porch was canvassed and here potted plants, training vines, cosy corners and chairs formed an attractive feature of the evening. The porch was lighted with colored lanterns. A programme was rendered by Mr. Butler, organist of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Vieira, Mr. Vieira and Mrs. Lee Bernard. At a late hour the audience dispersed.

For Mrs. Witham.

Mrs. I. J. Barrette of West Seventh street received her friends Friday evening, in honor of her friend, Mrs. M. A. Witham of Grand Rapids, Mich. The parlors were decorated with fairy palms and callas, in the hall acacias showed against a rich background of English ivy, and clusters of rare roses brightened the pretty dining-room. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Frank Irving, Miss C. H. Schuettman, Miss G. A. Hunt, Dr. Walters and G. A. Barker. Lovers of music had a rare treat in listening to Miss Capitola M. Buck, a graduate of New York University of Music, who will make her home in Los Angeles. Other selections were given by Mrs. C. S. Rogers and Miss Perry. Mr. Berry delighted his auditors with selections from Artemus Ward. A collation, consisting of ice cream, cake and choice confections, was served in the dining-room and drawing-room, when the guests gathered and turned the reception into an informal at home. Mrs. Witham has been Mrs. Barrette's guest since December, and with her hostess has been the recipient of much pleasant attention. Among the events in her honor was a luncheon given by Mrs. Edna Jay Reed, a picnic to the foothills when Mr. and Mrs. George E. Huntsberger was the entertainers, and two musicals and an afternoon tea given by Mrs. C. A. Rockwell. Mrs. Witham will return to Grand Rapids, Mich., Thursday. Valentine-Banks.

Miss Augusta Mayne Banks, niece of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Brown, was married at 12 o'clock yesterday in the First Methodist Episcopal Church in this city. Except the large number of guests present, and the necessary formality incident to a church wedding, the ceremony was as quiet and simple as if performed in a parlor. Several hundred guests were present, the marriage service being read by Rev. Victor A. Henry, the groom's brother-in-law. The prayer was offered by Rev. George A. Hough, who assisted. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white organdie, with hat and gloves to match. She was attended by her sisters, Miss Belle Banks, maid of honor, and Miss Harta Banks, who acted as bridesmaids. Both wore blue dresses and picture hats to match. William Rogers acted as best men. The ushers were the Misses Clara Mott, Alice Stribling, Vevia Robinson, Grace Scott, George Hortin Valentine, brother of the groom, who acted as groomsman; Harry Patty and Arthur Oates. There were four little ribbon girls, Laureta Kimball, Bonita Blakewell, Bernice Marcher and Irene Carter. The tiny ring bearer was a cousin of the bride, Kathleen Brown, and Adeltha Dean Reid Henry acted as flower girl. As the bridal party separated at the central entrance and advanced to the altar up the right and left aisles, Mr. Butler played the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengin." At the close of the service the First Methodist orchestra, of which Mr. Valentine is director, and which occupied the choir loft, rendered the triumphant Mendelssohn "March." A wedding breakfast was served to the immediate family at the Nadeau Café at 1:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Valentine will be at home to their friends after the middle of April at their new home on East Seventeenth street.

Mr. Valentine is well and favorably known in local circles as a director and violinist. He is the son of Mrs. Emily J. Valentine, president of the Los Angeles Conservatory of music, and a nephew of William R. Chapman, a noted director in New Lork and the East. Mrs. Velentine is a gold-medal pupil of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, and has many friends in the city.

Easter Party.

Little Mary Brodbeck of Boyle Heights is entertaining her cousin, Jean Perry of Greensburg, Ind., and received her friends in honor of her small guest from 2 till 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. Brodbeck of North Soto street. The time was occupied in an egg hunt, tracing the spider's webb, and other games. Luncheon was served in the dining-room, the decorations being in white and yellow and green. Daffodils and butterflies were evidences of an early spring, throughout the rooms, and were most gracefully arranged. A motherly hen, brooding a nest of soft, down chicks was the central decoration of the table, each little guest taking one home to bring up by hand. Mrs. Brodbeck was assisted by Mrs. H. P. Miller, Mrs. G. P. Fowler, the Misses Winnie Way, Irene Stewart, Eva Smith and Marie Walters. There were between fifty and sixty present.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Coburn Turner and Miss Burnett have returned from a four months' trip to New York and other points, and are at home at No. 1001 West Washington street. Miss Clara Nelson of Fort Scott, Kan., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Turner.

Miss Miriam Barnes of South Grand avenue is entertaining Miss Blanche Witherell of Pasadena over Sunday. Mrs. Charles W. OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY.

Pasadena.

MISS ELGIVA GORDON KEGLER and Floyd Rigg James were married Wednesday evening at the Kegler home on Lincoln avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William MacCormick at 8 o'clock, the bridal party standing beneath a floral bower of feathery acacia and pure white roses. As the strains of Lohengrin's bridal chorus, played by the bride's sister, died away, the marriage service was impressively read. The little sister of the bride, Miss Etta Kegler, acted as ring bearer, carrying the circlet of gold hidden among the petals of a large La Marque rose. The bride wore white moire silk over taffeta with filmy lace and white satin ribbons, and carried white carnations and maidenhair ferns. Miss Amy McKinstry acted as maid of honor. The groom's best man was Albert Finch. After the friends and relatives had offered congratulations, a dainty wedding supper was served. The house was very exquisitely decorated, and Mr. and Mrs. James were the recipients of many beautiful presents. Late in the evening they left for the wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at No. 375 Lincoln avenue.

L. D. Benton of Summit avenue was given a surprise party Monday evening at the home of his son, G. G. Benton, No. 272 Park street, the affair being arranged by Mrs. Alice B. Cleghorn. It was Mr. Benton's seventieth birthday, and also the seventeenth anniversary of the marriage of his daughter, Mrs. Mattie E. Abbey. Only the members of the immediate family were present, and the evening was devoted to singing, informal intercourse and to the enjoyment of refreshments. The occasion was the largest reunion of the family in twenty-five years, some of the members meeting for the first time in that period. Next Christmas Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Benton expect to celebrate their golden wedding with a reunion of their eleven children and twenty-five grandchildren, forty-eight people in all, counting wives and husbands. There has not yet been a death in the family. Those attending the party Monday evening were: Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Benton, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Master Arba Stewart, Mrs. A. B. Cleghorn, Miss Vera Cleghorn, Arthur Cleghorn, Bennie Cleghorn, Mr. and Mrs. A. Abbey, Miss Lilian Abbey, Miss Hattie Abbey, Leroy Abbey, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Benton, Misses Vera and Grace Benton, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Benton, Master Lawrence L. Benton, Miss Evelyn B. Benton, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Benton, Masters Gerald, Guy and Cecil Benton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bremner. Many came from neighboring towns.

The Throop Guitar and Mandolin Club delighted an audience that filled the operahouse Tuesday evening, the occasion being for the benefit of the hospital. About $200 was cleared. This year the organization has a soloist from the East, and Edward Spalding Warren is director. Frank Heydenrich rendered several baritone solos in a fine manner. Ralph Bandini told the "Fable of the Undecided Brunette," which made a big hit. George Howell's banjo solo was also well received. H. H. Klamroth presented the prizes to the winners of the ticket-selling contest. The first prize, a $15 mandolin, went to Irving Benson, who sold $155.50 worth of tickets; Wilbur H. Dean, second, mandolin, for selling $85 worth of tickets; George Syer, third, mandolin, for selling $67.50 worth of tickets. The club is now on its trip through the southern part of the State, and will play here again at Hotel Green, March 28.

Miss Marion Jones and Paul Barnes were married at noon Wednesday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Clark Jones of North Euclid avenue. Rev. Stephen G. Emerson, pastor of the Lake - avenue Congregational Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The bride wore filmy organdie, with white satin ribbon, and carried Bride roses. A wedding luncheon followed the marriage, in the prettily-decorated rooms, after which Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left for their new home in Oakland. The wedding guests were: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Halsted, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Beuers, Rev. and Mrs. Emerson, Mrs. D. E. Bettle, Mrs. M. R. Briggs, Miss Florence Barnes, Miss Stella Reed, Miss Rigg, Miss Laura Binkley, Mr. Binkley, Dr. T. J. Rigg, Richard Halsted, Herbert Brown, S. Thompson.

Thursday evening there was a recital at the Eagle Rock Church, for the benefit of the church. The programme included a cornet solo, by Mr. Flint; reading, "How the Ranchers Found Their Wives," by Mrs. Alpha Knight; song by Miss Hamilton, "The Story of Topsy," and "A Sisterly Scheme," by Mrs. Knight; "Nightingale Song," by Miss Hamilton; monologue, by Mrs. Knight; "The Rhyme of the Duchess May," by Mrs. Knight; cornet solo, Mr. Smith. A neat sum of money was cleared for the church.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Alice R. Green of No. 716 Hull street entertained a number of lady friends with cards and luncheon. The house was prettily decorated with red roses, and the guests were: Mrs. H. M. Stevens, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. O. C. White and Mrs. J. R. McKee.

LOW-GRADE ORE.

Company of is one of the oldest quartz mines of the sought to main- a great paying mine. it has been decided to increase its reduction plant to correspond with its ore-producing capacity. This is the modern method of making low-grade ore yield large profits, and which has been so successfully demonstrated at the Homestake mine in South Dakota, and at the Treadwell mines in Alaska. A report from Grass Valley about the Empire mines states: "The company's property contains a quarry of low-grade ore, averaging less than $3 per ton. But the mass is so big and facilities for mining are so good that the only requisite to make it pay to work was a large enough plant to reduce the volume of rock that may be extracted and delivered from the vein. A vein which would be worthless to a poor man or a weak company was thus converted into a big-paying proposition, for the cost of mining, milling office and other expenses does not reach $2 per ton, and a good margin of profit comes out of the daily reduction of 1500 or 2000 tons of less than $3 rock."

MINING NOTES.

The Oshkosh Gold Mining Company, composed of Wisconsin capitalists, has purchased a group of five claims in Kern county, Cal., situated about forty miles north of Mojave and thirty miles west of Randsburg. The company will build a temporary tramway and develop the property.

Mineral Wealth of Kingman, Ariz., says the Tennessee mine and mill will start up with a full force about the first of April.

A report from Nogales, Ariz., states that the Copete mine and smelter, near Carbo, State of Sonora, have been temporarily closed.

The Morenci (Ariz.) Standard says the Detroit Copper Mining Company expects soon to increase the capacity of its concentrating plant in Morenci from 500 tons to about 800 tons.

A report from Ward, Colo., states that in the 400-foot level east in the Lucky Star mine, a large body of very rich free gold and tellurium ore has been encountered.

The Everett (Wash.) smelter treated 85,000 tons of ore during 1901. It has been enlarged to a capacity of 400 tons per day. It operates the only arsenical plant on the northwestern continent, and produced 35,000 ounces of gold, 2,000,000 ounces of silver and 9000 tons of lead during 1901.

PALM SUNDAY AND PASSION WEEK.

BLESSING AND DISTRIBUTION OF THE PALMS.

Programme for the Days Before Easter in the Catholic and Episcopal Churches of the City—General Observation by the Churches.

The most solemn season of the Lenten period opens today, Palm Sunday. The services today will be the introduction to a week of special activity, and each day of the ensuing week will have its own particular service.

CATHEDRAL.

At St. Vibiana's Cathedral this morning at the last mass Rt. Rev. Bishop Montgomery will bless the palms, and they will be distributed at this service, which begins at 9:30.

The bishop will give a sermon on the Holy Eucharist on Holy Thursday; and on Good Friday the sermon will be by Rev. Father O'Connell of San Francisco.

ST. MARY'S.

At St. Mary's Church, Palm Sunday will be observed by the blessing and distribution of the palms before the high mass this morning; and there will be vespers and benediction this evening. On Wednesday there will be the rosary, a sermon by Rev. J. Barron and benediction. The services at this church on Holy Thursday will commence at 8 o'clock, and after the high mass there will be a procession of the Blessed Sacrament to the repository. Adoration will be in progress all the day, and at 7:30 there will be the rosary and a sermon on the institution of the Holy Eucharist. On Good Friday the ceremony of uncovering and veneration of the cross will take place, and after the procession to and from the repository, the mass of the pre-sanctified will be celebrated. The stations of the cross and a sermon on the Passion will occupy the evening. On Holy Saturday the services will consist of blessing of the fire; incense, the paschal candle and font, after which high mass will be celebrated. The first mass Easter Sunday will be at 7 o'clock.

SACRED HEART.

At 9:30 this morning occurs the blessing and distribution of the palms at the Church of the Sacred Heart, East Los Angeles, followed by a celebration of high mass. There will be rosary, sermon and benediction on Wednesday evening. On Holy Thursday, after the high mass at 9 o'clock, there will be a procession, and in the evening there will be a sermon on the Blessed Eucharist. The mass of the pre-sanctified will be at 9 o'clock on Good Friday, with a sermon on the Passion at the evening service. On Holy Saturday, at 8 a.m., will take place the ceremony of blessing the new fire, paschal candle and baptismal font.

PLAZA CHURCH.

At the Church of Our Lady of the Angels this morning at 10 o'clock will occur the blessing and distribution of the palms, followed by a solemn high mass. On Holy Thursday the mass will be at 9 o'clock. The washing of the feet will take place at 3 p.m. on Holy Thursday, and at the evening services the sermon will be by Very Rev. P. Harnett. The mass of the pre-sanctified will commence at 9 o'clock on Good Friday, and Rev. H. O'Reilly will preach at the evening service. The blessing of the fire, candle and font will take place at 8 o'clock on Holy Saturday.

ST. VINCENT'S.

At St. Vincent's this morning at 10 o'clock will occur the blessing of the palms and their distribution, and will be followed by a solemn high mass, with Rev. J. Gorrell, C.M., as celebrant; Rev. H. J. O'Connor, C.M., as deacon, and D. McHugh as subdeacon. The singing of the Passion will be as follows: "Christus," Rev. E. A. Antill, C.M.; "Chronista," Rev. J. J. Cody, C.M.; "Turba," Rev. P. H. McDonnell, C.M.

On Wednesday at St. Vincent's, at 3 p.m., will be the Tenebrae. On Thursday there will be a solemn high mass at 9 o'clock. Rev. E. A. Antill, C.M., will be the celebrant; Rev. J. S. Glass, C.M., D.D., deacon; Rev. D. J. Healy, C.M., subdeacon. At the mass of the pre-sanctified on Good Friday, Rev. J. J. Cody, C.M., will be the celebrant; Rev. J. E. Lilly, C.M., deacon, and F. Pagels, C.M., subdeacon. There will be the rosary, sermon and singing of the "Misere" at 7:30 on Thursday and Friday. On Holy Saturday services will begin at 8. Rev. F. X. McCabe will be the celebrant; Rev. P. H. McDonnel, C.M., deacon; and Rev. J. E. Green, subdeacon.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Gage has returned from a brief vacation in Florida, and shortly will take up his duties as president of the United States Trust Company.

DR. M'LAUGHLIN.

Prof. Loeb Is Outdone

His Discovery That "Electricity Is the Basis of Life" Is Not New. Dr. McLaughlin Claims It. In Books Written Three Years Ago He Offers Proof of the Influence of Electricity Upon Human Vitality. Old Age Can Be Defied. By Dr. McLaughlin's Method Electricity May Be Used to Renew Youth and Protect the Body From Disease. Note the Comparison Between Prof. Loeb's New Theories and Dr. McLaughlin's Old Ones.

Prof. Loeb of the University of Chicago recently announced that he had discovered that electricity was the basis of life.

He said that the motion of the heart was due, not to the heat, but to the electricity in the body.

"A part of the chemical energy of foodstuffs is transformed into electrical energy, which, in turn, gives energy to the muscles and organs of the body."

The announcement that electricity and not heat is the life of the climax of Prof. Loeb's experiments, which have extended over ten years.

These results, he says, are going to upset most of the teachings of the textbooks of physiology—that is, they are going to expose the fallacy of medicine as it is administered by the regular physician of today.

Effect of Dr. McLaughlin's Treatment Upon Men.

This is all in line with Dr. McLaughlin's teachings, which have been in print for the past ten years. Dr. McLaughlin has been a student of this subject for twenty years, and has made his observations from cases under personal treatment.

In his book, written three years ago (in his introductory remarks,) he says: "I anticipate still greater results from my efforts to demonstrate the truth of my lifelong claim that electricity is the basis of all animal vitality, and without it we could not live."

In another part of his book Dr. McLaughlin gives a more comprehensive solution of the heat problem than that advanced by Prof. Loeb. Dr. McLaughlin says:

"The food that we eat is treated as fuel by the stomach, just as is the coal in a furnace. The chemical action which is produced upon the food by the acids and juices of the stomach burns the food and causes a carbonic heat. This heat is electricity, and it is forced into the nerves and vital organs and is their life."

Further, Dr. McLaughlin says: "The electrical heat generated by the consumption of our food should keep healthy every vital organ of the body. Debility of the vital organs arises when the waste is greater than the repair—when the stomach is not able to generate sufficient electrical heat to supply the demands of nature.

"This excessive waste is due to overtaxation of the vital forces by hard work mentally, grief or worry, extra physical exertion, severe fevers, such as typhoid or malaria, which drain away the vitality and leave the system debilitated."

Now here is where Dr. McLaughlin passes beyond the period covered by Prof. Loeb and shows how this vital electricity, which is the basis of life, may be replaced in the body when lost by the causes producing debility.

He says: "When the stomach is not able to generate sufficient of this energy to supply the demands of the vital organs, the natural result is a lowering of nerve, organic and muscular power—a general debility. Then an artificial agent must be used to assist the stomach. That agent is the Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt."

The human body charged with this electrical force is proof against the debility usually foreshadowing the decay of old age. There can be no decay where there is sufficient force to keep the heart and vital organs active, and under Dr. McLaughlin's treatment men of 75 and 85 years have found a new lease of life.

An old man who had been wearing a Dr. McLaughlin belt every night for two months wrote: "While my age is 70 years, I have become as youthful in health as a man of 35, and am able to do as much work. I am really an old man made young."

Men and women who had been rheumatic cripples for years, and whose cases had defied the best doctors, have secured perfect health from Dr. McLaughlin's Belt.

Mr. Al Bassatt, Rich Gulch, Cal., writes, January 8, 1902: "My back is now as well as it ever was. I have had no pain for the past six weeks. Your Belt is a wonder."

Dr. McLaughlin has not only proven that electricity is the substance of life and organic vitality, but has gone so far as to perfect the best-known means of replenishing that force in the body when it is lost. His electric belt is the natural result of scientific study, coupled with experience and mechanical skill.

The current supplied by this appliance enters the body in a glowing stream of vitalizing heat, so gentle that the nerves and vital organs absorb it as freely as a hungry babe drinks milk. This force is added to the natural power generated by the stomach; it saturates every vital part and soon transforms the debilitated body into a natural storage battery, which generates its own health and closes the doors forever to disease and debility.

Dr. McLaughlin's book is published for free distribution to those interested in the development of vigorous health in men and women. It is profusely illustrated and describes his method of treatment and appliances. Sent sealed free on request. Send for it today, inclosing this aid.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt has a cure in every town. Upon request, the names of your own neighbors who have been cured by it will be sent you.

Not Promises, but Actual Cures--All Men's Diseases.

We are not newcomers. Our methods have been tested for 20 years. We cure speedily, thoroughly, positively.

We make no bold promises, but we say with assurance that unless your disease is beyond the extreme verge of hope we can surely and positively cure you. To the average physician diseases of men are classed into certain groups, and to every patient certain general remedies are prescribed, which may have merit, but which are not calculated to fit the exact condition of each individual. Dr. Meyers & Co compound their medicines and modify their curative agencies so that the treatment strikes at the very heart of the trouble—you will be conscious almost from the very first of a returning health, buoyancy, vigor, strength. This staff of physicians comprise the most able, experienced specialists on the Coast. They are men who put the whole strength of their ability into every case, whether it be a mere stubborn contracted disorder or such dangerous ailments as weakness, varicocele, stricture or blood poison. They have cured 20,000 patients. They will cure you.

Dr. Meyers & Co. never use poisonous, mineral or other dangerous drugs. Our famous remedies are compounded from the purest and freshest vegetable extracts, by expert chemists, and given to our patients FREE OF CHARGE.

Terms Reasonable in all cases. If it is not convenient for patients to deposit the full amount of our fee in a Los Angeles bank, to be paid us when they are well, they may pay in monthly installments.

If you cannot call, write fully in confidence, and we will send you free in a plain sealed envelope full particulars of our method of home treatment now being used in every part of the Coast; also whatever special advice we may deem necessary, and state cost of cure.

RUPTURE

We openly make the statement that we have the only permanent GUARANTEE cure for RUPTURE in Los Angeles. No doubt SOME cases have been cured by other methods, but what guarantee have you that you will be? Others say, "You must pay in advance, as we cannot guarantee a cure." We say—

"Pay when You are Satisfied of a Cure."

Which is the business-like plan?

We refer you to any one of the patients now under treatment to prove that the treatment is painless and does not interfere with business in the least. We invite any one who has been unsuccessfully treated by any method to call and investigate. If you take treatment it costs you nothing until you are cured; hence you take no chances. We can cure any case of Rupture that can be held by a truss during treatment. After treatment no truss is needed. If a specialist knows he can cure a case he ought to be willing to give a guarantee.

Regularly registered physicians in charge. Ladies may consult them with confidence.

Remember, no consultation free, no truss for sale, no pain or loss of time dune during treatment.

Nature's Remedy for Weak Men.

No man can afford to be indifferent to a demonstrated fact calculated for his own good. We make the unreserved claim that our Improved Vacuum Developer will perform just what we advertise it to do, and any man will appreciate what it is who has long seen the sweets of life just beyond his reach.

It does the work. It cures when everything else fails. This is the reason why it is the best treatment offered to suffering men. Common sense will tell you that the Vacuum applied to the surface, draws the blood into circulation through the natural channels which before were dormant, thus setting up a wonderful vital action at once. Only one application of the instrument is sufficient to demonstrate its wonderful action and positive results. It produces the same beneficial results upon the aged or middle aged as upon the young man.

The patient can apply the treatment himself without the service of a physician and can be followed without assistance of any kind. Its results are lasting, improvement commences from the first day of its use.

No Medicine to Destroy Your Stomach.

Write for our illustrated treatise, showing the parts of the male system involved, sent sealed free, explaining fully our improved method, or call upon us at our offices, where we shall be pleased to explain and further advise you, free of any charge.

An Electric Belt Free

Send Your Application At Once To The Physician's Institute.

They Will Send You Absolutely Free One of Their 100 Guage Supreme Electric Belts, the Belt Which Has Made so Many Wonderful Cures—You Needn't Send Even a Postage Stamp. Just Your Name and Address.

Seven years ago the State of Illinois granted to the Physicians' Institute of Chicago a charter.

There was need of something above the ordinary method of treatment for chronic diseases, something more than any one specialist or any number of specialists acting independently could do, so the State itself, under the powers granted it by its general laws, gave the power to the Physicians' Institute to furnish to the sick such help as would make them well and strong.

Ever since its establishment this Institute has endeavored in every possible way to carry out the original purposes of its establishment under the beneficent laws of the State.

Three years ago, the Physicians' Institute, realizing the value of electricity in the treatment of certain phases of disease, created under the superintendence of its staff of specialists an electric belt, and that belt has been proved to be of great value as a curative agent. It has from time to time been improved until it reached that stage of perfection which warranted its present name of "Supreme."

This belt is the most effective of all agents in the cure of rheumatism, lumbago, lame back, nervous exhaustion, weakened or lost vital functions, varicocele, kidney disorders and many other complaints.

This "Supreme Electric Belt" is made in one grade only—100 gauge—there is no better electric belt made and no better belt can be made. Whenever in the opinion of our staff of specialists the wonderful curative and revitalizing forces of electricity will cure you we send you, free of all cost, one of these Supreme Electric Belts. It is not sent on trial, it is yours to keep forever without the payment of a cent. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write today for this free "Supreme Electric Belt" to the Physicians' Institute, at [illegible] Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.

GOD'S COUNTRY.

WE AMERICANS are a proud, happy and contented people—proud of the vast realm which we designate as Our Country; happy in the institutions under which we enjoy all the blessings of liberty, and contented with our growing prosperity and power, and it is not unfrequently that we hear the exclamation from some citizen who has been reviewing the elements of our national greatness, "Oh, this is God's country!" which expresses to the utmost degree his satisfaction with his native land.

And he is not so far out of the way, for what people ever had a grander heritage than ours, lying between the world's two greatest oceans, filled with mines of golden ore, with vast beds of coal, and underneath us seas of oil, enough to light the world; with countless forests dotting the land; with the soil yielding abundant harvests, and every source of wealth at our command?

"God's country!" Yes, it is the land which He has set apart and consecrated to freedom, and to Christianity; the land which is to illustrate to the world all that is noblest and highest in human government, in the institutions based upon Christianity and a recognition of the God-given rights of man. It is a familiar saying of De Tocqueville that "despotism may govern without faith, but liberty cannot." And it is this vital faith that has lent glory to our past and that makes strong the promise of our future.

As Dr. Barrows recently said: "The American nation owes its origin to the spiritual forces of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. From the Bible came many of the strongest impulses which colonized the American shores. From the Bible came the simpler forms of self-government, in town and church, that have gone with our civilization in its westward march. Hence came the observance of the Lord's Day, the bulwark of our freedom, and hence the teaching of biblical truth to the young, which Webster declared 'has done more to preserve our liberties than grave statesmen and armed soldiers.' Hence came our public schools and the long line of Christian colleges that stretch from the elms of Harvard and Dartmouth to the shores of the Brazos and Sabine, and the Pacific Coast. Hence came also the separation of church and state, and that soul liberty which Rodger Williams learned from Him who said, 'My kingdom is not of this world.' From the Bible came, as Edward Everett declared, 'the better elements of our national institutions.' It was an echo from the scriptures which Jefferson sounded in the great Declaration. From the Bible came the moral forces that carried through our first revolution, and which has withstood the wastings of the corruption in succeeding years. From the same source have sprung the moral reformations that have preserved our nationality and our freedom. The American republic is of heavenly birth. It is no mud-giant, no shade of Thomas Carlyle! It does not represent to the world 'merely dollars and cotton.' Its fountain head, at least, is far up among the shining hills of God."

Glorious words are these to be spoken of any land, and they are words which, so long as we make them true, will find America taking the lead among the nations and growing greater in her strength and power. If we may rightfully be designated as "God's country," the evils that have crept into our political and social life will gradually be eliminated. The brotherhood of the race will receive fuller recognition; we shall be a new light to the Orient, where our flag has already gone, and carry with us there "a positive moral force" that shall work for the regeneration of the race. The whole world will be better for the existence of "God's country" with institutions based upon Bible truths, with the spirit of Bible teaching as the corner-stone of our liberties. As has been recently asserted, "From the great hour of Dewey's victory in Manila Harbor, the shadow of the great Christian republic has been thrown, vast, beneficent and far, over the tropic isles and populous coasts of Asia." And with its shadow resting upon them, the burning suns of superstition shall no longer blight and destroy them, nor the tyranny of oppression crush them. The influence of Christian America shall largely help to redeem the world.

FOREST GUARDIANS OF OUR STATE.

THIS Sunday next before Easter is called Palm Sunday, in memory of the palm branches that were strewn in Christ's way on his journey to Jerusalem five days before the crucifixion. It is a day largely commemorated by the Christian church in many lands. If one would have the impression of the time in its most buoyant phase, he should loiter along the ways of this city, where the palms send their triumphal forces toward the eternal sapphire in forms of beautiful symmetry. Whoever has listened to the fluttering of myriad wings of birds of passage in their annual migration, when they approach the earth, knows the palm's dream of flight when the winds are astir among its banners, while by a mighty series of steps it lifts itself above everyday reality, bearing its crown heavenward. There are memories of other lands in all festivals of the year, but it is safe to say that few tourists come to these shores without the wish to place one of those triumphal symbols on the altar of some church at home, or on a low mound, perhaps, lying somewhere under the North Star. For the words of Revelation seem repeated with the bell's soft chime, which tells of "all nations and kindreds and peoples before the throne . . . clothed in white raiment, and palms in their hands."

The lover of forest life learns that the palm is only one of the perennial charms of the sylvan year. The Pinus Lambertiana, said to be the most valuable pine of the State; the Pacific silver spruce, erect among the mountain snows, and many a tree of biblical type afford beautiful examples of shade and color, lightness and matchless grace. Here along the hillsides may be seen the dark leaves of the olive, with their silvery linings, through which the night winds whisper of the ancient olive shadows of Gethsemane.

Among the friends of the desert is the eucalyptus, with its far-reaching roots. Its young leaves have the pale luminosity of the sands from which they have sprung, but the dark shadows of the years are on the older growth. Mingling among the leaves, with the changing influence of the seasons, are dashes of color like the hues of tropical birds or pinions of butterflies, lost among the dim obscurities. The leaf music has something plaintive in its moods, as though sometimes brooding over its long exile from its native Australian home. The eucalyptus is a fine plea for the hospitality which sometimes entertains angels unawares. No indigenous tree has shown so great a capacity for tracing out and assimilating the provisional economy of nature, deep in the sands of the desert, stored for the needs of vegetable life.

Science asserts that every portion of the life of a tree, every dimly-understood nerve tissue and atom, is law governed, the product of many yesterdays. Heat, light, electricity, vital energy, contribute to its force, but its individuality is that of service. Its endless varieties of transformation by which it buffets wind and storm, giving shadow, balm and leaf music, may be the chronicle of poet and minstrel, but the more consecrated exaltation is that of the burden-bearer. All that corresponds to the life of man, striving, failure, victory, is known to every member of the rank and file of the forest, and the sheens and shadows, the mists and splendors may be only the lovely curtains of invisible nature.

A grateful age is beginning to form a new estimate of woodland life. The forestry reports of this State contain more absorbing pages than two-thirds of the books of romance. They prove the need of home missionaries to guard the forests, to teach the sheepherders the calamity that follows a forest fire up among the Sierras of "No Man's Land," and also to show the need of forest trails and the laws that should guard bird life from the depredations of milliners and hunters. The birds have so large a share in protecting the trees from insect life that they are the guardians of our water supply, and the strong arm of the law should come to their defense.

The mountains of California form a great watershed, on which nearly the entire river system of the State is dependent for its source of supply. The influence of trees on rainfall is proven to be of the geatest practical benefit. Every tree in the forest has its significance in the related life of man to nature. Special groups of trees in this State, such as the Torrey pine on the bluffs toward San Diego, or the spreading-cone pines of Monterey, open long historical vistas. Some of them are mentioned in the early records of the Franciscan padres. So that the oldest monarchs of the forest, as the great Sequoias, give a classic impetus to a knowledge of woodland life on the Pacific Slope. While new leaves are scattered broadcast from the wide book of nature for the student of the beautiful, the marvelous page every lover of humanity to aid the servitors sons to carry on their destined work.

OUT OF DOORS.

O how language fails as I
Stand beneath this sunlit sky,
See the glory of the day,
See the flashing waters play,
And the tall, leaf-bannered trees,
Waving lightly in the breeze;
Watch the wondrous colors glow,
Where the flowers and grasses grow.

Underneath the sunlit wall,
Of the sky-clasped mountains tall,
Vast our valleys stretch away,
To where ocean waters play;
Bird song floats upon the air,
Fragrance lingers everywhere,
Lilies smile and roses gleam,
Over beds where pansies dream.

See the palm tree lift its head,
Catching gold by sunbeams shed;
And the eucalypti tall,
Stand as watchers over all.
Never anything more fair
Than th' glorious peppers are,
Their great branches wide outspread,
Like a tent above our head.

Jeweled with their berries they Seem like smiling nymphs of day,
Swaying where the sunlight falls,
And the happy robin calls,
Perched amid their branches high,
Like a wanderer from the sky;
As a prisoned sunbeam fair,
Stands the golden poppy there.

Oh, how bright the meadows! They
Steeped in golden sunbeams lay;
Gold that we may have for naught,
Richer than by miser sought;
Filling all the heart with joy,
With pleasure that hath no alloy;
Gold more golden than the store
Hid in mines of richest ore.

Down along the breeze-kissed way
Tides of richest fragrance stray,
Tides of song are flowing, too,
Old and yet forever new;
Heart of music's full desire
Pulseth here, reacheth higher;
To the stars and to the sun,
Rise these echoes one by one.

God must love this world of ours,
With its sunlight and its flowers,
And from it He's not afar;
Nearer He than sun or star;
Nearer than the fleeing breeze,
Sweeping through the leaf-crowned
In the sunlight, in the air,
God is present everywhere.

In my heart I feel Him near,
With the whisper, "I am here,
In great nature's realm find rest,
For I bear it on my breast."
Each grain of sand, each flower,
Tell of His love and power,
All things here from sky to sod,
Bear the autograph of God.

Japan in the Pacific. By Frank G. Carpenter.

JAPANESE REACHING OUT.

THE YANKEES OF THE ORIENT TRYING TO MONOPOLIZE ASIATIC TRADE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

THE Japanese are about to establish a bureau of foreign commerce. Parliament has already discussed the question and the plan has been outlined. There will be a central department at Tokyo and branch offices in London, Paris, Berlin, New York, Boston, Chicago and other places. The business of the bureau will be to look up openings for Japanese trade and inform Japanese merchants. It will be somewhat like our bureau of commerce of the State Department, which is said to be the best of its kind in the world.

The Japanese government is straining to capture the trade of the Pacific. It hopes to make Japan the workshop of the Orient, and has commercial and industrial training schools under way for that purpose. It is also subsidizing its steamship lines, giving industrial exhibitions and encouraging foreign trade in other ways.

Japan's Commercial Museum.

The government is instituting commercial museums in the ports of the Far East. I found one in Singapore under the management of the Japanese Consul there. The plan is much like the Philadelphia Museum, save that its goods are all Japanese. There are clocks, shovels, hats, fans and brushes, all made in Japan. There are samples of Japanese rugs, stationery, umbrellas, hats and satchels, as well as silk, linen and cotton goods. There are carts and jinrikishas, the latter forming one of the chief exports to the different centers of the Far East. Japanese jinrikishas are used in Peking, Shanghai, Hongkong, Saigon and Singapore. There has been an attempt to introduce them into the Philippines, but so far our government has frowned on using man as a horse and the attempt has not been successful. Singapore is an excellent place for such a museum. It is the half-way station on the trip around the world, and it is where the water highways to different parts of the Orient cross. There are ships from India, Siam, the Philippines, Australia, China and Europe always at anchor in its harbor. Fifty-five thousand vessels come in every year, and its annual trade amounts to $285,-000,000. The Japanese catch the traders as they go back and forth, working not only the Singapore trade, but the countries which import through Singapore. To Singapore alone the Japanese exports already amount to about [illegible] gold.

Carriers of the Pacific.

The Japanese hope to be the carriers of the Pacific. They are among the best sailors of the world. They take to the water like ducks. Their country consists of about [illegible] mountain islands, running through the Pacific in the form of a crescent as long as from New York City to Salt Lake. The most of the islands are small and the bulk of the population lives near the sea. The result is that every man of them can handle a boat, and in past generations they have been noted for their junks and sailing vessels. They have always done a great freight business with China and Korea. Today they are levying tribute on all the world in freight and express charges. They have as good ships as you will find anywhere, and they are building some of 6000 tons each in their own yards. These shipyards are at Nagasaki and are aided by subsidy from the government. The Japanese have also been buying modern steamers of England and the United States. They are continually bringing in new ships from the shipyards of the Clyde.

They have today 1100 modern steamers in their merchant marine and about 2000 sailing vessels of European build. They have 20,000 native vessels and innumerable boats. You can now go around the world in a Japanese steamer. There is a line of twelve great ships from Yokohama to London by the Suez Canal, and there are several good lines from the United States to Japan. The Toyo Kisen Kaisha has three steamers of 6000 tons which sail regularly from San Francisco to Yokohama by way of Honolulu, and thence on to Shanghai and Hongkong. The Nippon Yusen Kaisha has 6000-ton steamers from Seattle, and other Japanese steamers call at Portland and Tacoma. It is now proposed to establish a line to the west coast of South America, and as soon as the isthmian canal is opened there will be a regular Japanese service from Japan to the United States and Europe. Even now Japanese vessels come into our Gulf ports for cargoes of raw cotton and iron, and the day is not far distant when steamers from Yokohama may be seen all along our coast.

In the Philippines and Australia.

The Japanese are reaching out after our Philippine trade. They send ships regularly to Manila, and thence on to Australia via Thursday Island. In that line there are six steamers of 3000 tons each, comprising the best that call at the Philippines.

Japan has direct steamship connection with Siberia. The vessels start at Kobe and call at Nagasaki, Fusan and Gensan, Korea, on their way to Vladivostok. It was on one of these ships that I went to Siberia a short while ago. The captain was an Englishman and the engineer a Swede, but the rest of the officers were Japanese, and also the sailors. There are other lines which go from Japan to Manchuria, and almost daily vessels to Shanghai and the Yangtse Kiang. A regular line connects Yokohama and Kobe with Calcutta and Bombay, bringing cotton and jute from India, especially jute for making the Japanese rugs which are sold so cheaply in our American stores. Indeed, the Japanese flag is more common in the ports of the world than the American flag, and in the Far East it is safe to say that there are twenty Japanese vessels to America's one.

Japan in Korea.

The Russians and the Japanese are each grasping after Korea. The relations of the two nations are strained by the struggle, and it may eventually bring about a war between them. Were it not for Russia the Japanese would own the whole country. They made their war of 1894 in order that they might have the Korean trade, and today they are doing the most of the import and export business of the peninsula. We are shipping Korea some cotton goods, but the Japanese shipments of last year amounted to 2,000,000 yen, and they have the most of the trade in other lines.

Sixty-five per cent. of all the ships that call at the various ports are Japanese, and the Japanese are now building railroads which shall open up for them some of the best parts of the country. They have bought the railroad which some of our Denver men built from Chemulpho to Seoul, and they are now at work constructing a line from Seoul to Fusan. This railroad will be 300 miles long. Fusan has already a large Japanese colony, and it is but a short distance from the Japanese coast. Goods can be almost ferried across from one country to the other and by means of this railroad sent direct to the Japanese capital. Korea furnishes Japan a great deal of rice and fish, and the Koreans buy all sorts of Japanese goods.

The Japanese have put up telegraph lines connecting Fusan with all parts of the country, and from Fusan there is a cable to Japan. The big Tokyo banks have branch offices in Seoul and at some of the Korean ports, and there are Japanese postoffices at the principal cities. Japanese money is the currency of the country, and the Japanese have been granted concessions for mines, and other things.

The Japanese in China.

The Japanese have been crowded out of Manchuria by Russia, and the powers have not permitted them to take possession of any part of China. Nevertheless, they are pushing their trade throughout the Chinese empire and will have their share of China's commerce. There are Japanese steamers doing a regular carrying trade on some of the Chinese rivers. You can have your houseboat towed through the canals of Kiangsu by Japanese launches and can go up the Yangtse Kiang or the Peiho on steamers owned by Japanese.

The Japanese have concessions at many of the open ports. At Shanghai their consulate is in one of the finest buildings; and there is much Japanese money invested in the port. They have a concession for a cotton mill there, but have concluded that it is cheaper to make cotton cloth at Osaka and ship it to China. Indeed, this is so with all sorts of goods. The people hope to make Japan the workshop of the Orient. In an interview which I had with Marquis Ito he said that foreign capital should put up factories in Japan to supply the Chinese markets. He assured me that such capital would be safe, and that Japanese labor could be more easily handled than Chinese labor.

I do not doubt that this is correct. The Japanese are not so thoroughly organized into trades unions as the Chinese. Their labor is good and exceedingly cheap. Both women and men work in the factories, and among the most skillful of the hands are children. I went through some of the finest rug factories of this empire, and had myself photographed with one of the employés standing in front of me. This was a little girl of 10 years. She only reached to my waist, but she was weaving a rug for the American market when she went out to be photographed.

The Japanese government is thoroughly awake to the possibilities of foreign trade. It is encouraging manufactories, and is even now considering the building of steel works at Kure at an initial cost of more than 6,-000,000 yen. These works will make steel plates and other shipbuilding materials.

Japan in Its Colonies.

I don't know that one can rightly speak of Japan as having colonies. It has, however, two great islands at the opposite ends of the empire, which are undeveloped and which will add much to its wealth and its position in the Pacific. These are Yezo and Formosa. Yezo is about as big as Indiana and its population is about as great as that of St. Louis. It has an excellent climate, and its soil raises the finest of grass. The government colonization department is trying to develop the country.

Yezo has excellent coal. There are three large mines now in operation, and railroads connect these with the coast. There are no large towns except Hakodate, which has 75,000 people, of whom only about 100 are foreigners. The most of the inhabitants are Ainos, the hairy aborigines of Japan.

Formosa is smaller than Yezo, but of far more value from its wonderful natural resources. The island is 260 miles long and about seventy miles wide in its broadest part. It is full of minerals, but owing to its wild nature has not been carefully prospected. Coal mines are already worked and gold is found in many of the streams.

The island has a ridge of mountains running through it from one end to the other, some of the peaks being over two miles in height. Along the west slope of these mountains there are many rich, fertile valleys which lead to a large rolling plain settled by the Chinese. On these lands is raised some of the finest tea of the world. They produce more than 20,000,000 pounds of tea every year, and the most of this goes to the United States. Indeed, China and the United States are the chief customers for Formosan products. Japan itself takes but little. Our tea is sent across the strait to Amoy and shipped from there to San Francisco and New York. The most of the tea leaves are dried in the sun and the packing is done by tramping them down with the bare feet.

The Japanese in Formosa.

The Japanese have not yet attempted to do much with Formosa. They remitted taxes for one year after they took possession, but are now attempting to make it self-supporting. The population is largely Chinese, there being about three million on the island. The chief towns are Tamsui and Kelung in the north, and Tainan and Takow in the south. Taipeh is the capital.

The Japanese are now building railroads in the northern part of Formosa and one is to go from Kelung on south to Tainan-fu. This will pass through the most thickly populated portion of the island, including the richest of the sugar and rice regions. It is at Tamsui that our Consul lives. This place has a club, several banks and a number of merchants and exporters. One of the great products of Formosa is camphor made from the camphor tree. It is shipped to all parts of the world.

The Japanese have had considerable trouble with the Formosan savages, who live in villages scattered throughout the mountains. These people are much like our wild men of the Philippines. They live by hunting and fishing and a little agriculture. Some villages have small farms about them. A few acres are enough for 100 people, each family having its own plot. The men are head hunters not unlike those of Borneo, and it is said that a man cannot marry until he has brought in at least one head.

The Chinese are the game of the head hunter. He sneaks up on them while they are at work in the fields and spears them to death. After this he cuts off the head and goes home rejoicing. The tribes are continually warring with one another and the Japanese soldiers have to conquer them tribe by tribe. So far no great progress has been made in civilizing the people.

I am told that Formosa has rich minerals. Coal is found in different parts and there are evidences of petroleum. Not long ago some Chinese employed two Pennsylvanians to test certain oil fields. They sank a shaft, but their drills broke at 300 feet from the surface and so far the work has not been resumed.

Where Japan Gets Her Money.

The Japanese are by no means a poverty-stricken nation. They have many millionaires among them and they are gradually building up great financial institutions which will enable them to compete with us. They are good financiers and their banking system is modeled on ours. Marquis Ito, who organized it, came to Washington and spent some time studying our government finances and then went back and formulated the policy of the empire. Today Japan has a paper currency which is at par with its silver, and the country is nominally on a gold basis. It has one bank which acts as the agent of the government, having much the same place here as the Bank of England in Great Britain.

This is the Bank of Japan. It has a capital of 30,000,000 yen, divided into 150,000 shares, and its dividends range from 15 to 16 per cent. per annum. The shares are all registered and can be owned only through the consent of the Japanese Secretary of the Treasury. The bank has $500,000,000 of deposits and its loans amount to about $300,000,000. Its bank building in Tokyo cost more than 1,000,000 yen.

Another large bank is the Kokuritsu Ginko, which has a capital of about $24,000,000 in gold. It has deposits amounting to about $500,000,000 in gold and loans of more than half that amount. The Specie Bank has a capital of less than $3,000,000, but its deposits amount to $150,000,000, and its loans run high into the millions.

In the Tokyo Stock Exchange.

I have spent some time in the stock exchange watching the Japanese bulls and bears. The exchange is right in the heart of Tokyo. It is a three-story building, more like a great barn or warehouse than anything else. It has a cement floor and about the walls are great galleries. As you go in you have to take off your shoes, and there is a room at the right of the entrance where the brokers check their clogs and where they are given straw sandals in exchange. Every one in the house dresses in gowns, although some of the more swell brokers wear overcoats as well.

When I entered the exchange there were at least one hundred Japanese yelling and pushing each other as they crowded this way and that, betting on the various stocks. They were all bareheaded and their hair stuck out like the black bristles on a shoe brush. The sleeves of their gowns were loose and their arms showed bare to the shoulders as they swung them and shook their fists, shouting their bids. Their almond eyes were full of anxiety and their mouths of noise. I was interested in the signs which they used in bidding. Putting up one finger indicates an advance of 10 cents, two fingers, 20 cents, and a closed fist, 50 cents.

The president was an old Japanese in a black gown, embroidered with a white coat-of-arms. He stood on a rostrum in the rear of the chamber and directed the selling. The quotations were written in Japanese on black and white strips of wood. The white strips gave the face value of the stocks and the black strips indicated the selling prices.

The president tells me that the stock exchange has a capital of 1,250,000 yen, and that it is now paying dividends of 25 per cent. He says that seats are worth about $12,000 each, and that the daily sales approximate 50,000 shares. Most of the business is small. There is no such watering of stocks as in the United States, and the result is that some shares pay high dividends. The Tokyo tram cars, for instance, pay 35 per cent.; the Yokohama iron works, 25 per cent., and some other stocks equally well.

WHERE MARION CRAWFORD WRITES.

F. Marion Crawford finds his ideal home in a breeze-swept villa, perched high on the picturesque cliffs of Sant' Angello di Sorrento, overlooking the beautiful Bay of Naples and its romantic shores. There is, indeed, no finer site to be found anywhere about this far-famed bay than that occupied by the "Villa Crawford," with its cheerful landward outlook over scattered towns, olive-clad hills, and fragrant orange groves dotted with white-walled dwellings, to where Vesuvius rears his mighty cone and Naples queens it among her subject villages, far out across the shining bay to the enchanting island of Ischia, set like a lustrous jewel in the Tyrrhenian Sea. The house itself is an unpretentious building of stucco and rough stone. It is reached by following a country road, overhung by olive, lemon and orange trees, for about a mile from Sorrento, then turning through a gray-stone gateway, embowered in ivy, and going along a narrow driveway almost to the verge of the cliff, where the villa stands, some two hundred feet above the bay.—[Ladies' Home Journal.

A TALK WITH TESLA.

WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES HE SEES IN WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

By a Special Contributor.

"TEN THOUSAND messages at once can be sent by means of wireless telegraphy." The speaker was Nikola Tesla, the well-known electrician, and the place the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Tesla had just returned from the banquet to Prince Henry, given by the "Captain of Industry" at Sherry's the other day, and was in a communicative mood. This is a somewhat exceptional condition for him, as of late years he has become very secretive.

I asked Mr. Tesla what he had accomplished since I had interviewed him for a magazine article several years ago, and in reply he told me about the work at his laboratory.

"I succeeded in proving that wireless telegraphy was possible several years ago," continued this modern Franklin, "and have been for some time past quite busy in putting it on a strong commercial basis.

Wonders of Wireless Telegraphy.

"Wireless telegraphy is a wonderful thing. I am not speaking from a commercial point of view, but as to the scientific aspect of it. The principles involved are so beautiful, and reveal seemingly no end of possibilities. Just think of harnessing the apparently invisible forces around and about us, and making them do such wonderful things!

"The scientific investigator is very frequently ahead of the popular mind in recognizing the value of great discoveries. Hence the public was slow to perceive the possibilities of wireless telegraphy which I announced quite a while ago. While some of the fake wireless telegraph companies are to be bitterly condemned, they are doing a great work in educating the people regarding the beautiful scientific truths involved.

"One will be able to send 10,000 messages at the same time by means of wireless telegraphy."

"Can you send a message from California to the Philippines by this method, some 6000 miles," I asked.

'Very readily," replied Mr. Tesla. "And you can send it still farther. We are just on the threshold of a thousand and one remarkable uses of this means of communication."

"Do you think we can talk and see, too, in this way?" I asked.

The Electric Telescope.

"I can only answer you now that there is substantial ground for my saying that sooner or later, by means of electricity, we will be able to see at considerable distances, just as we now hear by telephone."

"You mean a sort of electric telephone?"

"Yes," replied the great inventor.

"What are we coming to?" I queried in amazement.

"We are just learning the alphabet of the possible uses of electricity," answered the astute scientist. "The development of my oscillator makes it possible to communicate with Mars, or play havoc with things terrestrial. We are only beginning the present century, and before its close you will see and learn of things that now surpass the dreams of the wildest imagination.

"My big plant for transmitting messages across the ocean is nearly ready, and it will not be long now before it will be in commercial use."

The wizard's workshop is a place as weird as it is wonderful, and Aladdin's lamp is not to be compared to the Tesla contrivances and oscillators for accomplishing things that surpass the dreams of ordinary mortals.

Big Lawsuits.

Mr. Tesla is exceedingly annoyed over the doings of Signor Marconi, and I learned from a friend that there are some big lawsuits on the tapis. The claim is made that the Italian scientist has infringed on over a score of the Tesla patents.

One thing is certain: Electricians everywhere recognize wonderful possibilities in wireless telegraphy, and cables and wires seem to have had their day.

Just think of the trend of events; aiming to duplicate the light of the firefly and manufacture artificial daylight. Then imagine forces in nature harnessed that are as much greater than those now employed as Niagara is greater than a noiseless rill. Think of light, heat and power transmitted without the dangerous wires; and the special "cablegrams" from Mars and Mercury in the newspapers!

It all seems like the ravings of a lunatic. But just bear in mind how steamships nowadays talk with one another on the trackless ocean even though out of sight. And that power is being transmitted by wire hundreds of miles. Mr. Tesla believes that ultimately New York City will be partly supplied from Niagara Falls.

Shades of skepticism! "All things are possible to him that believeth." FRANCIS LEON CHRISMAN.

QUAIL FROM EGYPT.

Something entirely new came over on the steamer Cestrian, which arrived in Boston last Wednesday morning. The something is a covey of quail from Egypt. They were captured soon after the arrival of the millions of migrating quail that seek Egypt and other Mediterranean countries when the winter weather in other climes drives them out. The Egyptians belong to the family of true quails, and true quails, unlike our Bob White, migrate when the season in one place becomes unsuited to their taste. These little Egyptians always select the time of a high wind for their long journeyings, as, like the quail of New England, they are short-winged birds and need the help of a strong breeze to push them along.—[Boston Evening Transcript.

REGRET AND MEMORY.

Two sisters dwelt together in one house;
One was Regret, and one was Memory—
Daughters of Grief and Joy.
And Memory,
The elder sister, was of gentle mold,
Calm as a tropic night of moon and stars,
When all the world seems waiting. And her
Were infinite deeps of yearning tenderness,
Dark as a stormy midnight, yet serene,
Full of strange lights, yet steadfast as the sun
At noonday. Courage, and high resolve, and
And strength to bear whatever may be borne,
Were in her mien; and in her kindly heart
Compassion for all things that suffer pain,
And most of all for those that wronged her
For she, the child alike of Grief and Joy—
Though more she wore the lineaments of Grief—
Saw with clear eyes the good and ill of life,
Weighed well its raptures and its agonies,
Its gains and losses, till her heart became,
Through sorrow's tutelage, the tomb of strife,
Her soul the sepulcher of passion slain.

But she, that other sister, named Regret,
Was like an autumn sunrise drenched with
And blurred by winds that shriek of coming
She knew nor peace nor rest nor harmony.
Wild was her mien; her eyes of wrathful
Blue, like the sky, and clouded oft with Blue, like the sky, but changeful as the sea—
Aye, as the sea without its deeps profound!
For, like the inconstant and complaining sea,
That beats and babbles on a million shores,
And breaks in surf and wastes itself in foam
She babbled of her wrongs from day to day,
And railed at Fate—yea, even at the stars—
The blameless stars, wherein her destiny
Had been, of eld, forewritten and foredoomed.

And so this hapless child of Grief and Joy,
Born to tempestuous woe and frantic strife,
Dashed her mad spirit on the shores of Fate,
Immutable, inscrutable, and harsh,
Wasted her heart in foam of futile tears,
Wore out her stress of frenzy, and thus died
Clasped to the faithful breast of Memory!

But she, the hapless one, was beautiful—
Yea, strangely beautiful and terrible—
Even in dying. And her hot face glowed
With the weird light that is not of the earth,
Nor yet of heaven, nor yet of any place,
And in her eyes the fierce fire of despair,
And yearning never to be satisfied,
Burned to the last.
And Memory bended
Over the dying; and her wan, sweet face
A moment caught the fierce, consuming flame,
And o'er her heart a tumult of despair
Surged and receded, leaving in its wake,
In her pure soul, a great and changeless

These two had dwelt together in one house
All their lives long, and they were one
But gentle Memory was, to wild Regret,
Mother at once and sister; doubly strong
The tie of love that held the tameless one.
But for this tie she would have slain herself
When the first agony of thwarted love
Raged in a wrathful tempest through her
Wrecked it, and set the ruins all aflame.

Oft, when her moods were stormiest, Memory
Would steal into her presence unawares;
Twine her in loving arms; press her hot
With hands of healing; smooth her tangled
Kiss back the rising tide of angry tears;
Pour words of balm into her troubled soul,
Sweeter than kisses on the lips of Love;
Pillow her throbbing head upon a breast
White as an Alpine snowdrift in the sun;
Call her "sweet sister," and all-loving names
Until the lawless pulses were attuned
To harmony, and the fever in her veins
Was soothed to coolness, and the storm-tossed
Slept in the sheltering arms of Memory.

So Memory held her with a cord of love
Soft as silk-floss, stronger than ropes of
And would have saved her from her own
But that it was forewritten and foredoomed
That she, the fitful, foolish, passionate one,
Should slay herself. The seeds of violence
And death were planted in her from the
She but fulfilled the law of her own life;
And who shall dare to say it is not well?

. . . .

Sweet Memory still within the lonely house
Holds her abode, and keeps it from decay;
Places fresh flowers in the deserted rooms,
Where every echo breathes of dead Regret.
With placid brow she moves from place to
Through the lone house; keeps all its
In the still night, and sleeps not at her
But—though with placid face she fronts the
At one dim casement, ofttimes when the
Has fallen, and fills the place with tender
Sits gentle Memory, with low-bended head,
Her fathomless eyes all wet with woeful
For her, the wild, sweet sister named Regret,
Long dead, who never more shall live

BOOM ,N PORTO RICO.

PROSPERING UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

From a Special Correspondent.

SAN JUAN (Porto Rico) March 15.—Porto Rico is on the boom. Although free trade with the United States has been in effect only seven months, the of prosperity is at work, and the improved con are apparent on every hand. There is not a house in San Juan and all rents have about . Wages for common labor are twice what they formerly and men are needed everywhere. The has on his desk many applications for various of franchises—capital is now eager for access to little island since it has been taken under Uncle wing. All vessels plying in this trade are being to their full carrying capacity and a new line of to the United States has just been put on. is very brisk with the local merchants. The first night after my arrival here I made the round retail district and found the shops crowded with . They were packed before the show cases three rows deep, and in many instances the clerks standing on the counters in order to see and make heard. I came here from Cuba, and the re district of Havana, as compared to that of San Juan, quiet as a graveyard.

Reform.

free trade was established between Porto Rico the United States the legislative assembly of the was required to put into effect a system of taxa that would supply sufficient revenue to defray ex of the government. The law calculated to meet requirement has been in effect a little over a year result can now be discussed. In the matter of the reports show that $25,000 was collected the first month and a substantial increase de for each succeeding period of thirty days until the the last one ran up to $92,147—the total for the being $750,417.65. The splendid outcome of this is particularly gratifying for the reason that its inauguration the people were oppressed with of taxation, which, while working a direct to the masses, was at the same time inadequate necessities of the government. The unfairness ineffectiveness of the old system may be better com when it is stated that a non-resident could any amount of property without paying taxes; property owner was held exempt from taxation assessment levied against the renter; that were on the free list, while food stuffs and all were overtaxed. The whole system was ar purposely to shield the rich and throw the bur the shoulders of the poor.

present system is working so smoothly and sat that its acceptance without complaint has been . In addition to the sum returned from excise similar total has been derived from the custom . The balance necessary to meet the cost of oper the government has been obtained from a direct tax—a maximum of 1 per cent. for insular municipal purposes, based upon an assessment from one-half to two-thirds of full values. To how unanimous the acceptance of the new things has been, it is shown that although worth of property was levied upon, and 65,- returned, the board or equalization has applications for readjustment of assessments. of taxation has been so generally distrib its weight has not been felt by any particular industry. It is claimed by some authorities that there is not another civilized country in the world as fairly, lightly, and adequately taxed as Porto Rico at the present time.

Industries Increasing.

The improved condition of the country is shown by the increase in the number of its industries. In twelve months the number of dealers in articles subject to excise taxes increased from 6000 to 9500; the number of tobacco manufacturers from 170 to 604. During the same period the amount of taxes paid on manufactured tobacco increased from $8146 to $25,203, and the tax on rum from $9952 to $42,112. A comparative statement of the exports of oranges and straw hats to the United States during the first six months of free trade and the corresponding period of the preceding year discloses some increases that are worth noting. Before free trade the value of straw hats exported during six months was $3677, and for the first half year afterward $80,106. The sale of oranges increased during that time from $13,961 to $31,209.

Of course the largest sums were involved in the items of sugar and tobacco. Before free trade the amount of sugar sold to the United States in six months was $631,316, and for a corresponding period afterward $1,449,669. During the same time tobacco jumped from $176,721 to $545,056. Nearly all of the tobacco sold was in the form of cigars and cigarettes, and on account of this product going to the market in a manufactured form the labor of the island reaped an added benefit from the wages paid for its preparation. While the United States bought all of the island's sugar—we took all but $100 worth, a merchant in Spain placed an order amounting to $54, and a dealer in the British West Indies another for $46—and the greater portion of its tobacco, the coffee crop was forced to seek another market. The people of the United States have not been educated to the taste of the Porto Rican product, although it is of a very fine quality. The statistics show we increased our purchases from $847 to $4918, yet $1,458,856 went to otherr countries—principally to France.

As Purchaser of American Goods.

The dominant issue with the American business man is the sale of goods to the people of our new possessions. The amount of their purchases is an item of great importance to everyone. The statistics of Porto Rico, as furnished me by the customhouse officials of San Juan, are as follows: During the last year of Spanish rule the people of the island bought from the United States supplies to the amount of $2,254,989; during the first year of American occupation, $3,398,916; during the second year of American control, $6,483,613, and the third year, $9,367,557. The total amounts purchased from all other countries during the same period were as follows: Last year of Spanish rule, $10,714,837; first year of American occupation, $8,856,362; second year. $3,225,406; and third year, $2,071,931.

These figures look right from an American standpoint and the indications for the current year warrant the expectation of record-breaking totals. For example, take the customhouse receipts for February compared to the same month last year. A year ago the total duties paid by all countries were $62,784. At that time a 15 per cent. duty was imposed upon all goods from the United States, and that country paid $20,600 of the whole, leaving only $42,184 for all other countries combined. During February of this year, with goods coming in free from the United States—and an enormous amount of them—the total of duties of all other countries ran up to $71,076—nearly $10,000 more than a year ago, including the large amount paid by the American con-

Not Abandoned by Europe.

This shows conclusively that Porto Rico is becoming prosperous; that she is spending her money; and the important point for the consideration of the American business man is that the island is still considered a market by the European concerns. They have not abandoned it by any means. I asked for a detailed statement of the kind of goods brought in during February and where they were from. Spain imported the largest amount, having $71,527 to her credit. This consisted of soap, rice, butter, fans, cotton stockings, shoes, olives, buttons, wine, tinware and provisions. The things which came in the greatest quantities were rice, shoes, soap and wine. Novia Scotia was second in point of value with $35,000 worth of codfish, potatoes and lumber. I was told that this was about the monthly average on these staples for this country. Germany was third, with large quantities of chinaware, cheese, beer, crackers, thread, cutlery, toys, cement, twine and ironware. Whenever I look for figures I always find Germany near the top. Her salesmen are on every steamer and in every port. The Germans are out looking for business and they are getting it. England, France, and Scotland came next with the minor countries trailing along for smaller amounts. The most of the above should have been bought from the United States, and it would have if the American merchants had made an effort to prevent the orders from going abroad. It seems strange that foreign rice should come in here in such large quantities and stand a duty of two cents per pound, when the product of the American rice fields comes in free. There was one lot of shoes valued at $6000, and a shipment of soap worth $5000—what's the matter with Yankee soap? Another big item was $5000 worth of dried peas. I am told the American hardware drummer will find orders waiting for him here.

A Resident's View.

I called upon J. R. Latimer, one of the prominent business men of the island, who was a member of the Porto Rican commission to the United States, and requested his view of the business prospect. He said: "Many of the American business men are becoming more attentive to the requirements of the trade here, and all those who are making an effort to meet the conditions are getting substantial results in the form of increased sales. Several shoe firms are now making a class of stuff especially designed for tropical needs and the effect is very satisfactory. The dry goods men have made some concessions to the demands of our merchants, but not enough, I think, to make American goods as popular with the people as European textures. American food stuffs have long had the lead in this market, and will doubtless continue to increase in popularity. There is a tendency on the part of some American manufacturers to make this a dumping ground for odds and ends that cannot be duplicated. This, on the face of it, is an extremely bad policy, as a demand for any line cannot be created in this manner. The European dealers, from whom we have bought our goods in the past, were always very considerate of us. They studied our trade very carefully and conformed to it in every way possible. We find the Americans are inclined to be more independent than we would like to have them. I hope this will change for the better as we become more acquainted."

The statements of Mr. Latimer have been repeated to me again and again from the Governor down to the smallest merchant. The requirements of the trade here must be looked after and conformed to by the American concerns. The game is well worth the candle. Europe is an old hand at the business of selling abroad, and she considers this field worthy of her close attention, even now that a heavy duty is put against her. Why should the American business men ignore the situation? These people are making money now, and they are going to be still more prosperous next year. When they have money they spend it freely. The Yankee drummer had better pack his grip and come this way.

FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

STILTS FOR SHORT MEN.

There would seem to be both a field and a fortune open to anyone who will invent some light and compact contrivance to enable the people who are small, or who dislike being wedged in a crowd, to get a good view of the various processions and pageants which are to take place in London this year. On Thursday the devices were of the most elementary nature. Some people had mirrors tied on to the end of sticks, but at the crucial moment they either forgot all about them or found that the jostling of the crowd made them too unsteady for use. A great many ladies brought boxes tied up in brown paper, to resemble purchases at a shop, and stood on them when the police were not looking. But this is a cumbrous way of doing things. What is wanted is something that can be carried without inconvenience, that does not take up to much room and that is not too violent a trespass on other people's rights. These requirements would be satisfied if an improved kind of stilts, to fold up like a camera tripod, and broadly based at the ends, could be put on the market.—[London Chronicle.

THE MOST EXPENSIVE SEASON TICKETS.

What are perhaps the most expensive season tickets are issued by the Congo Railway Company. The first-class single fare for a journey of about two hundred and fifty miles is $100. Latterly this company has issued season tickets available for one year at the following rates: For four return journeys, $475; for eight return journeys, $665; and for twelve return journeys, $855. Naturally the issue of these tickets is very limited, so far only four having been delivered, but application for a fifth has been made. They are not printed, but written out on a piece of cardboard, four inches by six inches, folded in two; on one side the date and name of holder are inserted and the other is divided in squares, where the beginning and end of each journey is filled in by the station masters at the time it is performed.—[Tit-Bits.

NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.

HOW THEY ARE BEING MADE AND WHAT THEY LOOK LIKE.

From a Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Now, after twelve years of continuous use, Uncle Sam has grown tired of his "regular" series of postage stamps and has decided to surprise the public with an entirely new set. While the Postoffice Department has issued three series of commemorative stamps—the Columbian, Trans-Mississippi and Pan-American—its small, familiar "regulars" now sold at all postoffices have been in uninterrupted use since 1890.

Work on the new series has already been commenced at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, in which the government instituted its great postage stamp mill eight years ago, when it took the work of manufacturing its millions of little, engraved sticking plasters out of the hands of a private company.

I am going to give you some idea of the enormous task which this official stamp mill now has before it. This will be the first new series of regular stamps which Uncle Sam will have launched into the market for himself.

New Harrison Stamp.

A Harrison stamp will be something brand new to Chief John R. Hill, of the bureau's engraving division, and his entire staff of skilled artists, are now engaged upon the new designs for fifteen denominations ordered changed. While the faces of the same national heroes honored upon the present issue will, with one exception, be retained for the embellishment of the new, entirely different portrait vignettes will be made, in all cases. Thus the profiles of Franklin, Washington, Jackson and Jefferson, on the 1, 2, 3 and 50-cent stamps will give way to three-fourths or seven-eighths full-face portraits. New vignettes of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Sherman, Webster, Clay, Madison and Marshall are being selected for the remaining denominations. The face of Farragut will be substituted for that of Perry on the $1 stamp.

philatelists. A new denomination has been selected to bear the portrait of the last President of that name. This is to be a 13-cent stamp, and will represent the cost of sending a registered letter of ordinary weight to any foreign point within the international postal union. Mrs. Harrison has been asked to furnish what she considers to be the best portrait of her distinguished husband and this will be given to the engravers.

The first step in the preparation of the new issue is the submittal by the corps of artists of various designs. These are altered according to suggestions made by the Postmaster-General and the director of the engraving bureau. Those selected will be enlarged many diameters, until they appear like giant stamps, big enough to frame and hang upon the wall. Each of the accepted designs is then reduced, photographically, to the desired size of the finished product. These photominiatures are printed upon white paper and distributed among the engravers. The enlarged designs and the original portraits of the subjects are placed in the view of the engravers that they may attain greater exactness of detail and expression. Several of the most expert engravers work upon the portraits alone. These are the first to copy the designs in steel. With magnifying glasses to their eyes, they first etch the figures in outline. Next they add the finer delineations and shadings.

The portrait vignette on each new stamp having been engraved, the steel plate bearing it alone is next handed to a letter engraver, who adds the wording and figures. Then it goes to another worker, who adds the border design. The result so far is a small slab of steel bearing in the center the minute form of a single stamp.

Original Plates not Used.

These original plates will never be used. As each is turned out by the engraver, it undergoes a careful hardening process. It is then clamped, face up, in a large machine which rolls over it, with enormous pressure, a cylinder of soft steel. The lines previously in intaglio upon the hard plate now appear in relief upon the soft cylinder. The latter is next hardened and replaced in the transfer machine. Under the same pressure as employed before it is rolled over a huge plate of soft steel until it has made twenty rows of impressions, twenty in a row. These 400 impressions are exact reproductions of the single engraving made on the small slab of steel by the hands of men. Each of the large plates thus made is hardened and many such from the same cylinder. The original plates and the cylinders made therefrom away in a vault as soon as the necessary duplications shall have been made.

The plates for any of the new stamps having finished and made ready, the next step is the the large sheets of white paper upon which rectangles are to be printed. These sheets nished, under contract, by a private firm. will be done by a corps of women. The will be moistened by laying between them, of twenty, cloths previously wet with water. will be left in place over night. The next sheets will be ready for the printing room.

WINTER ALOFT.

AS VIEWED FROM THE HEIGHTS OF THE SAN BERNARDINO RANGE.

By a Special Contributor.

LOOKING up from the lovely, semi-tropical valley and plains, where the orange groves, palm avenues, and rose gardens of Redlands, Highlands and San Bernardino, back in the soft summery air, one sees the lofty peaks of of the northern range of mountains clothed with forests of pine that show darkly against a mantle of glittering snow.

Climbing toward those arctic summits over the "Arrowhead." "City Creed," or "Santa Ana" road, one in a few hours—passes from summer to winter—from warmth and luxurious verdure to the chill regions of snow and ice.

Gaining an altitude of 5000 feet, as we enter up a snow-crowned forest from the lower edge of which we look back and down upon the plain below and wonder at the contrast.

From this point upward to Fredalba and the summit of the range—6250 feet above the plain—we are in the midst of winter scenes and surroundings. We find here a few families who await the opening of the season, when work in "logging camp," or the advent of summer visitors to Fredalba Park will comence again.

It is during the season of ice and snow that those who have cameras seek "snow pictures" in the forests, by the streams and around the camp.

With each snowfall the trees are clothed with snowy robes, decked with icy jewels, or delicately adorned with feathery plumes and tufts.

By the sides of the streams in the deep gorges, ice and moss cover the rocks, and streams as, hunting the noisy dash and fall of the water, softening or hiding the roughness of the steep banks. Here and there we see the birches and maples still decorated with their seed-pods and tassels; while the slender dried grains are fringed with ice.

In the part we notice where the ice has made a veritable "honey comb" of a bit of wire netting, edging each space with a film two inches wide.

In our "Camp" we improvise snow shoes and "skis" with which we coast from the steep slopes, or on our home-made sleds we take the children for a ride.

Our weekly mail reaches us—in midwinter—every Saturday. When the drifts are the deepest, we organize a "relief" party and bring the mail bags into camp in true Arctic style.

Again, the mail carrier abandons his light wagon at the snow line and brings the mail "in" on his horse.

We keep the front of the postoffice as clear of snow as we can, and haul wood to each other's cottages. The children bundle up warm, and take their pets out for exercise, while the men gather in the "store" and tell stories of former winter experiences.

When the mail carrier is ready to start "out" again, we escort him to the snow line and see him safely around the point where he begins to strike "dry land."

STRANGE DUST CLOUDS.

SOME OF THEM HAVE BEEN CARRIED IMMENSE DISTANCES OVER SEA AND LAND.

[F. M. Bacon in Chicago Tribune:] When Chicago was burned in 1871 the smoke that arose was perceived as far away as the Pacific Coast, or, in other words, from 2000 miles away particles of soot were seen float-in the air, and if this means that they had risen fairly above the horizon, then from consideration of the mere curvature of the earth we have to believe that these particles were lying in a dense mass at several miles above the earth's surface.

But a fiercer fire went heavenward in 1883 when near the corner of Sumatra the volcanic mountain of Krakatoa broke into eruption. The story of the result of this came in from almost all over the world. Fine dust, so fine that it took many months to subside, seems to have spread the globe round in a direction opposed to lower prevailing winds. In the tropics the air became so laden with dust that the sun grew blue and then green as it sank toward the horizon.

In England similar phenomena were observed, differing only in intensity, while the afterglow assumed such abnormal vividness as to penetrate and color a winter fog. More than this, in the towns the fogs during this period grew crimson when lit merely by street gas light.

Neither was this the end of wonder. At night time there were seen for a lengthened period, but gradually fading, what were spoken of as "luminious clouds," which were doubtless but another evidence of the same dust floating at a height estimated at least sixty miles. The story of Krakatoa is no isolated one. The loess or loamy dust of China has been pretty certainly proved to have been borne aloft and carried at least a quarter round the globe, having been found floating as a permanent dust atmosphere above the highest mountains of California.

Again, in 1881, Mr. Whymper watched an eruption of Cotopaxi sixty-five miles away. On that occasion an uprush of inky smoke towered into the hair, and then was borne away horizontally, eventually after several hours passing in front of the sun, which thereupon assumed a greet tint, different from any that the observer had ever witnessed in the heavens.

There is among the familiar "animated pictures" exhibited by the kinematograph a well-known representation of the throwing down of a condemned chimney stack. The picture shows a large portion of one side of the base of the chimney removed and replaced temporarily with timber struts. Then a fierce burning fire is kindled around these props and the work of demolition is watched from a safe distance. In due time, the flames having done their work, the lofty stack inclines slightly from the perpendicular, and then, as one entire whole, falls with a mighty sweep to earth. Over the fallen ruins there immediately hangs a small white cloud, slowly vanishing into clear air.

The amount of impalpable débris consigned to the air is indeed relatively small, but its effects may be almost inconceivably great and far reaching. We have, however, to recognize that by no means all of the dust has come from below. Some, and not a little, hails from no man knows where, except that it must be from the void of space. Thus, it may be supposed to have come from other worlds destroyed.

There is not only no doubt of this, but there have been plausible calculations made as to the actual amount of cosmic débris that from this source alone comes into our atmosphere. Thus one of our greatest authorities has arrived at the conclusion that it is approximately not greatly less than 100 tons or greatly more than 1000 tons in the course of every day.

It is seldom realized save by aëronauts and mountaineers how much watery haze the lower air contains. Blue sky itself is but the ultimate fading out of haze, and when lower layers of the atmosphere are surmounted the blue above is bluer than before only by reason of the haze there being more illuminated. The result of the most recent investigations, carried out chiefly by high-flying kites, go to show that, though at great heights the air may be spoken of as dry, this is but a relative term. Commonly about one-half of the water vapor in the air is left below by the time the first mile and a half is climbed, but the actual moisture present varies with circumstances. Thus, up to a few thousand feet the air is drier during the winter and at night, and damper during the summer and by day, than it is nearer the ground.

In the light of these facts it becomes easy to conceive how in certain conditions of moist weather and on a dark night the light of a large town reflected in the heaven may be seen at a long distance. Under the clear skies of other lands reflections may be seen on the under surface of a cloud over great ranges.

Thus the cloud heaps over thunder storms on the prairies may sometimes be seen at night on the horizon at a distance amounting to more than 200 miles.

THE GAME OF BOWLS.

The old English game of bowls, which has of late become so popular, appears to be an expensive amusement if it is to be played upon a really good green. A suburban green, some sixty yards square, which was recently opened for play, cost nearly £300 to make, and ought to have cost half as much again. Leveling the ground was the simplest part of the operation. Some five hundred drainpipes were used, and 150 tons of "hard core" had to be placed on the level surface. This was followed by 200 loads of ashes, 70 tons of sand, and 30 loads of gravel. The turf cost £25, although the proper kind, which is said to be found only near the seashore, would have run the club in for the comfortable little sum of £180.—[London Chronicle.

REFORM IN CHINA.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM AND ONE OF SLOW PROGRESS AT PRESENT.

From a Special Correspondent.

SHANGHAI (China) Feb. 15, 1902.—Two strong forces, distinct and antagonistic, are silently and with determination at work in China. The court at Peking is one of these and is, at present, the stronger of the two. This is distinctly the conservative force. "Has the court learned nothing by the lessons of the past twenty months?" is the indignant cry of the average foreigner here. I don't know. Precedents of centuries cannot be discarded at a moment's notice. The court at Peking resumed its usual course, after the imperial personages had reëntered the Purple Forbidden City. Manchu courtier and eunuch body-servant took their time-honored places, and the progress of the world finds but a faint echo within those deeply-hidden recesses. Manchu and eunuch may have profited by past experience, and while they cling to precedent it is probably with a timorous and uncertain grasp.

The other force is young China. Among the thousands of literati, eligible to office and known as expectants, some classical scholars have been found who, not satisfied to wear out their lives in waiting for official preferment, entered upon the struggle of life in the congenial capacity of journalist. The choice of profession was followed by the desire for study and research, that the results might be put before the ever-increasing number of readers. The experience of 1900 proved to every Chinaman not wholly absorbed in the task of keeping body and soul together, that the absolute supremacy of the Middle Kingdom and the Son of Heaven was a fiction and a mockery. When this conviction dawned upon the annotators of the dead sages, they set about finding out facts relative to China's real status. Their studies led to practical results, as the native press abundantly shows. Clothed in the language of Kung Futsz' and Meng-tsz', modern life is brought into comparison with the immovable past, and not to the credit of reaction. The dawn of China's new era, if this be the dawn, will be better comprehended, if I allow both parties to speak for themselves.

As described in my last letter, the court returned to Peking and the Purple Forbidden City on the seventh of January. The next day a number of imperial edicts appeared in the Official Gazette, or Court Journal. I quote here the literal translation, adding only such explanations as are absolutely necessary:

(1.) "C'hü Hang-chi is hereby granted a Tiao Su sable robe, with the privilege of wearing same."

This granting of articles of clothing resembles in principle that of conferring orders or medals at European courts, with this addition that in China it also conveys rank and certain immunities. In this case, the robe is worn only by the Emperor and princes of the blood. The Tiao Su robe is of martin, only certain portions of the head being used, and sewn together so as to form ten rows of three "eyes" in front and nine rows at the back. It is granted exclusively to Manchu, but the late Li Hung Chang was the first subject of Chinese extraction in whose favor an exception was made.

(2.) "Shih Shu and Chi Lu, members of the Board of Comptrollers-General of the Imperial Household Department, are also hereby granted similar robes, with the privilege of wearing them."

(3.) "A special decree in the name of the Empress Dowager:

"Last year, during the confusion arising from the disturbance in the capital, the late imperial concubine, Chén-Fei, was prevented from accompanying us in our flight from Peking, resulting in her committing suicide to avoid insults. The firmness of will and chastity shown by Chén-Fei is indeed worthy of commendation, and we hereby bestow upon her the posthumous honor of Kuei Fei, or Imperial Concubine of the First-Class, as a mark of our esteem and admiration of her conduct. Let the yamen concerned take note."

The bestowal of posthumous honors is common in the Orient and is highly valued by the relatives of the deceased. In this case, however, there was a report that this woman, Chén-Fei, was thrown into a well and stoned to death by order of the Empress Dowager because, having considerable influence upon the Emperor, she dared oppose the Empress when the latter determined upon flight. Such reports are most difficult to be substantiated, and it is equally difficult to discern the reason why the Dowager revived the matter immediately after her return.

(4.) "Decree impressing upon the Tartar generals, Viceroys, and Governors of the empire the importance of being prompt in paying their several portions of the war indemnity as required in a memorial of the Chinese Plenipotentiaries and Board of Revenue. The least delay in paying these indemnity installments will cause trouble, and the delinquent Tartar generals, Viceroys, or Governors will be called to account and punished accordingly."

This decree needs no comment. It shows, what no one doubted, that China will liquidate her obligations.

(5.) "Decree appointing dates on which the Emperor will personally visit certain temples to sacrifice to the deities."

Here is the result of the first day's work after the return of the court, and it is a fair sample of the average, as the Purple Forbidden City has seen it for hundreds of years. Progress there is none. Twenty months absence under duress have failed to disturb hereditary notions, and the thread is taken up where it was broken. What future may China expect under this leadership of the constitutionally blind?

Let us turn for relief from this saddest of mournful pictures, to the slow but constant effort of the great reformer of modern times, the press. First of all, there is the Universal Gazette, cleanest and most earnest of native papers, faithfully trying to arouse a national spirit, now dormant in the country. The editor is evidently a patriot and an intelligent man. When we look over his columns, there is no evidence of flattering the public with false pictures of China's greatness; if anything, he depicts his country's degradation in too dark colors, with the apparent intention of appealing to the national pride. I quote from a recent editorial, because it concerns our relations with China as affected by the exclusion law, which this people cannot understand to be a measure of self-defense. Besides, it echoes the wail of despair, plainly discernible wherever he touches upon China's helplessness:

"In the nineteenth century, the conscience of some men in America was aroused, and Lincoln fought eight years to make freemen of slaves. The blacks were set free, but their land in Africa has become the property of white men. This fact makes us shudder for Asia. The white man is gradually coming eastward, and the yellow race will come next for slavery. The fire is already scorching our eyebrows. Not only so, our yellow men who go abroad to America to push their fortunes are treated as if they were slaves. The Americans at first advertised for Chinese labor. But now they change their tune, and forbid Chinese immigration; and now they exercise their ingenuity in devising tyrannical laws against those already in the country. And yet the Constitution of Washington and Lincoln has not been changed. That, surely, is liberal and good. And yet, in the face of it all, the yellow man is not accorded the status of a freeman, but is treated as a slave!

"The same condition of things prevails in the American dependencies. They burned down whole streets in the Philippines, on the plea that the Chinese fostered the spread of plague. In Cuba they built a wall out of dead men's bones! Alas! Alas! Our Minister, Wu Tingfang, holds his peace and cannot bring international law to bear on them at all. Surely this is not because our countrymen are not worth looking after. No; it is due to the fact that foreign influence is too much for him. He is afraid to open his mouth. And our own high officials here in China are still asleep. They have a lofty contempt for everything foreign. They say that such petty matters as the condition of Chinese abroad shall not disturb their profound meditations on high philosophical subjects.

LATEST PORTRAIT OF KWANG HSU.

"Equally astray are those who prate of alliances with this or that foreign nation. None of them are of our race, none of them are of our religion. How, then, can any sincere alliance with them be possible? The only cure for our troubles is united action instead of discord. But, ah! how can that be brought about? Echo answers: How? Meanwhile, in the absence of any consolidating principle, we shall descend to still greater depths of degradation, and some fine day we shall be reading a book entitled: 'The Yellow Race Crying to Heaven.' "

The coloring of the picture, as I warned my readers, is too dark, but the outline is true to nature. We who dwell here see every day how deeply this hoary-headed empire has fallen, with what contempt its people are treated by every alien forcing his unwelcome presence upon them. A nation, mind you, of 400,000,000 people, with thew and sinew, and with the brain to use them to the best effect! A tithe of them, if united in purpose and action, could push us back into the ocean by mere force of numbers. It is a sad picture, and touches the inmost chords of our hearts, when we see a fellow-man lying in the gutter, the slave of his passions or desires, and unable to resent the jeers and gibes of thoughtless spectators. Here it is a nation, the greatest and oldest, and not long ago the most civilized, kicked and cuffed and despoiled. It is a sickening sight and there seems to be no prospect of improvement.

The Universal Gazette is by no means the only "voice crying in the wilderness." Native newspapers are multiplying and do not seem to suffer from lack of patronage. Most of them are published in the

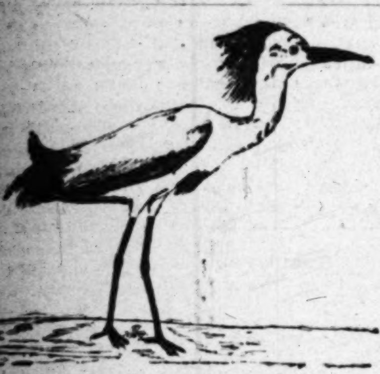
MY LADY'S PLUMES.

WHERE HER VALUABLE HAT-FEATHERS COME FROM.

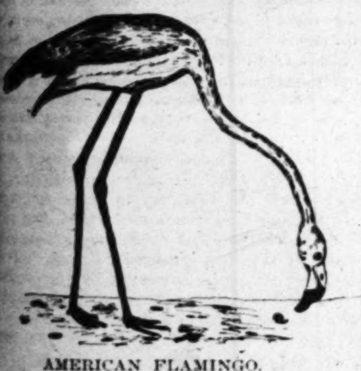
By a Special Contributor.

NOW that Easter is at hand and the proverbial "new bonnet" uppermost in the minds of most of the gentler sex, it may be of interest to them to know something of the source of the decorations by which their spring headgear is made cheap or valuable, accordingly as they are few and poor or plentiful and perfect. By this I mean the multi-colored plumes, as well as whole birds which adorn my lady's hat, spring, summer and winter through, not differing so much in quality with the seasons as in quantity. To those readers of the Times who are residents of Southern California, the story of the ostrich plume and its origin would be a twice-told tale," but, unfortunately, a large part of our wild birds and plumes comes from wild avian forms indigenous to southern swamps and coasts.

One of the most valuable of modern hat trimmings is known as the "aigrette." It is made from the feathers of a beautiful bird which has been named the snowy heron. It is sometimes called "little white egret," too, but the word aigrette has no connection with the latter name of the bird. This bird is of a snowy whiteness in color, and, like all the cranes and herons, has extraordinarily long legs, as well as a strong bill much longer than its head. The range of the snowy heron is throughout temperate and tropical America, from the northernmost tier of States to the Amazon River, occurring, though not commonly, on the coast of Los Angeles county throughout the year. Its nests are made in colonies—many hundreds of pairs sometimes occupying some dense cypress swamp. Along the Gulf Coast of Florida, they formerly nested in large numbers on the islands which fringe the coast; now, however, only a fraction of their once-populous hordes remain, owing to the incessant warfare waged against them by plume hunters. Ornithologists are agreed that the bird is extinct in Florida, its native home, while the sad work of destruction is going on at a rapid rate in Louisiana, and Texas. But the fault is not altogether with the plume-hunters—who kill that their own young may have food—but rather with the women who maintain the demand for the feathers of these birds. Of all those who will gather in our temples on Easter morning, how many will reckon the cost of the hats which they are wearing?



SNOWY HERON.



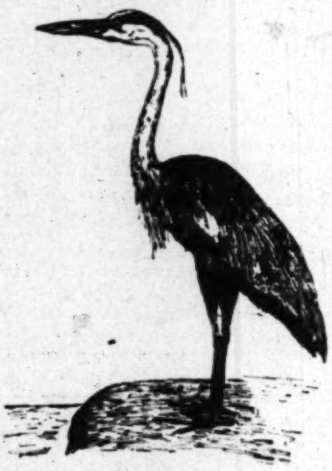
AMERICAN FLAMINGO.

"What does it cost, this garniture of death?
It costs the life which God alone can give;
It costs dull silence where was music's breath,
It costs dead joy, that foolish pride may live.
Ah, life, and joy, and song, depend upon it,
Are costly trimmings for a woman's bonnet!"

Probably the only reason that an occasional snowy heron is still found on our own coast is that it has never occurred here in numbers great enough to attract the cupidity of the plume hunter.

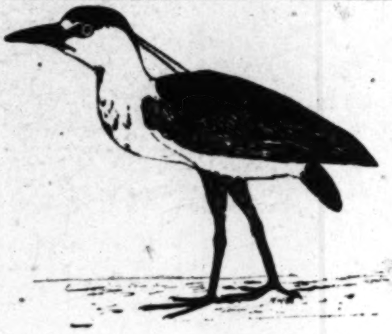
In common with all other herons, the egs of this bird are bluish-green in color and laid on a rude platform of sticks at a few feet elevation, usually over water. In this heron the number laid varies from three to five. An old name for the little egret was "hern" (probably a corruption of "heron,") or "hernshaw," whence arose the expression: "He does not know a hawk from a hernshaw." Time has corrupted this last word into "handsaw," rendering a feudal aphorism into a meaningless world-wide proverb. The flight of all herons and egrets is remarkable for the fact that their heads, bodies and feet are in a straight line, stiff and seemingly parallel to the surface over which they are moving. The gently-moving wings carry the body along with the least apparent effort of any flier in the world.

Many of the pink feathers seen on hats are dyed to that color, but not a few come from a peculiar bird—the American flamingo. It is a member of a family comprising seven species of tropical birds, only one of which reaches into the United States at Cape Sable, Fla. In the West Indies, and particularly on the Florida Keys, they are very abundant, being gregarious and very wary in habits. It is the tallest of native American birds, standing five to six feet in height, and weighs six to ten pounds when in good condition. They never wander far from sea coasts and are particularly partial to mud flats, where their food, which consists almost entirely of minute crustacea, can be gleaned most easily. In feeding, the bill is pressed downward, so that its peculiar shape makes the point turn upward. Ridges and filaments along the edges of the bill serve as strainers through which the sand and water taken in with the food are forced out. The color of the flamingo is a rosy vermillion, though in no wise rivaling the vivid hues of the famed scarlet ibis of the Nile marshes. The pink feathers of the flamingo are not in demand as are those of the heron just described, so its lease of life is longer. The eggs of the flamingo are two in number, pale greenish-white, and laid on the top of a truncated cone, made by the birds themselves, from the mud of the surrounding marsh. The top of this cylindrical pyramid is slightly hollowed out to prevent the eggs from rolling, and on it the female sits, her legs doubled up under her body. These mounds are often two feet high, fifteen inches thick at the base, and six or eight inches in diameter at the top. To them the birds return year after year at nesting time, so strong are the ties of home even with these humbler forms of life.



GREAT BLUE HERON.

Another bird, and one which is quite familiar to us all, is the great blue heron. It is sometimes called sandhill or blue crane, but thas is a misnomer, as the bird which properly bears this name is much larger and of a different color. The great blue heron is a solitary bird excepting in the nesting season, when they gather in great numbers to rear their young in some secluded swamp. Of this bird an eastern verse-maker very aptly says:



BLACK-CROWNED NIGHT HERON.

"Grotesque and tall, he stands erect,
Where the reed-riffle swirls and gleams,
Grave, melancholy, circumspect—
A hermit of the streams."

How much of truth there is in these lines, anyone can testify who has ever attempted to stalk one of these ungainly birds with camera or gun. Standing just at the water's edge, with neck drawn in and head resting on its shoulders, the heron, remains still and rigid as if carved from stone. Its somber colors and absolute quietness render it very inconspicuous, and, as it usually takes up its position under some tree or against the dark background of the river's bank, it cannot be seen except by an eye long skilled in the search for forest life. As has been said before, almost all herons nest in colonies and the present species is no exception to that rule. In southern States where there are larger swamps given over to a thick growth of cedar, cypress and sycamore trees, the herons are especially abundant and the plume hunters proportionately so. There are nesting colonies of these birds scattered from the arctic regions to Patagonia, but the largest are found on the tropical and sub-tropical coasts of the Gulf of Mexico. This heron's eggs are three or four in number, large in proportion to the size of the bird, and plain greenish blue in color.

The most beautiful of all its tribe is the black-crowned night heron. It is a common bird about water courses and inland ponds from Canada to South America, though only a migrant in northern parts. The pen sketch shown herewith does not present an adequate delineation of its true beauty, but anyone who is desirous of seeing the bird for himself may usually do so by taking a stroll up the Los Angeles River bottom just at nightfall. Coming into Los Angeles over the Santa Fé I have frequently seen them standing like silent sentinels along the edges of the little stream not a hundred feet from the rushing train. This heron derives its name from its habit of flying largely by night or in the early evening. From its peculiar cry of "qua" or "quawk," is frequently called "qua-bird" or "quawk" by natives of the Southern States. Large bands of these birds begin to appear in the swamps of Los Angeles county by the first of April, but they do not nest here, preferring to go farther north, or else remain in the South. The male and female heron are almost indistinguishable, though the male bears rather the finer plumes.

From the nimble-winged gull as well as the symmetrical tern come hat feathers also, but the most familiar sources are those which I have cited. Many whole birds are made use of by the modern milliners, of which our orioles, blackbirds and other vividly colored species form the larger part. HARRY H. DUNN.

MILLINERY STYLES THAT ARE TO BE.

Careful investigation of the new models has not brought to light any forms differing materially from those described a month ago as likely to divide favor among them this spring and summer. It will be remembered that these included a goodly array of all sorts—broad-brimmed hats and medium-sized hats, large and small toques, besides some few capotes. But, since the date of my last letter, your American buyers have been busy making their choice, and I understand that they have, in many cases, exhibited a marked partiality for medium-sized hats. I have also gathered that the principal reason for this preference is to be found in the greater amount of novelty shown in the composition and trimming of hats not more than moderately wide in the brim. It remains now to be seen how the Parisians will view the matter. Undoubtedly very large hats will be worn, especially by women tall enough to carry them gracefully, and on any dressy occasions, but probably more will be sold of a somewhat smaller size, at least for usual town wear. These may be divided into two distinct groups—hats proper, and enlarged toques, both of which French milliners now designate as chapeaux mayens, reserving the term toque for shapes more strictly deserving to be so styled. Some of the former are almost flat, the crown merely represented by a slight convexity in the center. The very prettiest models of this sort have the edge of the brim undulated, not deeply, but like the edge of some rose petals. Sometimes the undulation ceases over the ears, and the rest of the edge is rolled over itself. This idea is new, and deserves to have special attention paid to it. Other hats, on the contrary, have decided crowns, and the brim turned up in front, on one or both sides. Most of the enlarged toques also have regular crowns, and brims either roled up turban fashion or made of several layers, so as to rise as high as the crown. It is this massiveness of the brim in front and at the side that differentiates these shapes from the hat proper. Behind they are often identical, frequently bent down into the nape of the neck. When this bending down is combined with rolled sides the brim at the back assumes somewhat the form of pigeon's tail. In this case it generally has a portion of the trimming placed upon it. The fashion of trimming such shapes with scarfs, the ends of which fall down the back, or with a bow or coquille of lace, although fashioned by Mme. Reboux and one or two other first-class milliners, does not promise to be very general, since it is inapplicable to everyday wear. Nor is the flattening down of the brim behind by any means universal, as we have seen. Some shapes are frequently turned up at the back—an arrangement sometimes combined with a slight turning up of the brim in front.—[Paris Correspondent Millinery Trade Review.

THE PRINCE AND HIS FATHER.

Being brought face to face with Prince Henry of Prussia at the Library of Congress, by reason of my occupying a seat as a reader which lay just in his path as he made the tour of the reading room. I was impressed with the fact that Prince Henry is the very image of his father, the lamented "Unser Fritz."

No wonder is it that Prince Henry speaks English perfectly; his mother was the eldest daughter of Queen Victoria, and that her boys might have the advantage of speaking English with playmates, she constantly invited Mr. and Mrs. John Bigelow, then residing in Berlin, to send their boys to the palace to play with the young princes. Poultney Bigelow, the well-known writer, was one of these young American playmates of the royal brothers of Germany.

Mrs. John Bigelow and myself were walking in the park at Windsor one day, when the father of Prince Henry drove past, accompanied by a brilliant suite. On seeing the mother of his children's playmates, "Unser Fritz" ordered his carriage stopped and spoke most agreeably to us. He apologized for his very low tones, explaining that his throat was sore. The sad trouble which was to end his earthly career after an imperial reign of only ninety days, was then in its incipiency.—[Olive Logan in Washington Times.

WILHELMINA'S PECULIAR PRIVILEGES.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, unlike several other European sovereigns, can leave her dominions when she likes, and is at no time obliged to remain in her kingdom. In this respect she is more fortunate than, for instance, the young ruler of Spain and his mother, who cannot leave the peninsula without previously obtaining a full-fledged permission from the National Legislature. The only obligation placed upon Queen Wilhelmina in this respect is that of spending a minimum of ten days each year at Amsterdam, which is the real metropolis, The Hague being only the seat of government. Thanks to this freedom, she has traveled extensively—mostly under assumed names—in Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Italy, England, and France.—[Tit-Bits.

LAST OF THE CARIBS.

ONLY FOUR SCORE OF CRUSOE'S MAN-EATING SAVAGES REMAIN ALIVE.

By a Special Contributor.

WHO does not remember the thrill of childish fear with which, buried in his well-thumbed Robinson Crusoe, he crept after Friday, and his master, cautiously, tremblingly through the tropic underbrush, to peer out at the horrible Caribs dancing around their cannibal banquet on the beach?

In after years did not the dull pages of the history lesson suddenly glow with human interest when that canoe full of fierce savages, "very lion-like and terrible of countenance, with red-painted cheek bones," rushed out to battle with the sailors of Columbus, and we recognized our old enemies of the story book? "Most incredibly fierce and brave," Columbus called them, "quite amphibious, fighting with equal skill from the water, after their canoe was overturned."

On the little island of Dominica, which, oddly enough, was the first of the strongholds to be discovered and the last to be surrendered, lives in almost inaccessible mountain forests a pitiful remnant of the Carib race. For the sake of the old childhood memories, this brief sketch of their latter end, before they die out utterly, seems worth the writing.

The Island of Dominica.

A strange, wild, beautiful island, this Dominica. Columbus, at loss for words to describe it, crumpled a sheet of paper and threw it down upon the table before Queen Isabella. One could easily imagine that, at first, its highest peak, well named Mount Diablotin, had stood alone, lashed by gigantic seas, which, by a miracle, had been turned into billows of red, damp earth and gray volcanic ash, over which Nature had thrown a marvelous mantle of countless shades of green, woven with fantastic patterns in brilliant-colored tropic flowers.

A weird, uncanny land of dark, mysterious forests, through which the noon sun struggles feebly; of darker, more mysterious gorges, into which the sun falls not at all.

A land beneath which seethe wicked, world-old volcanic fires, full of devil-haunted spots, where sulphurous waters bubble up steaming hot, spewing out horrid masses of slimy mud, tinted in unnatural hues of vivid red and green, with weird oily gurgling like some monstrous living thing. In the crater of Mount Diablotin, itself a boiling lake, lying like a huge silver spider, luring strangers through his net of emerald green to slay them with deadly invisible vapors, are an English tourist and his guide, the latest victims.

Surely this island, with its savage beauty, was of all spots most suited to those strange, lion-featured Caribs, who flitted, noiseless and mysterious as their own forests, from shadow to shadow, until they burst with diabolic shouting, a wild hurricane of death upon the white-faced invaders of their land.

A Mysterious Race.

Wrapped in fascinating mystery is this Carib race. Unlike all other Indian tribes in appearance and customs, their origin is speculative; their habits travelers' tales, too often evidently untrue. Occupying the chain of islands known as the Lesser Antilles, they were very different from the peaceful Arawaks of Trinidad, only a few miles distant from their southern islands, or the easily-conquered Indians of Porto Rico, so near them to the north. Indeed, they had a pleasant habit of assembling great fleets of war canoes and sweeping down upon the larger islands, killing or carrying off for slaves their less war-like population. Tradition says that each year, gathering from their various islands, they would travel in their frail boats, over three hundred miles of turbulent sea, to the mainland of South America, and, with the regularity of clock work, soundly trounce the Indians there, apparently for sheer love of fighting.

Held in wholesome respect by the Spaniards, their isles were named "The Caribees," the surrounding sea "The Caribbean," and to them is due the doubtful honor of introducing the word "cannibal" into the English language. Before their discovery, eaters of human flesh were considered largely mythical, and Peter Martyr, writing to Pomponius Laetus of Columbus's adventures, says: "The stories of the Lestrigonians and of Polyphemus, who fed on human flesh, are no longer doubtful. Attend, but beware lest thy hair bristle with horror."

Their Last Stand.

Long after the other races had been conquered and enslaved the Caribees remained the Islands of the Caribs in fact, as well as in name. Slowly, however, fighting fiercely to the last, they were driven southward until here, in Dominica, they made their last stand. Spanish, French, English tried in vain to As late as 1748 Earl Carlisle, who held royal grant, gave it up as a bad job, and tween the English and the French, the clared to be a neutral land, belonging to the In 1756, however, the English changed finally occupied the island, only to be French in 1778. From then until 1804 the was changed with the rapidity of a South public, but in the general peace following eonic wars the island was awarded to power has held it undisturbed ever since.

The Trail to Salibia.

Though it is but twenty miles from the of Roseau to the Carib village of Salibia, and wild is the trail that it is a good two well worth the trouble, however, so wild riot of emerald vegetation. Tree ferns, survivals of the old carboniferous period, height; begonias growing like weeds; known brilliant flowers, with here and there scenting the air with strange perfume; ing down from the mountains, covering a warm mist; gorgeous rainbows arching leys, seemingly close enough to touch; gurgling unseen amid the foliage, 300 feet Carib town itself has but a collection of a and a queer little shanty, whose cross at the roof proclaims it to be the Catholic Mission.

They are all good Catholics, these priests say, but it is to be feared that is cause it is easier to be converted than real religion of this strange people was knows. Spirits of wood and air, a banya, requiring human offerings for his ghosts of dead ancestors, all these were guessed, of their belief. However deep faith may be, it does not sink deep enough dogged persistence with which they hold the little land now left them. A flourishing was started, called La Bote, but one day that the land where the chapel stood had sented to the priests. That night all save their huts forever as a silent protest against ing of their territory. There is something pathetic in this fragment of a nation fragment of its country. When the surveyed last year a little farm they was found to belong to a neighboring estate sent to the surveyor that if he returned killed, if they were all hanged for it.

Last of the Chiefs.

If you are lucky you will find the Francais, chief by descent and in name only, little authority over his people. The last old Joseph Français, dead then thirty let us trust, of the downfall of his people. have been a good deal of the old lion for those who remember him, agree with that they were always afraid to meet him he stalked through the forest, his three trotting obediently behind him in single wives were a constant source of grief to priest, being rather uncanonical, but kept out of the reverend father's way they unexpectedly met face to face.

"Good morning, Joseph," said the priest.

"Good morning," replied the chief.

"Joseph," said the good man, plunging of the matter without delay, "who are those of you?"

"Them my wives," replied Joseph, briefly.

"But, Joseph, don't you know that is pick out one of them, and I will marry you, and the others you must give up."

There was a moment's awkward silence. Then the chief, beckoning his retinue alongside, lined them up.

"My chief," he explained; "chief can not work; chief must starve. This one," pointing a lean finger at the end of the stolid line, "she fish for me. This one, she tend my garden, grow my cassava, my plantains, my [illegible]. This one, she tend my house, she cook for me, she make my clothes. Me chief! Now which one you say I give up?"

When old Joseph died, full of years and honor, three wives wept his loss.

Why Auguste Lost Caste.

Behold, now, Auguste Francais, chief of the Carib nation, conquerors of the Spaniards, the French and the English, long the undisputed masters of the Caribbees—Auguste Francais, whose descent runs straight, without a cross, from those red-painted, lion-featured eaters of men, is squatted on the ground, weaving baskets. No need for reason to ask why Auguste has lost caste with his people. It is as if the King of England were to go blacksmithing, or the Sultan of Turkey take in washing. Willingly would his people follow the old custom, and bring him fish or manioc flour, but Auguste—well, there is delightful stuff that comes in bottles from the white man's country, only to be procured by gold or silver, and gold and silver must be worked for. They are good baskets Auguste makes, to be sure; in fact, the best in the world. First his lean, cunning fingers will weave the dried grass into a basket of the ordinary kind, and then, with brown and black dyed strands, in curious patterns; around it he will weave another basket, putting plaintain leaves between the two. Impervious to tropic showers, water itself may, indeed, be carried in them.

In front of Auguste's hut, under a rough, palm-thatched shed, Auguste's wife is making cassava flour. Her unmistakable negro features explain why Auguste is the last of the Carib chiefs. By and by, when he dies, the Caribs will elect another head man to represent their interests in any dispute with the government, but the old royal line dies with this dull-featured weaver of baskets.

[illegible]

While we are watching his flying fingers, a French gentleman from the nearby island of Martinique rides up, clad in immaculate white. He is not pleased to see us and, indeed, starts to retreat, but finally dismounts and begs a word in private with the chief. The gleam of gold is in his hand as he talks, and when Auguste returns and begs to be excused, he is clutching something very tightly. The two enter the house together. The French gentleman is about to fight a duel, and has come for the famous Carib charm. Auguste will undress him, and with much ceremony, bathe him in a mysterious lotion, muttering strange words. Then the duelist will be bullet proof. In the corner of Auguste's hut hangs a fine ham. It is a present from the Frenchman's adversary, whom Auguste treated yesterday. It should be a bloodless duel.

On our way back to Roseau a messenger to town from Auguste Francais passes us in a great hurry. You do not see the gleam of gold in his hand, because he is carrying it in his mouth for safety. He will shortly return, bearing a heavy burden that clanks at every step, and Auguste Francais will give a new imitation of being "drunk as a king."

Odd Even in Death.

We also pass the four posts that mark the former dwelling of Popott. Before Popott was taken sick it was like all the other huts. Kind friends brought Popott food each day. One morning they found Popott had turned his face to the wall and left the food untasted. They brought no more, but instead each time they called they took away a door, or shutter, or bit of side thatch. It was a long time dying for a Carib, who generally dies quickly once he has made up his mind, and before it was over there was only a bit of the roof left. It is one of the few old customs remaining. They say it is to give the spirit free egress. As no Carib will live where anyone has died, and the pieces carried away can be used for a new house, this custom has a practical side as well.

In the high woods the soft thud, thud of an ax comes floating down the trail. It is Talaate and Curlin cutting timber for a boat; clever axmen, as all these Caribs are. Presently, with a long sigh, you hear the tree fall, tearing the countless long lianas that hang like serpents from every limb. Fine specimens of men are Talaate and Curlin. From the fallen trunk they will hew out a boat some twenty feet in length and eight feet wide. This they will soften with fire and spread with wedges, or perhaps paddle it as it is, over thirty miles of open sea, to Martinque, where those who buy will spread it to suit their tastes. Last week they were swept far out to sea, and picked up by a schooner. The captain, not wishing to be hindered by a tow, slyly set their boat adrift. It was two miles away before they found it out, but without waiting to complain they plunged overboard. Reaching their precious canoe, they clambered in and paddled safely home. This is a fact, and was not told me as anything extraordinary, but as a joke on Talaate and Curlin. They are very shy to see us when we approach, but smile—a Carib never laughs—at the idea of their being any the worse for the experience.

[illegible] Food.

There were visitors from town at the tiny police station last night who brought with them strange and delicious things to eat, all packed in little cans with gaudy labels. In the morning two boards were missing from the station floor. The gaudy-labeled tinned things were gone also. When you tell this bit of gossip to Talaate he finds it strangely funny. It is past eating time, but he shows no hunger. After a while you leave them; it occurs to you that perhaps they have no food; ought you to return and offer some? No, you would better not. If you could creep back so softly that they could not hear you, which you cannot, you would see Talaate and Curlin seated on the log enjoying hugely strange delicacies out of tins bearing gaudy labels.

On the journey home we are accompanied by little Duphine, bearing baskets into town to sell. Straight as her own black hair, she strides before the horses, her huge burden on her head. Duphine is a half-breed, and represents in more than one way the link between the Carib and civilization. This fatal admixture of negro blood has sounded the death knell of the Carib race. The negro wife is more and more in evidence. As yet the negro husband may not, with comfort, dwell among them.

But slowly, one by one, that strange race who flattened their skulls to odd shapes, and bound cloths around their arms to make the muscles swell, who painted their faces red and ate their enemies, is dying off, and in the near future the Carib will be but a name.

QUAINT OLD TANGIER.

A CITY UNCHANGED BY THE PASSING OF THE CENTURIES.

From the London Mail.

AT THE narrow western gateway of the Mediterranean, bathed today in sun, stands one of the strangest contrasts of the world.

Outposts of different ages and civilizations, they watch one another across a boundary line of sea: Gibraltar, an embodiment of the western world of today in its purposeful strength and energy; and low on the southern horizon line Tangier, a lone survivor of a world which was old a thousand years ago.

Tangier is a city which seems to linger on unconscious of the change of passing centuries, and from whose worn ways it would be hard to tell that the age of Rome's imperial sway now lies on the far horizon line of history.

Some traces of the modern world, it is true, have gathered upon the outskirts of the city; for Morocco's unbroken summer and endless sunshine have of late drawn to its coast a quiet winter season. Some few scattered villas and hotels now nestle behind the green of subtropical gardens about the city; but there is little incongruous mingling of East and West to disturb the picture; the West, as it were, stands aside, a quiet spectator of this world of the past.

A Day of Purest Blue.

Tangier's situation is most charming. Out of the unknown south stretch the dark mountains of Morocco, arid, sun-scorched rocks among drifts of desert sand, trailing down into foothills as they reach the coast, and it is on these last hill slopes, as they reach crescentwise out into the sea, that lies the white city of Tangier. Before it stretches a bay of purest blue, mottled with purple stains, where heaps of rock and seaweed darken the sandy shallows of the sea, and over which the swells, as they drift in from the open west, break here and there to trail in long ribbons of white to the shore.

As you draw near to the African coast in the small biweekly steamer across the Straits, the circle of white on the sides of the hill broadens out into an Oriental city. Slender minarets and rounded cupolas break the monotony of white, unvaried wall and level roofs; while behind, the sunshine of the late afternoon paints a background of yellow clear as the mistless air, and where the city crests a low eminence it stands silhouetted upon the sky as a city of white shadows, transparent, and as unreal almost as a city of dreams.

The Land of Arabian Nights.

You row ashore and pass along its quay, through dusky archways, and a step beyond enter the city.

You almost start at the strangeness of the scene before you; for it is no mere change as that which meets one across the partition lines upon a map. You have crossed a gulf which parts the world of today from the world of a past age. It is a city of the romotest East, of the Arabian Nights, with which you are face to face.

Before you wind its narrow streets or, rather, passages, thronged, bewilderingly strange. There on either side are the bazaars, little four or five foot recesses in the bare, white walls, a foot or so from the ground, where with half-closed eyes the proprietors dreamily recline, half hidden among the goods heaped upon the floor and hanging from sides and ceilings; lamps, embroideries, slippers, jewelry, and the heavy, soft silver work of the eastern smiths.

In some recesses sit turbaned lawyers and clients cross-legged before one another upon the floor, consulting in slow Oriental fashion, unconscious of the noise of passers-by; in another, equally indifferent to the world around, a letter writer laboriously paints upon a scroll the dictation of a bunch of white drapery on the ground before him.

In the Narrow Streets.

You wander on as if in a dream, for none of the figures which steal about the streets betray the least consciousness of your presence; they pass with the lithe, wearied walk of the East; the Scheherazades, the Paris, the Amines, veiled in their ghostly draperies; the tall turbaned men in their white robes; the dusky slaves; the naked carriers of water.

There wanders Aladdin in his yellow slippers through a bazaar, idling, as well as he may, till some of the magic lurking in each nook and byway leads him to fortune. There, perhaps, under disguise, wanders Haroun al Raschid himself, furtively noting through half-closed lids what passes around him; he with the flowing beard and green silk robes will be a magician of strange powers and virtue; for some, stooping as he passes, kiss his robes.

You wander on into narrower streets and passages, which wind about bemazed amid the dense array of bare, white, windowless walls, broken only by occasional low doorways and small barred grilles far up from the ground. In these less central parts the city sleeps in a dream-like silence.

Gradually a murmuring of many voices steals into the air, and then you find yourself by the deep eastern gates in the city wall, through which you pass to the great, bare market place beyond.

It is the meeting place of many races; Arabs and Moors and wild tribes from the desert; a moving picture of white and browns and yellows in the glow of the approaching sundown.

Caravans of Camels.

About the bare ground lie caravans of camels beside the untidy bales they have carried in from the desert, with the small groups of naked blacks who have followed them here, squatting on the ground among them, huddled together and bewildered at the strangeness of the scenes around. Here and there, wrapped in blankets, under yard-wide hats of matting, sit groups of vendors, where they have sat motionless the whole day, with their little bundles of grass or fruit and goods of unknown uses spread out on the ground before them. In other parts, the toil of their day over, have gathered small crescents of idlers, who watch a knot of writhing snakes under the fascination of the weird cries of the snake charmer, or are listening to a Calender as he tells some marvelous tale of the East.

Then long-drawn shadows move slantingly across the market place, and over the upmost sandy ridge, among the tall cacti, files a tired caravan across the disc of the sinking sun, Baba Abdalla, perhaps, with his forty camels and guard of Arab horsemen, reaching at last a long journey's end from the far interior. While they slowly settle down upon a bare space, floats a call from a distant minaret within the city, and as the daylight passes many among the moving throngs fall to the ground in prayer.

Then dusk steals quickly upon the city, and soon the market place is but peopled with shadows, with here and there a circle of dark faces visible round the glow of small fires burning themselves out; and it is not long before Tangier sleeps, as it has slept a many ten thousand nights, under the clear, cold stars.

The Other Side.

The city of your dreams?

No altogether. For behind its scenes lurks a poverty, squalor, and suffering too real for dreams.

Blood drops from the broken limb of that small, uncared-for mule; but the wound has not saved it from its load or brutal blows, and it limps exhausted on. Many are beggars sitting by the roadside, blind, pitiful, helpless. Some have wandered here from the deserts, scarred and mutilated till their lives can be little to them but a living death.

From some, torture has driven all light of reason, and dreadful, reasonless faces haunt one's memories of the city. Besides, on the Moors's tired faces, and coloring all their lives, is a sorrow; a silent grieving over the departed glories of their race, that their impassiveness cannot hide.

After nightfall some few gather in their small, remote cafés, and there, seated upon the floor amid wreaths of smoke from their drug-stained pipes, they will weave again in their dreams pictures of their past.

Now and again some few will break into weird, unharmonied singing, into songs of the time when the Spirit of their race shall end his long sleep; of the past that shall be restored to them, "When the spring comes."

JOHN H. WILLIS.

SHE BELIEVED IN WITCHES.

Superstition is not yet dead. A few days ago a lady living in Cornwall received a letter from a woman dwelling twenty miles away in a lonely coast village, in whose house she had frequently spent some months of the summer. The letter was not well written, but the woman can hardly be old enough to have escaped compulsory education altogether. Yet she wrote to say that there was somebody in that coast village who had been "ill-wished," and was in consequence likely to die. She had heard that in the town to which she had addressed her letter there was a skillful white witch who, for a consideration, would be willing to provide the sufferer with a charm which would be a sovereign cure. She asked the lady to endeavor to discover the name and address of the benefactor. That such a letter should be written in these civilized days is not specially surprising, but the instances are not worth noting, for those who have had most experience in the study of the superstitious beliefs of the peasantry know well that for one which gets written down in this way there are generally two or three vastly more interesting which are never disclosed except in moments of extreme emotion and panic.—[London Post.

BRITISH UNIFORMS.

The recent announcement that considerable changes were to be made in our officers' uniforms, with a view to curtailing all manner of unnecessary expenses, was received with widespread satisfaction. It will be noticed that the reform makes our officers look like Germany's. Indeed, the whole thing is got up on the Teutonic model. Plainness and neatness are the most striking features, all unnecessary details being dispensed with. Nor need any complain of a lack of smartness in the cut of the working garments. As has already been announced khaki is to be discarded in all ranks of the army. Drab will be the color of the new service dress for all ranks. This means that the new uniforms will be much the same color as those worn by the London Scottish Volunteers, who have reason to be proud that the War Office has found it advisable to copy their colors.—[London Express.

Kitchener Surprises a Tailor.

LORD KITCHENER does not often make mistakes, but he did perpetrate a ludicrous blunder some months ago, shortly after Gen. Dewet had fallen like an avalanche on Lord Roberts's communications. Lord Kitchener was down the line hastily fitting out mounted infantry columns. A large number of details had been gathered at Vredefort road station. Kitchener determined to equip them and send them into the field at once. He went to the waiting-room to look for officers and found there a man who was smart and well-dressed and who pleased His Lordship's critical eye.

"You will command a corps of mounted infantry I have just raised," said the general. "Very good, sir! What will my duties be?" "Don't you know your duties?" My own—yes, sir!" "Then don't argue. What is your regiment?" "Blankshires, sir!" "What rank?" "Master tailor, sir!" Lord Kitchener immediately had business elsewhere.—[Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Monkey Mascot in War.

FRITZ, the mascot of Co. H, Twenty-third regulars, and veteran of the Philippine War, is known to the boys of the company as "comrade," and to them he is away above the average of his kind.

Fritz enjoys the rare distinction of being the only one of twelve monkeys able to stand the long ocean voyage from Manila. Frank J. Knoffkey is his owner, and the soldier has never gone into an engagement since April 14, 1900, when Fritz was brought into camp, without the faithful monkey either on his shoulders or trudging along close by his side. Fritz has been on every island in the Sulu Archipelago and suffered without a murmur the long and trying campaigns.

When Knoffkey lay wounded on the field in Cebu Island his comrades in uniform pressed on, but his comrade, Fritz, nestled close to his side and guarded him through the watches of the night.

On the regiment's forced march across Latey Island, Fritz divided his time between walking and riding on the shoulders of the men along the line. It was on this occasion, says the New York Mail and Express, that he came near losing his life at the hands of several wild monkeys because he had no tail. A monkey loses his social standing in the Philippines when he is minus a tail. Fritz escaped from his indignant relatives only by leaping to the shoulders of his master.—[Unidentified.

Embarrassing Generosity.

THE Boston Herald tells of a relative of one of the Civil Commission, a young lady, who, having lived several years in Samoa, was able to make herself understood by talking Samoan to the natives of the Southern Philippines. The chief, whom she addressed, threw up his hands in surprise. "What," said he, "does the white maiden talk our language?" He was evidently overjoyed and promptly asked her the Samoan equivalent for "what he could do for her?"

She told him in her sweetest Samoan how much she admired the bead work on their garments and how much she would like to buy a piece of it to take back to her own country and show her countrymen how skillful and artistic these particular Filipinos were.

"No," said the chief, with a lordly wave of the hand. "You shall not buy. You shall take as a gift." Whereupon he quickly removed his trousers and handed them over with the unblushing grace of a child of nature.

The young lady hastily resumed her English tongue and the other ladies of the party confined their further importunities to women of the tribe.

Didn't Know He Was Dead.

AT THE last annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States, Maj. John Van R. Hoff, Medical Department, U.S.A., in the course of his speech accepting the presidency of the association, told the following story:

"A lady was passing through the wards of an overcrowded military hospital when she suddenly encountered two men sawing and hammering on some boards. She looked at them in some surprise and wonderingly asked:

"'What are you doing there, my men?'

"They looked up at her and one of them said:

"'What are we doing? Why, we are making a coffin, that's what we are doing.'

"'A coffin?' she asked. 'For whom are you making a coffin?'

"'For that fellow over there in that bed. Don't you see him?'

"The lady looked in the direction indicated and saw a man apparently in good condition and watching the operation with great interest.

"'Why, that man is not dead, and indeed he does not look as if he were going to die. Can't you postpone this work?'

"'No,' the men said, 'we can't postpone it. The doctor told us to make the coffin and he knows what he gave him.'"—[Army and Navy Journal.

Prince John Magruder.

ONE of the characters of the old army was John Bankhead Magruder, a Virginian who was graduated from the Military Academy and after a service of nearly thirty-one years in the First Artillery, during which he won several brevets for gallant and meritorious services during the campaigns in Mexico, resigned April 20, 1861, to cast in his lot with the Southern Confederacy, dying finally in Houston, Tex., February 19, 1871. Magruder was a convivial as well as a facetious gentleman and numerous anecdotes are current concerning his various escapades. It is, for instance, related that on one occasion while in Baltimore he was out late, and in such a condition that on his way home he wandered into the office of the stage coach which was then the only means of transit between Baltimore and Washington. The driver, finding him asleep on a bench, and supposing him to be a passenger booked for Washington, tumbled him into the coach and carried him with him on his night trip. When he woke up the next morning Magruder could not imagine where he was until he met a friend on the street who told him he was at the capital, but how he got there he could not imagine.

Gen. E. L. Keyes, in his autobiography, tells us that in the early days he invited "Prince John," as Magruder was called, to dine with him at the Presidio. Keyes retired at 10 o'clock, his usual hour, and when he came down to breakfast at 8 o'clock the next morning he found Magruder still at the table where he had remained all night with Lieut. L——. Gen. Keyes adds that as L—— was the most tactiturn individual in the mess he had probably been asleep seven hours out of the fourteen, but Prince John was still talking.—[Army and Navy Journal.

How He Walked.

A SERGEANT drill-instructor was endeavoring to make clear to the recruits he was drilling, the meaning of the word "smartly."

One raw recruit almost paralyzed the sergeant by blurting out:

Sir Hamilton's Spectacles.

A VERY remarkable story is current with regard to Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton's spectacles. It appears that the gallant officer, then a subaltern, lost a pair of spectacles in the battle of Majuba Hill. They were apparently picked up by a Boer whom they suited and who kept them for twenty years. In the early part of the present year the spectacles were found on the body of a dead Boer. The case had Gen. Hamilton's name on it, and they were in due course returned to their original owner.—[Unidentified.

Sewing Machines as Loot.

ABOVE all things, Tommy Atkins's heart loves a sewing machine. Although he must know that he can never succeed in getting it home to England, yet if he finds one in a Boer farmhouse he will tow it along with him, overburdened as he already is, upon the march. For miles he will martyr his existence with some obsolete and cumbrous machine until such time as sheer physical exhaustion or an irate company officer prohibits further painful possession of the prize. Wherein the exact fascination lies is a mystery, but grizzled reservist and callow recruit alike cannot resist this housewife's help.—[London Daily Mail.

ANIMAL STORIES.

The Policemen's Pet.

AT THE Eastern Police Station the authorities are in possession of a unique mascot in the shape of an opossum. The little animal has been in the station-house for three days, and is as chipper as a young 'possum in captivity could be well expected to be. The new arrival rejoices in the name of Cook. Where the little chap came from or what was his mode of living before being brought to the Police Station is not known, but is thought that the youngster strayed away from his home in the country and came to the city to see life.

Cook was discovered wandering aimlessly about the streets by Patrolman W. F. Stewart of the Eastern district, last Sunday night. The patrolman took him to the station-house and wanted to lay a charge of vagrancy against Cook, but, after a careful perusal of the statutes, Lieut. Scott found that he could not hold a 'possum on that charge, but he did discover that the little fellow could be held on the charge of being a vicious minor, so there he is. That Cook is vicious is well attested by the way he exhibits his teeth, and he is continually endeavoring to burrow through the bottom of the barrel which serves as his house.—[Baltimore American.

The Wily Polar Bear.

A POLAR bear would not have a chance in stalking seals if it were of a darker color. The only black spot about it is the tip of its nose. The sailors who first landed on various unknown Arctic shores and bays stated that the bears used to take them for seals and begin to stalk them at a considerable distance, lying down flat on their bellies in the attitude in which the well-known photograph by Gambier Bolton shows the old polar bear at the zoo, and wriggling along in that position until they came to an ice hummock, when they would get up, peer over to see if the "seals" were alarmed, and wriggle on again.

The sailors added that they could always see the black nose when the bear got near, but vowed that the bear put his paw over his muzzle to hide it! The Arctic foxes, the "blue" hare, the ptarmigan, ryper and ermine all undergo the seasonal change to white by an identical process. The hair or feathers, as the case may be, lose color and turn pure white by what may almost be described as an instantaneous process.

In the foxes and birds the white comes in patches, but the speed of the color change is remarkable. There are many stories of people whose hair was turned from shock "in a single night." Judging by the and foxes these stories must be true. No one ever the process of fading going on. GOOD SHORT STORIES.

Compiled for The Times.

Wanted His Fee.

THERE is a certain physician in this town whose professional reputation, great as it is, is equaled and excelled by his fame as a practical joker and ready wit. He is hardly ever to be found napping, and hence it has come about naturally that great is the desire among his circle of friends and acquaintances to have him so caught. In a western city there lives a man of similar tendencies, and he came to the Atlantic seaboard last summer, only to find that his reputation had preceded him to the summer resort on Eastern Long Island, where he whiled away a few weeks. The New Yorker also was there, and when the westerner first showed up, certain mutual friends, and interested as they were, laid the case before him. "We want to land him," they declared, "and want you to help. Anything you want in this town will be yours for the asking if you can only catch him out and do it publicly." "Leave all to me," said the western man, confidently, "only steer me up against him and I'll see that the drinks are on him."

Shortly thereafter the New Yorker entered the clubhouse, and in a little while was introduced to the westerner in a casual manner.

The latter looked at him intently. "Are you Dr. Blank?" he inquired. "I am," returned the other. "The great Dr. Blank?" "Guilty," was the response. "The Dr. Blank who treats throats?" was the next interrogatory. Suspiciously, Dr. Blank acknowledged that he was the man, and then the westerner, with a sweet smile, asked if he would treat his—adding that he'd take Scotch and soda. Dr. Blank saw the point, and gracefully signed his name to a check representing drinks for all present. But the end was not yet. Just before the party broke up, Dr. Blank approached the westerner with a roll of bills of small denominations conspicuously in his hand. "Do you happen to have a ten-dollar bill about you?" he inquired, at the same time holding out the roll. "Certainly," replied the other, producing a "X" and handing it to the physician. The latter, instead of returning the expected change, wrapped the ten about the small notes, and, thrusting the roll into his pocket, went quietly on with the conversation. This was too much for the man from the land of the setting sun.

"I say," he burst out, "I don't want to seem inquisitive, but would you mind explaining what you wanted that ten dollars of mine for?"

"Not at all," returned the doctor, blandly. "That was my fee for treating your throat just now."—[New York Tribune.

How Frederick Stopped Dueling.

AS THE result of a drunken brawl another German officer has been killed in a duel. The Kaiser, writes a correspondent, if he is in earnest in his expressed desire to stamp out dueling in his army, might profitably take a leaf out of the military book of discipline of the most illustrious of his ancestors, Frederick the Great. When that potentate ascended the Prussian throne fatal duels among the officers were of daily occurrence. He resolved to put an end to the practice, and he did—for a time, as long as he reigned, in fact. He issued an edict that any officer fighting a duel, and surviving, would be shot or hanged. Two officers appealed to him to be allowed to try to slay each other. Granted, on two conditions: that he (the King) should choose the ground and be present at the encounter. Accepted. Frederick chose the ground, attended the "meet" and took his seat beside the fine new gibbet he had erected in honor of the occasion. The combatants approached His Majesty, but the gibbet became puzzled and embarrassed. "What does this mean, your gracious Majesty?" they ventured to ask. "It means this," was the suave reply, "that the one who survives will be hanged as high as Haman on the gibbet." There was no duel.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

Harrison's Wit Won Check.

THE University of Pennsylvania has not a large endowment, and that it finds the means to pay its current expenses and put up new buildings is due in large measure to its provost, Charles C. Harrison. His little black subscription book is well known in many a downtown office—too well known, a prominent broker told him not long ago. Mr. Harrison was pleading personally with him for a subscription, but in vain. Finally the broker said:

"Look here, Mr. Harrison, I will give you something on condition."

"Very well, Mr. T——," said the provost, "name it."

"The condition is that you promise never come into my office again until I ask you to do so."

"Certainly, Mr. T——, I agree to that," said the provost promptly, and walked out smiling with a check for $1000.

A month or so later the broker heard a knock at his door. "Come in," he called, and in walked Mr. Harrison. He had the black book under his arm.

"Good morning, Mr. T——," he said; "I want you to help me with a little university matter I am——"

"Look here, Mr. Harrison," the broker continued, "when I gave that last thousand dollars wasn't it on the express condition that you wouldn't come into my office again until I invited you?"

"Why, yes," returned the provost, "I believe that was the understanding. But didn't you say 'Come in' just now when I knocked?"

They say the check this time was for five thousand.—[Philadelphia Times.

Liberties With the King.

THE authorities have refused to copyright a Scotch whisky label that bears in large staring letters "King Edward VII." They claim that the names of living people are their own property, and that other people have no right to demand a proprietary interest in them. They also suggest that it would be well for whisky men to get King Edward's consent before taking any such liberty as the one proposed. But who expects that the King will consent to this use of his name? He would be foolish if he did.

Just picture a line of thirsty men ranged along a bar. "Fill your glasses, gentlemen," says the man who buys, and they solemnly pass the bottle of "King Edward VII." along the line. "A toast, gentlemen. Up with your glasses. Are you ready? Then down with the King."

And they solemnly down him.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Want Supplied.

AMBROSE BIERCE, while out in San Francisco recently, visited the new house of an old friend, a gentleman of Irish extraction. The hostess evidently took great pride in the house, the furnishings of which were new and beautiful and gave every evidence of taste and refinement. Mr. Bierce, who has an eye for the beautiful, gave unstinted praise to everything he saw.

"But," he said, "I am sorry to see that your house, beautiful as it is, lacks one ornament which no Irish house should be without."

"What is that?" she asked, unsuspiciously.

"A pig," replied Mr. Bierce, with a satisfied chuckle.

The hostess' eyes sparkled.

"It did," she said, indignantly, "but you have supplied the want."—[New York Times.

Greeley's Handwriting.

HAYDEN CARRUTH in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post tells a good story about Horace Greeley's handwriting. Summarized, the article is as follows:

A Dutchess county clergyman who had considerable leisure thought it would a good plan to go into the poultry-raising business, so he wrote to Mr. Greeley, asking three or four questions as to the best breeds, etc., and inclosing a stamped envelope for a reply. Within a few days he received an answer which, according to his interpretation, read as follows:

"NEW YORK, Sept. 8.

"The war was a failure. I hope to see Jeff. Davis in the White House. A young man stands the best chance in Rhode Island. The Tribune is the poorest newspaper in New York. Yours truly, HORACE GREELY."

The clergyman was greatly mystified by the reply, as there was nothing in it which in any way related to the raising of chickens. Thinking that possibly he had not interpreted Greeley's awful chirography correctly, he took the letter to a man who was familiar with it for advice. The man gave the same reading as the clergyman and finally advised him to go to New York and call on the editor for an explanation, which he did.

Mr. Greeley treated him shabbily, for he had no patience with people who couldn't read his handwriting. He grabbed the letter, and after considerable effort interpreted it just as the clergyman had. He was nonplussed. Finally he called Mr. Larkaway, a compositor who had the reputation of being the only man in the office who could read Mr. Greeley's manuscript correctly. Larkaway gave it the same interpretation as the others.

As he finished, Greeley sank back in his chair helplessly.

"I'm done for!" he gasped feebly.

Just then Larkaway took a quick forward step, exclaiming:

"Hold on! There's a mistake! I had it wrong end up!" He seized the letter, gave it a quick turn and then read:

CHAPPAQUA, Sept 8.

Loyal to Her Kaiser.

MANY an interesting anecdote is told of the "old Kaiser Wilhelm"—the grandfather of Emperor William and Prince Henry.

In his later years the aged Kaiser took great pleasure in visiting the schools and catechising the children. At one time while in the city of Elms he visited an orphan school that was in the city and under government patronage.

After listening for an hour or more to the recitations of several of the classes, the Kaiser called to the front a bright, golden-haired little girl 7 or 8 years of age, and lifting her into his lap, said to her:

"Now, then, my little fraulein, let me see if you can answer me three hard questions." And taking an orange out of his pocket he held it up. "To what kingdom does this belong?" he asked.

The little girl hesitated a moment and then said timidly: "To the vegetable kingdom."

"Right, my little fraulein," said the Kaiser. "And now, to what kingdom does this belong?" The Kaiser drew a gold piece out of his pocket and placed it beside the orange.

More confident this time, the little girl replied: "To the mineral kingdom."

"Better and better," said the Kaiser. "Now, look at me and tell me to what kingdom do I belong."

The little girl was confused. Dare she say "the animal kingdom?" All the teachers and pupils looked at her with breathless expectancy. But in a moment she glanced up brightly into the face of the kind old Kaiser and said: "To the kingdom of heaven."

This unexpected answer drew tears from the eyes of the Kaiser. "Yes, yes, my child," said he, "I trust that I do belong to the kingdom of heaven, and the day is not far distant when I shall go there, my little fraulein."

Then, kissing the little girl, he presented her with the gold piece and the orange, and brought his visit to a close.—[New York World.

No Wonder it Was Tough.

AS IS well known, the swan lives to a great age, and, naturally, after they have been on earth for a hundred years or more, are not as tender of flesh as a spring chicken.

A gentleman in Lincolnshire, England, sent a dead swan to the Athenaeum Club addressed to the secretary. A special dinner was to occur that week, and the committee without question turned the bird over to the cook.

At the dinner the swan, resting on a great silver dish, was a delight to the eye, but when it came to carving and eating the bird no knife seemed sharp enough to cut it, and, of course, eating it was out of the question.

A few days later the donor met the secretary and said: "I hope you got my swan all right."

"That was a nice little joke you played on us," returned the secretary.

"Joke? What do you mean?"

"Why we had the thing boiled for thirteen hours and even then we might as well have tried to cut through the rock of Gibraltar."

"You don't mean to say you had the swan cooked?"

"Why, of course."

"Man alive! I sent it to be stuffed and preserved as a curiosity in the club. That swan has been in my family for 280 years. It was one of the identical birds fed by the children of Charles I—you've seen the picture of it. My ancestors held the post of master of the swan and keeper of the King's cygnets. Well, I have no doubt it was a bit tough."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sweden's Democratic King.

A MORE simple and homely King than the King of Sweden it is impossible to find.

M. Gaston Bonnier, the celebrated botanist, tells of how once, when he was botanizing near Stockholm, he met a stranger similarly occupied. The two botanists fraternized, and Mr. Bonnier suggested that they should lunch together at an inn.

"No; come home and lunch with me instead," said the stranger, leading the way toward the palace gates. M. Bonnier was naturally astonished, but his new acquaintance was most apologetic.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I happen to be the King of this country, and this is the only place I've got to entertain anybody in."

So they went in and lunched, and talked botany all the afternoon.—[New York Times.

The Land of Tips.

"AS TO the tip system abroad," said a Detroiter who has traveled all over Europe, "it isn't so bad outside Switzerland. There every outsider is expected to come down with a tip to everybody connected with the hotel, and sometimes to the town officials as well. I was passed along the lines as a soft mark, and at Chamouni, when I got ready to leave the territory, a last grab was made at me. I had feed the chambermaid, the waiter the porter, the bootblack, the cook, the omnibus driver, the mail carrier and all the bellboys, when the landlord approached and intimated that he had been left out in the cold.

" 'But I was your guest,' I protested.

" 'That is true,' he replied, 'but, if you will remember, I received you with three distinct bows, where only one is required by custom. It is two bows extra, monsieur.'

"I paid 10 cents apiece for the extra bows, and was stopped by a little man who introduced himself as the coroner of the canton.

" 'But where do you come in?' I asked.

" 'Had monsieur met with a fatal fall on the mountain I should have held the inquest,' he replied.

"I gave him a franc for not holding an inquest on me, and his clerk then stepped forward and said:

" 'And had there been an inquest I should have had the pleasure of writing to monsieur's relatives that he was dead.'

"I handed him the same amount for his loss of pleasure," continued the tourist, "and then asked if there was anybody else in Chamouni who had a claim on me.

" 'The police have not arrested you,' suggested the landlord.

" 'All right—here's a tip for them. Any one else?'

" 'My night watchman did not let the hotel take fire.'

" 'All right again.'

" 'And my wife, monsieur?'

" 'Well, what of your wife?'

" 'She has presented me with a son during your stay in my house.'

" 'And what have I got to do with that?'

" 'Why, monsieur, is it not worth a little fee to you that she did not present me with two sons at the same time?'

"I thought it was and left a franc for her, and then, as they could think of nothing else, I went down and tipped all the railway officials and finally got out of the country."—[Detroit Free Press.

PREHISTORIC PERU.

INTERESTING DISCOVERIES BY DR. UHLE OF BERKELEY.

By a Special Contributor.

THE discovery of an old, old race in Peru; a race that may have found the first ways of civilization earlier than the Egyptians; a total revision of preconceived notions concerning the history of old Peru and the sway of the Incas and the revelation of hitherto unknown races and nations which sprang up, flourished and died on the slopes of the Andes—these are the most important results of the anthropological work undertaken by the University of California under the patronage of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. For over two years Dr. Max Uhle, formerly of the University of Berlin, has scoured Peru and the adjacent nations in the search for the relics and habitations of the phehistoric races. The result is the addition of 140 cases of Peruvian relics to the coming museum of the University of California and the genesis of a new theory concerning prehistoric Peru.

This theory, in brief, is that the Incas, the absolute rulers of the land when the Spanish came, were lords of Peru only from comparatively modern times. Ancient Peru, according to the new theory, was the battle ground of many and divers nations and tribes, which held dominion in turn before the Incas conquered the land. As England, since the dawn of history, has been populated and dominated by many and varied races, first Celts, then Britons, then Danes, then Saxons and finally Normans, so Peru was under the sway from time to time of various races and tribes in the pure Indian population. Some centuries before the Spaniards came, before Pizarro swept the land in his bloody conquest, the Incas, a brave, hardy race, arose and swept all before them, so that at the time of the conquest they held dominion over all the land with the exception of some scattered tribes still keeping up a sturdy opposition in the high Andes.

The Original Civilization.

But underlying all these various civilizations was another one, from which they all proceeded. Some of the later stages of civilization can be traced to various tribes which existed at the time of the Spanish conquest, and, for that matter, exist now. Certain customs, tribal observances, types of body, can be traced to the living descendants. But of this older, mightier civilization no trace is left. They, in common with all the other Peruvians before the coming of the Spaniards, had no system of writing. Their tribal name is lost; their language is a mystery; all that remains clear is that at a time not later than two thousand years ago and in all probability much earlier, they controlled all the region which is now Peru, and that they had their main fortresses and citadels among the upper valleys of the Peruvian Andes.

From his researches, from excavations made among ruins and cemeteries through all Peru, Dr. Uhle is able to tell something of this people and its habits. They were idol worshipers, possibly sun worshipers. Among their ruins are several pyramids resembling the sun temples Peruvians of Pizarro's time, and many idols ments of rather finished workmanship have They lived in fortified towns, and built great adobe to guard their fortresses. One of the these stretches almost three miles along the mits of the Andes. Within these fortresses all of sun-dried brick, were joined, one to another to make each village one great house. The evidently a tribal government, and possessed of rather elaborate ritual. They tilled the soil, to have subsisted mainly from their herds of They were skilled potters and decorated their elaborate and highly-colored patterns. One of the ures from his expeditions which Dr. Uhle himself is a small pot with an elaborate red design of conventional ornamentation, interspersed crude animal forms. It is as bright and clear it came from the potter's last year. An clock of the 1860 period which stood beside Uhle's mantelpiece in his furnished room looked old and battered. Yet this jar, according to best knowledge on the subject, is at least 2000 and had probably been buried in a tomb turies before the Christian era opened.

implements carrying heraldic and conventional ornaments are believed to have been used in this rite—a sort of prehistoric "last spike" ceremonial, as it were. They made statues, idols and gods, with a skill as great, at least, as that of the early Egyptians, with whom they may have been contemporaneous. And they were evidently a race of warriors.

One of the most curious facts discovered by Dr. Uhle concerning this unknown people is that they understood how to trepan the skull for diseases of the head and brain. Among his collections are a number of skulls, many of them compressed after the fashion of some tribes of North American Indians. But among the skulls known to belong to this period are some bored in places, and still others have triangular pieces taken out of the bone. Examination shows that these incisions were made during life, and the only possible conclusion is that it was a surgical operation. If they understood this it is only reasonable to infer that their medicine men had more than a little knowledge of surgery. As. Dr. Uhle remarked, in showing these skulls, "The ancient races were not quite such fools as we moderns are accustomed to suppose."

Very Ancient.

New as the theory is, and new as is the study of this race, Dr. Uhle admits that any determination of their age must be almost guess work. That their dominion ended at least 2000 years ago he believes to be a certainty. At one point in his excavations he delved under some ruins of the Incas, and found beneath them four strata of ruins, each belonging to a separate and distinct civilization which had preceded that last outburst of Peruvian nationality. In other words, above the ruins of that great old civilization which he found at the bottom of the pile, four types of civilization, four dominant races had lived and flourished and died out. It is enough to make men and women who talk of dominant races stop and think. Making the conservative allowance of 400 years for each of the races represented in the mass, it brings the death of the earlier race back to 1600 years before 1600 A. D., the approximate date of the Spanish conquest. But the probability is that the periods were much longer; some of them, indeed, may have extended over thousands of years.

That the disappearance of this race as the ruling power in Peru antedated our era by many centuries, and that their appearance stretches back to an antiquity beyond all conjecture is the belief of Dr. Uhle, although he is not yet ready to announce that belief as a scientific theory. In the first place, he does not believe it probable that any one of these strata of civilization lasted for a period so brief as four centuries, considering how slow is the movement of races in the early stages of civilization. In the second place, he has found in the earliest and oldest of these ruins wood, cut and fashioned by man, but petrified by the action of time. Some of the greater towns, which show signs of having been agricultural communities in their time, stand in regions absolutely devoid of vegetation—barren deserts. In other words, since they rose and fell the climate of the region has had time to change.

Compared With Egypt.

Possibly, and even probably, this civilization was at one time the most advanced upon the earth. There is fair reason to believe that it was older than the first civilization of Egypt; that when the Egyptians, possessors of the first and earliest civilization of which we have record, began to leave off hunting and to till the soil, these nameless people were already farmers and irrigators, dwelt in towns and administered justice under a tribal government. Of this, there is no proof as yet, and while this may have been the earliest civilization, it was yet the cradle of modern enlightenment. In its progress went slowly, so that there was little to choose between the civilization of the Incastic period and that of this earliest time; but Egypt gave her light to other nations, who carried it on.

Perhaps the greatest bar to progress among all the early peoples of Peru, certainly the greatest bar to our study of their remains, was the fact that the art of writing, even to the remotest symbolization of thought through a crude picture, was unknown to them. The savage of the North American plains, a savage many times lower in civilization, can make a pretty fair record of his deeds or those of his tribe by crude drawings upon skin. The Peruvians, from the earliest times down to those of the Incas, never caught the idea that events can be recorded. Pictures they drew and with a certain skill, but so far as anyone can determine, they had no significance as records. Had they possessed even the hieroglyphics of the Egyptians, a whole national history might be added to the world.

As it is, they have vanished without a trace. Not one race, but many, have come and ruled through centuries and died out; their heroes have compelled men and gathered them for battle; their poets have sung; their captains conquered; their kings made laws, and of them all there are left but skulls and ruins. The [illegible] babe that was born in one of those adobe dwellings and died before it spoke its first word is as well re[illegible] to immortality as the greatest King, the [illegible] captain, the sweetest poet, the most puissant lord of all those races and all those centuries.

Revelations of a Cemetery.

Dr. Uhle first conceived his theory of the earlier race of Peru and the adjacent republics while making excavations in an old cemetery twenty miles from Lima, the present metropolis of the republic. Here the natives of the country have laid their dead away for countless ages. It was already ancient in the time when the Spaniards came. As he dug down farther and farther he found changes in the manner of burial, the character of the implements left with the dead and even in the formation of bones and skulls. At the very bottom among the oldest remains that had escaped the dissolution of time, he found thousands of graves showing implements, modes of burial and types of skull unfamiliar and differing from those of any known tribal division. This discovery became the keynote of his later explorations. For over two years he traveled through the country from the seacoast to the highest habitable portion of the mountains, wherever there were known to be ruins. He explored graveyards; he dug below the foundations of old, crumbling towns. And the result is his announcement that in the dim ages before the commencement of our era, perhaps before the opening of our most ancient history, Peru was inhabited by a semicivilized race that held it for many centuries and then vanished entirely, and that between the downfall of this race and the rise of the Incas at least four other nations conquered and held sway.

Peru, in the centuries of these great changes, had her eras of bloody war and calm peace. When the curtain rises with the nameless race in possession, the times seem to have been stormy. Men were fighting and were building huge walls and fortresses. Among the succeeding periods, there must have been at least one long time of peace. The dwellings and towns of that period are built without regard to their defense. Most of them stand with high eminences towering above them, just where an enemy could reach them most easily in case of trouble. No warlike people, no people with whom war was even a tradition, could have built in this fashion, and the inference is that there reigned several centuries of peace, in which men laid aside their strife. The awakening of such a people to war and strife—what a theme for an epic!

Dr. Uhle Well Qualified.

Dr. Uhle, who has ranged South America for seven years in the interest of science, is a German and a graduate of the University of Berlin. For that institution he first took up the work of South American exploration. Later, he was engaged by the University of Pennsylvania, and for it he made a large collection which is now in the museum of that institution. By the time that he had begun his work for the University of California he had wandered all over the southern part of South America, studying the ruins of the countries and learning the Indian dialects. In all that time he has dwelt mainly out of doors, taking the perils and privations as they came, and he is himself a curious mixture of the hard-headed, hard-studying German scholar and hardy explorer.

Not once or twice, but many times, he has crossed the Andes, and in his last venture he lived for nearly a year at an elevation of over two miles above sea level. At one time he spent several months hunting for a lost tribe of Indians which was recorded by the early Spanish explorers, and which he believed to be the remnant of one of the races that had dominated Peru before the time of the Incas. He believed that they were located in one of the highest spurs of the mountains, and he explored to a height of 17,000 feet above sea level in his effort to find them. In this he was unsuccessful; he discovered only graves—the race had thinned out to its end.

The final dispostion of the 140 cases of relics and specimens of ancient Peru brought back by this expedition is very doubtful. The University of California has at present no museum. Neither is there any provision made for one in the present plans. There is another university expedition working in Egypt, delving among the ruins of a people who lived in the time of these ancient Peruvians and worked out their own civilization on the other edge of the world. When they return the problem will be doubly embarrassing. One of the first additions to the present building plans will probably be a permanent museum to house these collections and the others which the university may make from time to time through the work of its archeological expeditions.

HUMAN STATURE.

IT HAS INCREASED INSTEAD OF DECREASED THROUGH PAST CENTURIES.

[Chicago Tribune:] Prof. Krause of Berlin has come forward with an assurance to the world that in spite of its civilizations, cigarettes, and candies, the human race is holding its own, and more, on the scales and under the measuring bar. He says that if the average Egyptian of today were mummified and dried for 4000 years, he would not be any shorter than those canned in the time of Rameses II.

"School-going, coddling, and other refinements of civilization may have an injurious effect on the modern human fiber," said Prof. Krause, "but this is more than counterbalanced by the better foods and better cooking of this twentieth century."

Thus, one by one, the poetry, romanticism, folk-lore, supersitition, and even the commonplace aphorisms of a dead past are going the way of science—and especially of German science. Even the homely old assurance that "there were giants in those days" is to be sacrificed on this altar of German philosophy. Scott's mighty figure of the Douglass dwindles, and only a little time is needed for some German scientist to declare that Goliath of Gath could have been knocked out by Terry McGovern in one round.

At the same time, however, Prof. Krause is such a flattering iconoclast, both to modern men and to modern cooks, that the world must be pleased to know that his discoveries are backed by many other anthropologists. His assertions as to comparative statures have been accepted, generally, and Perschel long ago decided that good food, in plenty, had an appreciable effect on the size of men. Sergi has admitted nearly as much, but at the same time he has said that mere stature does not count for much as against cranial measurements, for instance.

Missing Link Was Small.

In the far-off Island of Java, where the pithecanthropus once throve on breadfruit and bananas and left his skeleton as that of the "missing link," Sergi has said that the creature was only about 5 feet 6 inches in height, though with a cranial capacity double that of the ourang-outang and chimpanzee. And yet the famous hand-made Cardiff giant had a great run with Barnum's constituents.

When it comes to mere stature the United States has a showing that is not to be clouded by any other continent. The average height of men in Kentucky and Tennessee has been put at 5 feet 8 inches, ranging in order of height from this through Indiana and Ohio, 5 feet 7½ inches; Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, 5 feet 7 inches; New England, 5 feet 6½ inches; and New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, 5 feet 6 inches.

These for averages only. Yet Prof. Krause recalls that the Pretorian Guards, famous in their day, averaged only 5 feet 7 inches in stature. Further, as to his own German kinsmen, he says that there are indications that the early inhabitants of the Rhine country were not as tall as are the modern Germans.

As to these Pretorian averages of 5 feet 7 inches Krause says that no modern guard of picked men would be tolerated in any modern country if they averaged so low as this. As to the soldiery of Great Britain, at least, Gould has attested to this statement. Gould has shown that in every million men measured for modern British military service there will be ninety-five men of tremendous stature. Out of this million men the records will show:

47 men above....................	6 feet 5 inches
22 men above....................	6 feet 6½ inches
11 men above....................	6 feet 6¾ inches
7 men above....................	6 feet 7½ inches
6 men above....................	6 feet 8 1-3 inches
2 men above....................	6 feet 9 2-3 inches

Bearing upon these figures, too, is the fact that no man under six feet is eligible to the British Life Guards, thus making the average of that body considerably above six feet, and at least six inches above the average stature of the Pretorian Guards.

With reference to average statures in Europe it is found that the British natives exceed those of any other nationality on that continent; in the Scandinavian peninsula individuals are found who exceed the British limit, but the average for that northland is comparatively low—lower than in any section of the United States.

Ordinarily, looking to Northern Europe for a high average in statures, the disposition of the layman is to look upon the black and brown races as inferior to physical type. Yet in East Africa among the Somalis and Gallas blacks a somewhat limited series of measurements have shown these tribes to average, respectively, 5 feet 6 inches and 5 feet 9 inches. Of the Malay races those of the Malay peninsula and of the island of Tahiti rank above the East African blacks, standing close to a six-foot average.

As the food proposition and its effect on the statures of peoples, Sergi has observed that this is especially true in America, where the native seldom completes his physical growth until he is 30 years old. The same authority states that in the case of immigrants from the Mediterranean countries where the average stature is low their descendants, born and reared in the United States, begin to show a marked increase in stature within three generations. One scientist has gone so far as to say that the comparative dryness of the air in the United States tends to this increase in statures. Perschel says it is food only. He says:

"That good, abundant food promotes bodily size is shown by the universally more portly figures of the Polynesian chiefs in the South Sea Islands. Similiarly among the Kaffirs six men of a chieftain's family averaged 1830 millimeters, or 110 more than is otherwise found among the Bantu negroes of Southern Africa. The strikingly low stature of the bushmen on the southern edge of the Kalahari may likewise be attributed to bad nourishment, for Chapman found their stature greater in the north where game is more plentiful."

Sergi not only is more conservative than this in every way, but he takes pains to say that stature is not especially essential, anyhow. Of the general subject he says:

"Ripley explains the greater stature of the English and some other peoples as partly due to advantageous external conditions that are a product of the social environment. I do not dissent from this opinion, but I believe that the sociological factor alone is not sufficient for the formation of stature; we have to take into consideration other biological conditions, external and internal. . . . Certainly, stature is a character which cannot be passed over in the classification of races; but it is not a primary character, which can destroy the value of other characters which already possess an unquestionable importance; it can serve only as a means of subdividing races and sub-races."

Chicago physicians generally accept Prof. Krause's findings, both as to the increase of the statures of men and the causes therefor. Yet they say that, as a rule, Americans overeat.

"And," says a well-known neurologist, "all that we are gaining in stature will hardly reconcile us to that which we are losing in logic and in the tendency to drift away in the direction of any exaggerated cult, no matter how ridiculous."

OUR LITTLE LUXURIES.

The Federal revenue from chewing gum is more than $350,000 a year, and is collected through internal revenue taxes. The theatrical license fees collected in the same way amount to $47,000, the taxes on bowling alleys amount to $44,000 and the taxes collected from circuses were $11,744 last year.

The circus is an established form of American amusement and the disparities of the revenue from it in the various States are a source of much surprise. The State which pays into the Federal treasury the largest revenue from circus taxes is the Sunflower State of Kansas, with a total last year of $1200.

Iowa paid $929; Nebraska, $800; Missouri, $675; Illinois, $640; Pennslvania, $550; Ohio, $525; Michigan, $490; New York, $470; West Virginia, $425, and Maryland, $415.

A CALIFORNIA OASIS.

MARVELOUS DEVELOPMENT OF THE DESERT BY ARTESIAN WELLS.

By a Special Contributor.

THEY are solving a problem which several generations of men have regarded as insoluble; they are redeeming a desert and establishing well-to-do homes where only the jackrabbit, the coyote and the horned toad were wont to find a precarious habitat. The men and women who are accomplishing this feat are settlers in the Coachella Valley, on the great sandy waste of the Colorado Basin. Twenty-seven miles from the western rim of the desert and 130 miles from the Colorado River, is in process of formation a veritable oasis. The Coachella Valley is nine miles broad and about sixteen miles long, extending northwest and southeast, and traversed longitudinally by the Southern Pacific Railway. The well-known stations of Indio, Coachella and Thermal may help to identify the locality. The floor of the valley is from sixty-six to one hundred and twenty feet below sea level, and it slopes uniformly to the southeast at about ten feet to the mile—making, to the eye, an apparent dead level. On the north and west a mountain range rises to an elevation of 5000 to 10,000 feet, and on the east is another chain with an elevation of 3000 feet. On the southeast the plain stretches in unbroken monotony toward the Salton Basin.

The first artesian water developed in this supposedly-arid belt was in wells bored by the railway company along its line, at Thermal and other points, many years ago. At Thermal a flow of several hundred miner's inches was secured. There are now splendid flowing wells at Indio, Coachella, Thermal and Walters.

The First Experiment.

In April, 1900, the Rector brothers undertook the rather hazardous (and some would have considered it foolhardy) venture of sinking for water on the dry Coachella Plain, some four miles east of Indio. They drove down a two-inch pipe, and on the first of November following, were rewarded by an artesian flow. The water-bearing stratum was penetrated at a depth of 550 feet, and the pressure was so great as to produce five miner's inches from the two-inch opening. This pressure is thirty-five pounds to the square inch—only five pounds less than that in the lower hydrants of the Los Angeles water system. The success in this first well stimulated other ventures, and it was not long until there was a regular furore for water development in the desert valley. At the present time there are no less than nine or ten boring rigs in operation, and such facility has been acquired that, in some cases, seven or eight hours' work brings the desired flow. There are now over one hundred successful wells in the valley, most of which range in aperture from three and one-quarter to four and one-half inches. These wells have developed the fact that there is an alluvial deposit all the way down, lying in fourteen distinct strata, in the course of 500 to 540 feet. The water-bearing stratum is coarse gravel from fifteen to sixty-five feet in thickness.

Clearing Begun.

Thus fortified with a water supply, Rector brothers began, in November, 1900, to clear the native brush from a tract of twenty-five acres, which in the course of the next three months, they planted to barley, wheat, cantaloupes, watermelons, and sugar beets. The crops were varied, for experimental purposes, on about two acres of land and the remaining twenty-three acres was put into cantaloupes for a substantial crop. The land proved wonderfully fertile, and all of the crops did well, coming to maturity in a phenomenally short time. The reason for this is obvious. At a depth of two feet below the surface the ground holds a temperature of 72 deg.; the water developed from the wells is 74 deg., thus making a veritable hotbed of the irrigated land. It is a matter of astonishment to most people that these desert lands should prove so fertile. The evidence of the artesian wells, however, shows that the soil is a succession of alluvial deposits to the depth of 500 feet. In its wild state even it was capable of producing a dense growth of arrow weed, yellow sage and mesquite. The last-named grows to the size of a large tree. For untold ages the soil has accumulated humus from decayed vegetable matter and drift. Four and a half feet below the surface there is permanent moisture, and, at twelve to twenty-five feet, a good pumping supply may be secured. The entire basin seems to have a saturated sub-stratum, due probably to seepage from the Colorado River, or underflow from the surrounding mountains.

A Good Crop of Barley.

The soil itself is very fertile. A small tract was flooded by the Rector brothers in November, and sown to barley. Without further irrigation it yielded in the following March a crop amounting to three and a half tons of hay (baled) to the acre. Sugar beets planted on the 28th of January were ready for shipment the first of May. These were the first sugar beets produced in the desert, and they seem to have demonstrated a peculiar adaptability of that locality for beet growing. The roots were long and symmetrical and ran as high as 18 per cent. in sugar. The crop produced was at the rate of twenty tons to the acre. Experts from Chino and Oxnard pronounced them phenomenal.

Wheat matured in four months from the seed. Cantaloupes, planted the last day of February, furnished fruit for shipment June 10, and the season continued until July 18. Cabbage of the very best were also grown in an unusually short time. Two and a quarter acres of watermelons produced three carloads of fruit, which netted the growers $517. They were sold to W. C. Patterson & Co. of this city, and were brought in to supply the early watermelon market of Southern California. Millet sown the first of June, yielded four crops in succession. Sorghum seems in like manner to be almost a perennial plant, as successive crops may be cut from the same roots. Alfalfa may be cut every three weeks, and it yields tremendously.

It is believed that oranges may be successfully grown on the oasis. A few seedling trees planted near the station as an experiment years ago, were not seriously injured by the heavy frosts of the present winter. They yield an exceptionally sweet and fine-grained fruit. It is probable also that pineapples might prove a successful crop.

Good Profit on Cantaloupes.

The twenty-three acres planted in cantaloupes netted the growers $130 per acre. W. H. Woods of Chicago, who has made a specialty of handling cantaloupes during the past seven years, stated that the desert crop beat the record in his experience, both in marketable quality and in earliness. Nearly all of the crop was shipped East and a large share of it was absorbed by the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and the White Star line of steamers. The first cantaloupes shipped East netted the growers $1.86 per crate.

Quite a little colony was drawn together as if by magic, and the united plantings of the first season amounted to sixty-four acres in cantaloupes and fifty-six acres in grain, alfalfa and other products. There were twenty-seven individual growers, who formed the Coachella Producers' Association for mutual assistance and protection. From the sixty-four acres in cantaloupes, this association shipped twenty-three carloads of fruit. Each carload carried 360 crates, and each crate contained forty-five cantaloupes, so that the entire crop might be calculated, if anybody takes sufficient interest to make the figures. The season was short and early, the last shipment being on the 20th of July—just about the time when the California Coast cantaloupe was beginning to show yellow streaks through its green rind.

The Coachella association realized top prices for its early fruit; that goes without saying; otherwise they could not have afforded to ship by express all the way to New York City. The last shipment went away July 20, as stated, and by the 27th of the same month the accounts were closed and the producers had their settlements. The express company secured $11,000 out of the season's transactions, and the growers still had $10,000 to divide among themselves. On thirteen carloads of watermelons, shipped mostly to the Pacific Coast, the growers netted over $1700.

The Early-bird Advantage.

The whole secret of this profitable production lies, of course, in the fact that the desert farmers are able to capture the very earliest market. Their crops mature at least a month earlier than those of the Salt River Valley, near Phoenix, Ariz., and the Salt River crops are at least a month earlier than those of Southern California. Thus the desert farmers are in and out of the market before we begin.

The in-rush of settlers was very rapid. Much of the land was taken up under the homestead or desert land laws, the latter at $1.25 per acre, and some was purchased from the railroad company. Rector brothers satisfied themselves with securing nearly 1000 acres, of which they have since sold 240 acres. Some of the land which was taken up a little more than a year ago at $1.25 to $2.25 an acre, has since been sold at $25 to $55 per acre. Much of it is now held as high as $100 per acre and some special tracts could not be purchased for twice that figure. This is making money pretty rapidly, and it almost leaves successful speculation in the shade.

One tract of 640 acres of State school lands, which was purchased a year ago at $1.25 per acre, was sold, six months ago, at $25 an acre. Upon this tract six wells have been bored, and a colony of Seventh-Day Adventists is to be established thereon.

Success Through Struggle.

Thus closes the record of the first season on this formative oasis in the Colorado Desert. Yet not half the story has been told. Of the heroic struggle and self-sacrifices, the triumph over hard conditions, the disappointments and unexpected backsets that had to be met—the half can never be told. But the aggregate result was a great success. In a single season a hitherto worthless desert was redeemed and made productive; not only productive, but highly profitable.

When the time came to plan the campaign for the second season (the coming spring and early summer,) the Coachella Valley Producers' Association went at the business in a systematic way. The association required its members to "sign up" for the acreage which they expect to cultivate in various crops, agreeing thereby to market the produce through the general organization. In this way about 800 acres of cantaloupes and 150 acres of watermelons have been pledged. About 500 acres more will be planted by farmers who are not in the association. Besides these plantings, there will be a considerable acreage devoted to alfalfa, barley, a variety of root crops and garden truck for home consumption, and some of the settlers propose to go into the planting of grapes and pears on quite an extensive scale. Incidentally it may be stated that grapes produced on Mr. Durbrow's place at Indio last year, were ready for market June 1, and brought 12 cents per pound. Even the latest varieties of grapes grown there were out of market before the earliest Los Angeles varieties came in. The shipping season at Coachella is expected to begin about June 1 and extend to August 1, covering sixty very active days. During this time it is expected that eight carloads of produce will be dispatched each day—five carloads going East and three to the Pacific Coast. Arrangements have been made with the Southern Pacific Railway Company to hitch these cars to the regular passenger trains and send them through on express time.

A Demand for the Crop.

The association announced in advance that, on November 1, 1901, it would make contracts for the forthcoming season's crop. An Argument for Irrigation.

The chief service which it re[illegible] kind was to furnish a roadbed for a [illegible] railway line. This service necessitated the [illegible] a few people as agents, telegraph operators [illegible] hands along the line. And that was all, [illegible] Durbrow, in connection with his great salt [illegible] made a little experimental plantation on the [illegible] basin.

The Possibilities.

Look at the tremendous output that is [illegible] these lands, when they are generally re[illegible] tion. CHAPTER I.—THE CRIME.

LATE in the summer of 1879, the north-bound stage from Maricopa Station, on the Southern Pacific Railroad, was stopped at midnight within six miles of its starting point by a solitary highwayman, and relieved of a Wells, Fargo & Co. treasure box. It was a dark, cloudy night, threatening rain; and the stage, as it chanced, carried no passengers. The driver, yielding to the persuasion of a double-barreled shotgun, held in presumably desperate hands, having no choice but to obey the power behind the gun, reached under the seat for the box, and, as he dropped it over the side, was ordered to drive on, which he did, without delay.

In the trial that took place some weeks afterward, at Phoenix, the county seat, it transpired that the box, which had contained $14,000 in bills of large denominations, was consigned to a gentleman in Prescott, Ariz., who was negotiating the purchase of certain mining properties in the vicinity of that frontier mining town.

On parting with the box, the driver whipped up his horses, and, reaching Phoenix, twenty-five miles distant, lost no time in notifying the Sheriff. He was unable to give any clue to the robber, except that he was a tall, slim man and had a sort of stammer or impediment in his speech. The only words the man had spoken were: "Hold up, there!"—as he stepped out of the cover—"Throw down the box; and be damned quick about it!" Then, when his request was complied with, he uttered the single forcible ejaculation, "Git!"—with a wave of his gun barrel.

It was 7:30 a.m. when the Sheriff was notified. By noon he was on the scene of the robbery, accompanied by a deputy and an Indian trailer he had pressed into service while crossing the Gila River Indian reservation, midway on his route. There lay the ravished express box, and beside it the ax with which it had been shattered; but as the rain had been falling in torrents since sunrise, it was impossible to determine the direction taken by the robber; or to discover whether he had made his escape on foot or on horseback.

This portion of Arizona is essentially a desert. There is absolutely no water on the desolate stretch of nearly two hundred miles traversed by the railroad between Yuma and Tucson. A fugitive dare not go northward; for he would then strike the settlements on the Gila River; while to the south the glaring desert extends far beyond the Sonora line, eighty miles distant. Isolated peaks of naked rock and groups of low, barren hills dot the monotonous landscape; and at vast distances groves of long-suffering mesquite and ironwood trees, or gaunt armies of giant cactus mock the fainting fugitive seeking shelter from the pitiless tropical sun. But even shelter is useless here, for he dare not stop to hide; he must not delay an hour in reaching water. The terrors of the desert that menace him are more to be dreaded than the stern arm of the law; and he is compelled to seek the haunts of men, and take his chances of discovery.

The Sheriff was well aware of this, but he saw the rocky crags of the Maricopa Mountain Range, two miles west of the road, and he knew that a man could hide for weeks in those deep gorges, provided he were lucky enough to find a water hole. So he dispatched thither his deputy and the Indian trailer; while he himself spurred his horse toward Maricopa, six miles away.

In the West, the news center—I had almost said the business center—of every frontier settlement, large or small, is the saloon. To that institution every newcomer gravitates; while every male resident of the community drops in at least once a day, "to see what's going on." The bar of the Maricopa Hotel was no exception to the rule, and there the Sheriff, by a few pointed inquiries, learned that a lone prospector "punching" a packed burro, had come in about noon; and being wet through, had succeeded in enlisting the sympathies of the barkeeper to the extent of a free drink of whisky. Later, he had succeeded in finding a purchaser for his burro and outfit entire, and had made out a bill of sale—borrowing a sheet of paper from the bar—to which he had signed his name as "Bat Wade." He had also volunteered the information that he had been prospecting in the Maricopa Mountains near-by, camping at a water hole that had given out and forced him to move.

The barkeeper pointed the man out, playing a game of "freeze out," at an adjacent table; where he was doing a good deal of talking, and punctuating the pauses in the play by frequent orders for drinks. The fact that this ci-devant prospector had sold his entire outfit at such short notice aroused the suspicions of the Sheriff, and, as the man was remarkably tall and slim, and also met the stage driver's description of the highwayman by a marked hesitation in his speech, that official kept a close eye on him for the remainder of the day, and arrested him that night, just as he had comfortably (?) ensconced himself on the brakebeam of the west-bound passenger train.

In Phoenix the prisoner was confronted by the stage driver, who swore that he recognized his voice, and when four greenbacks, each of the denomination of $50, were found concealed in his socks, the chain of evidence was considered complete. The greenbacks were closely wrapped, two around each ankle, and the lapping ends secured with a pin; then the socks were pulled up over them and kept in place by garters. The prisoner seemed in no way disconcerted at this discovery; and only grinned when a bill of similar denomination was found folded lengthwise and inserted under the sweatband of his black felt hat. He claimed that he had carried his money in that manner for several months; and that he had secured bills of large denomination for that very purpose before leaving San Francisco in the spring.

Throughout the trial he conducted himself with an air of conscious innocence, that made a favorable impression on many of the spectators; and there were not those lacking who asserted that the evidence was purely circumstantial, and far from conclusive. As to his identity, it was claimed that there were doubtless a number of individuals in the country who were tall and slim, and at the same time happened to have an impediment in their speech. And as to the well-concealed greenbacks, what more natural than a man roughing it in a frontier country should do his best to conceal his money on his person?

Then, too, if the man were guilty, what had he done with the money? If the $250 found on him were part of the stolen funds, what had become of the remaining $13,750? He was apprehended while leaving the Territory, said the dissenters; while had he buried the treasure, he would have been much more likely to have obtained work somewhere near by, and waited till the authorities had ceased to look for it.

On the other hand, he refused to give any information as to the locality of the water hole, where, according to his story, he had camped while prospecting, a fact that seemed highly suspicious. On this point he was perfectly safe, for on account of the unusually heavy rain that had fallen on the morning after the robbery, the trailers had been completely baffled and could find no traces of recent occupation anywhere within reasonable distance of the road. He had evidently left his camp, if he had a camp, some time before the rain commenced, for he got into Maricopa while it was still raining. His silence on this apparently simple matter had its effect on the jury, and "Bat Wade," as he styled himself, was found guilty of highway robbery, and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary at Yuma.

As for the money, no trace of it was ever found, and, although the most strenuous efforts were made to trap the prisoner into betraying its whereabouts, he stoutly and sullenly maintained his innocence of the crime.

CHAPTER II.—NINE YEARS LATER—DEATH OF CURLEY.

In the summer of 1888, I was preparing to close out a moribund forwarding business at old Maricopa. Time had brought changes in that little community since 1879, and the station was shortly to be abandoned for a new Maricopa, five miles farther east, where a branch line had recently been built to Phoenix and Salt River Valley. The population—never excessive—had dwindled down to a station agent and assistant, an express and stage agent, a Western Union operator, a boniface and myself; also two Mexican corral men and two Chinamen cooks; or, as the Western Union man, who was our wag, described it: "Six humans and four invertebrates."

It must be confessed that a wag was needed in that community, for I often used to think that there monotony had reached its height—or had been reduced to its lowest terms—whichever sounds best—or worst. Here is the pattern of the daily programme: One hour after daybreak of roseate sky and silver-fretted, purple mirage—then the sun shot up from behind the self-same painted mountain, and glared fierce and malignant, for ten hours or more; while the hot wind, furnace-breathed, kept piling and unpiling and repiling the blistering sands about the few unpainted buildings. Then a crimson west, a short, sweet chill of twilight and a blue-black, star-lit dome, guiltless of a cloud during the twenty-four hours. The restless wind played on the telegraph wires all night through; now a soft aeolian requiem—now the vex humana cry of some lost musical soul.

One night, as usual, we threw down our whist hands at the distant rumble of the train, and adjourned in a body, from the hotel card-room to the platform, to see "No. 2" roll in from the west. When it had come and gone, "good-nights" were drawled, and we separated to seek our cots. It was midnight, and the moon was at the full, hanging in midsky overhead and flooding the dim, mysterious desert with her silvery sheen. As I strolled listlessly westward along the track toward my quarters, listening to the mocking bicker of the coyote far across the plain, a faint "hullo" came down the wind, as if from the end of the siding, some fifty yards distant. I quickened my pace, and was soon standing over the form of a man huddled up against the switch stand, in a position that suggested at once that he had been cast there by a passing train. As I leaned over him I saw he was a young man—hardly more than a boy—with light curls gleaming on a white forehead, and wide-open blue eyes gazing earnestly up at me as he spoke.

He spoke before I did. "Straighten me out some, pardner; I can't move no part of me."

Taking him, gently as I could, by the shoulder, I drew him out in a more comfortable position, resting his head on the end of one of the ties. I was then for running back to fetch a baggage truck, on which I could move him to a house where he could be taken care of. But he begged me not to leave him; as he feared the coyotes, who were now howling on every side of us.

"They're mighty quick to smell out an animal or a man that's wounded or helpless; an' I'm goin' to croak pretty quick, anyway; so don't bother to move me. I can talk all right, an' I've got somethin' I want to tell. I know I'm done for, 'cause I don't feel any pain, an' I can't move. I guess my back's broke."

He appeared to be in a nervous hurry, as though he feared he would not have time to tell what he had on his mind. He said he had been careless in getting off the brakebeam, and had not waited for the train to slow down sufficiently. As he had jumped from under the train something had struck him and thrown him against the switch stand, and, after a moment of unconsciousness, he awoke to find himself helpless. I saw that there was nothing I could do for him, so I sat on the ground beside him, while he clasped my hand—clutching it, at times, with the force of a drowning man—pouring forth all the time a torrent of speech, in which he told me of a hundred boyish reminiscences and ambitions. It was very sad to look into his mind through words, and see his passionate desire for life, possibilities of the future, fighting against knowledge that in a few minutes he must forever out of the struggle.

He was most anxious not to be considered a tramp or hobo. "Don't think I'm a hobo, ain't got any folks an' I'm just seein' the world before I settle down to work. But I don't money on railroad fares. Mother died last Seattle, and she was all I had. I've been to lar, and I can find plenty of jobs, soon's I which is the best part of the country. But I gettin'—I'm going' to croak; an' I won't An' me only 17. It don't seem's if I'd had a Somehow, I don't feel's if I was quittin' for must be some more comin', som'ere else."

His voice died away in a sort of gasp; and grew limp in mine. I knew he had only fainted, at top speed to my room—not more than feet away—where I snatched a flask of pitcher of water from the table, and a pillow from the bed; and was at his side in less minutes. He had come to, and reached for I knelt over him.

"You're all right, pardner! I thought you'd gone an' left me alone. Don't go"— hand convulsively—"I won't stay long."

I gave him a long drink of water and a sip and, with the folded blanket and the pillow, back for him against the tie, and drew him sitting position leaning back on them.

"You're all right, pardner!" he said again; I must hurry, for the deadness is creepin' up I won't last long. Put your hand in my pocket, an' take out a letter an' pocketbook

I did so, and he told me to put them away pocket, to look at afterward.

"There's a fiver an' two plunks in the that'll do to bury me with. I'm glad I had Now I'll tell you where I got that letter your pocket. I was stealin' a ride up to Sacra week, an' a mean brakey put me off the train; walkin' to the next station. A train passed from yon way, an' pretty soon after that I man lyin' on the track, cut up awful. He dead long, for the body was warm—what was I guess he'd been ridin' on the brakes, 'nd 'nd dropped off the train that just passed couldn't do nothin' for him but pull him and leave him for the section hands to they'd found me, pard, if you hadn't a come— his pockets—the ones I could get at—an' but that letter. And when I read it next started right back to 'Frisco to find my name's Shorty Red. We were friends up and he's all the friend I've got.

"The letter was wrote by a man that was in the Yuma pen; an' he wrote it to an old tells how he held up a stage, long ago, in didn't hold it up—I couldn't make out which. there's a lot of swag buried somewhere near 'nd the letter's got a map, showin' how to guess that bloke I found cut up on the track, letter in his pocket, was the pard a-comin' swag."

His voice was fast growing weaker, and his came with greater difficulty. I gave him low of whisky, and he lay back in silence minutes before speaking again.

"Shorty was workin' round the docks in threw up the job when I showed him the letter, came down to Yuma together. Sometimes the same train, 'nd sometimes he'd get put off, next train behind me. He ain't very fly 'nd he don't like to ride the brakes. He again just as we was leavin' Yuma, but he'll next train."

I told him the next train from Yuma was and would be along at noon. He remained several minutes. Then he drew a short sigh,

"You'll have to tell him good-by for me; here to meet him. But I know you'll tell said, and treat him square."

He said this looking up at me with trustful felt a lump rising in my throat. And then:

"Pard, I told Shorty we'd divvy up the swag half, 'nd I want you to go find it with him, my half for yourself, and give him the You'll do the square by him?"

I promised him that his wishes should be and that if he so desired, Shorty should have money, and that I would aid the boy in securing Curley insisted that half of it should be mine, I need not be afraid to take it, as there was man who had any claim on it.

He was silent for a while after this, but his wide open and full of thought, and in the bright light I could note every change on his features; he clung to my hand as if it were his only Once he indicated the tall forms of the giant ing around us, grim and spectral in the shadow, and asked what they were. When I told him a species of cactus, and that the Indians "sahuara," he remembered that that was the in the letter, and that some of them were show the way to the buried money.

Poor Curley! He was not afraid of death. plenty of courage, but he did not want to die. out too many attractions for his adventurous spirit. Young and strong and full of health— fact of living was a joy to him; and it was hard to reconcile himself to the idea of leaving it all. ing him there in the silence, I knew he was picture to himself the great unknown toward knew he was rapidly drifting. He did not and I do not know how long I sat there in when I was recalled to myself by feeling his denly relax in mine. Leaning over him, I gone. His eyes stared glassy in the moonlight, and there was a set, solemn look on his young face.

I pressed down his eyelids, for it seemed as though the bright moonlight was hurting his eyes. But a moment afterward, when I had wrapped him carefully in the blanket, all but his head, I noticed that his eyes had come partly open again, giving him that horrible look of being half-dead. It did not seem kind to leave him there alone, with his eyes staring at the cruel stars. And then I remembered that I had heard of the custom of placing pennies on the eyes of the dead, to keep them closed until they stiffen. I went through my pockets, but found no coins, and then I thought of Curley's pocketbook, and of the "two plunks" he had mentioned. I found the two dollars and placed them on the dead boy's eyes, and, covering him with the blanket, I ran over to my room and brought a lantern, which I placed at his head to keep away coyotes, and then I left him there alone in the waning moonlight.

CHAPTER III.—BAT WADE'S WILL.

It was now past 4 in the morning, and, as I turned in at the door of my little one-room cottage, I paused to note "dawn's pale specter" in the eastern sky. I had no notion of going to sleep, and even had I been so inclined, there was that letter of Bat Wade's in my pocket, the very thought of which was enough to banish all drowsiness. It is not every day that one falls heir to a buried treasure. I had been occupied before with anxiety for the dying boy, but now, as I locked the door behind me, the whole delicious import of the situation came over me with a rush. All the tales of the discoveries of Capt. Kid's buried treasures were to be outdone. I was young and foolish then, and, looking back on it now, I really believe I enjoyed the romance of the idea even more than the thought of the tangible results. Stealthily, on tiptoe, I pulled down the curtains of the windows and then slipped off my shoes, though I knew there was not a soul awake within thirty miles of me; and then I donned my pajamas and lay down on the cot, to apply myself to the delectable task of reading Bat Wade's will. There was no envelope, and the letter was merely addressed to "Friend Bob;" so it happens that to this day I know no other name for the unfortunate individual whose untimely death was so timely for me, even though it had led to the death of an innocent boy. I had no more right to live than those three who died in order that I might possess that treasure, and I suppose the "gentlemen of the cloth" would explain the matter by saying it was one of the inscrutable ways of Providence. The letter was written on four pages of a double sheet of foolscap, and gave evidence that its writer, however lacking in moral qualities he may have been, was a man of more or less education and perhaps a modicum of refinement. As it is of the first importance in this history, I give it here, copied word for word from the original, which lies before me:

"YUMA PRISON, July 4, 1888.

"Friend Bob: I believe you are the only man in the world who remembers that I am yet alive. I have no relatives but a brother, who has never been a brother to me, and would be mightily relieved to hear that I was dead. Yes, you're the only one of all the millions of men outside these prison walls that have held me these last nine years, with whom I can claim any connection, and I'm going to make you my heir. As you know, I have dragged out nearly nine years in this hole, and another year would set me free. Free to wander over the world with a passport that would bring me royal welcome everywhere in the haunts of men. Ah! I have a sweet incentive to wait that one year! But—worse luck—I cannot wait.

"The doctor here, who is a good fellow, and knows his business—if any doctor really does—tells me I cannot live out this month. Perhaps I would not be so ready to believe him, if I did not feel death in my bones. But I know he's right. I'm tired of it all. This siege has killed me. I've stood it out too long. And now I don't want to live—even with that cash prize ahead. I know I'm booked for the boneyard. That's why you are going to be my heir, Bob. We've never been close friends, but we were good square pards when we were prospecting together in the Colorado Desert and in Death Valley. Besides, you are the only one that thought enough of me to answer a letter.

"When I wrote to you last May, I also wrote to two others who used to be friends of mine. The letters were only to find out if either of you cared enough for the unfortunate convict to reply to him. I knew pretty well how it would be, when I wrote. You were the only one who bothered himself to answer. If you had not done so, Bob, you would have missed a little fortune, and I should have left my secret to the doctor here. Now it's yours, and here it is:

"At the time of the hold-up in 1879, I had been prospecting a few days in the Maricopa Mountains, and had my camp at a very small water hole, about five or six miles west of the stage road. One morning, just before sunrise, from a good point of view close by, I saw a man come hurriedly into my camp, and throw down a barley sack. Then he picked up my shovel, that was lying near the campfire, and commenced scraping away the coals and ashes from the fire. After he had scraped them to one side, he dug a hole about two feet deep on the spot they had occupied. Then he picked up the barley sack by the lower end, and emptied its contents out on the ground. Those contents were very interesting. They consisted of five oblong bundles, seemingly about six inches long, each wrapped in brown paper and sealed with red sealing wax. He took up each of them in turn, and, tearing off one end, looked at it a moment, then dropped it back into the sack. I could see that they were greenbacks, and it looked to me at that time that there was at least $1,000,000 in the lot.

"After he had returned them all to the sack, he looked around camp a bit, till his eyes lighted on my old camp kettle, black and greasy on the outside. He grabbed it, and, rolling up that money-lined sack, he stuffed it into the kettle. Then he put on the lid and, putting it down in the hole, scraped the dirt in over it, and tamped it down with a good deal of care. The dirt that was left over—he had put it all on one of my blankets when he commenced digging—he carried some distance out on the desert and scattered by handfuls. Then he returned and carefully scraped the ashes and coals over his work, and, taking all the wood I had piled up near-by, he started a big fire and "lit out." The man had no gun with him, and when he left he left empty-handed.

"When I left camp, after seeing that fellow bury the swag, the big fire he had made was a handy sign for me. I could spot the camp for a long distance across the desert. And I thought I would make some private marks, so that I could be sure of finding the place again, in case I should never come back some time. After I had got a certain distance away, I took my hatchet from the outside of the pack—I had my burro with me—and blazed four of those tall sahuaras that stood around as thick as thieves. I marked them in a row running east and west. You have been in Arizona, so I don't need to tell you what a sahuara is. Sometimes they call them 'giant cactus.' There are thousands of them growing on that desert, some of them forty feet high and as thick as a man's body. Taking the third cactus in the row, counting from the east, and getting it in line with the smoke of the camp fire, I went farther south on the same line, and blazed another cactus, so that both were in line with the smoke.

"Now you see, if anybody ever wants to find where that swag is buried, all he has to do is to get those two sahuaras in line and they will point straight to the spot. Aim past those two sahuaras about the height of a man's eye, and you will see at the foot of the mountain range what appears to be a small black bush. It is really a large mesquite tree. That is your point. As you get near to it you will see a large flat rock about six feet square standing about a foot above the ground. I used it for a table when I camped there and Lord! how I wish I was camping there tonight! That rock is about ten steps south of the tree; and just ten steps on the same line south of the rock is where I had my camp fire. Dig there; and good luck to you.

"But you will want to know how to find these marked sahuaras; and it would be a pretty hard job to hunt them, considering that there are ten thousand of them there. But I do not intend to tell you in this letter, for fear it might fall into the wrong hands. This letter is worthless without the key; and when I am sure you have it, I will send you the key, in a dozen words. To prove to me that you and no one else have received this, send me a postal card with one word on it that only you and I know. You know what word I mean. It was when we were in Death Valley. Don't bother to write me a letter. I don't want one. Go right ahead and enjoy the swag. I've been over a month writing this, and today I only date it and sign it. So long.

[Signed.] "BAT WADE."

IVA LONG AND HER CHICKENS.

A FOUR-YEAR-OLD GIRL WHO HAS TRAINED A ROOSTER TO DRIVE.

From a Special Correspondent.

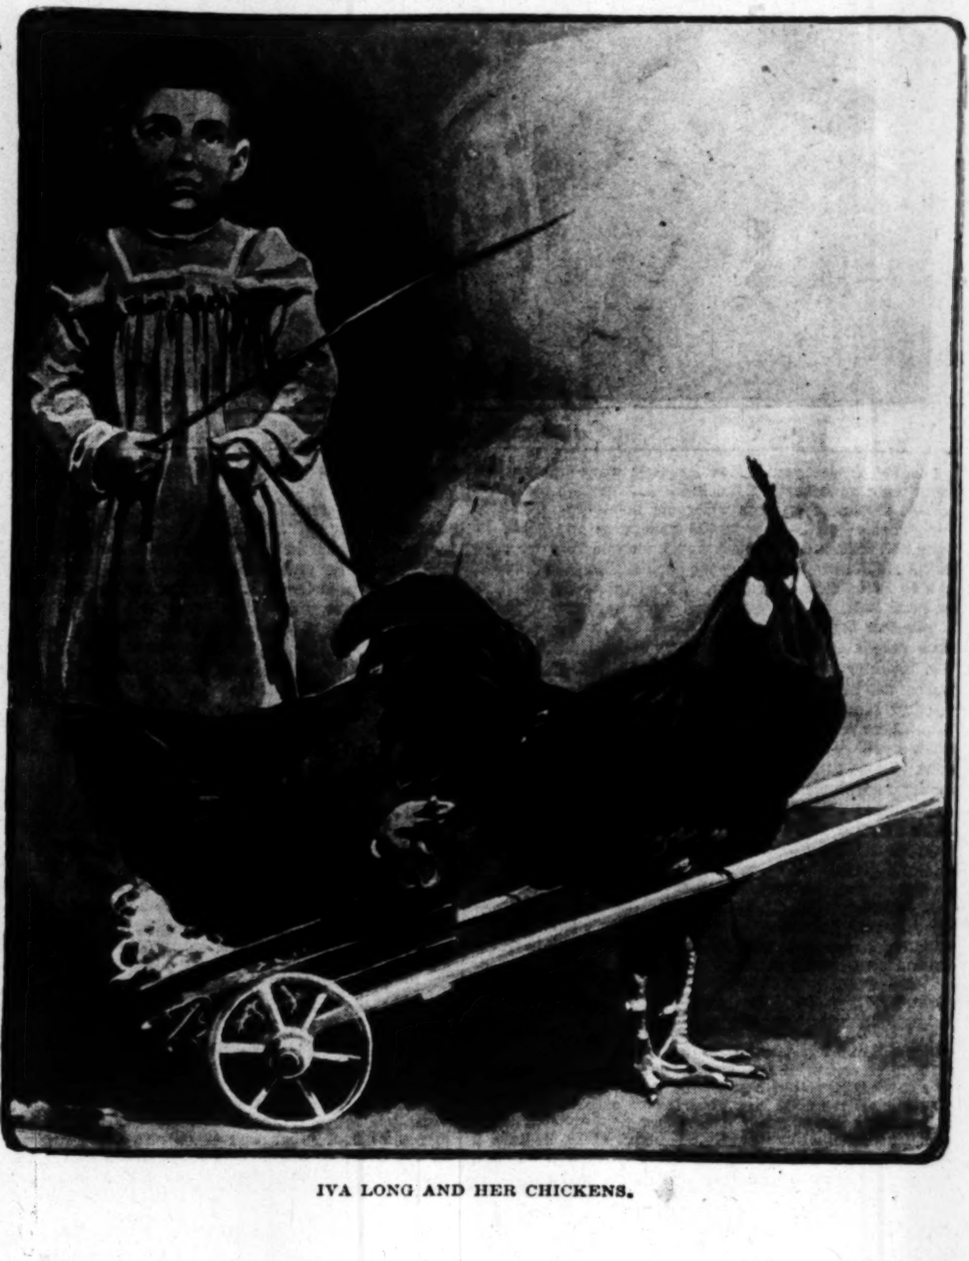
YORK, Pa., March 22.—With a power that seems almost hypnotic, four-year-old Iva Long controls her flock of chickens. Under her training the pet rooster appears in the rôle of a horse with the hen as the occupant of the cart to which he is hitched. Other fowls at the little girl's command, play see-saw as nicely as two children. Every one of the grown birds is obedient.

Iva Long is the little daughter of Rev. J. A. Long of this place. From the time that she was old enough to observe the chickens from the kitchen window, she showed a decided interest in them. As soon as she was old enough to walk by herself she spent almost her entire play time with the chickens. She loved to feed them, and soon the fowls began to show their appreciation of her child-like efforts to do for them. This appreciation deepened into an apparent understanding of the little girl's words, and by and by, the barnyard fowls, by most of folks regarded as unsusceptible to training, began to obey and trust their young benefactress.

Rev. Mr. Long suggests as a partial explanation that fondness for a bird or beast may assist in controlling it. If this principle be true there is no discount on the degree of fondness existing between Iva and her chicken friends. In her childish voice she insists that, as she is little herself, the little chickens of the flock are her sisters. These little chickens Iva is now giving especial attention, and they are a promising brood. They may in time rival older ones in cute performances.

An old Buff-Rock rooster is the central figure of Iva's poultry yard. He is the one that stands quietly between the thills of a two-wheeled cart while with lines and whip the junior poultry fancier stands behind him. The hen in the cart is as tranquil as her male companion, both birds apparently enjoying this diversion from the usual routine of chicken life. The see-saw of two fowls is an amusing sight. The see-saw with the rooster on one end and four-year-old Iva on the opposite end is still more entertaining. It is not even necessary to put the big Buff Rock on his end of the teeter. He jumps there himself with a somewhat triumphant air, and finally allows Iva to swing him into a doze.

The little girl gathers many eggs and to her visitors she sometimes sells them as souvenirs of the poultry yard of trained chickens—a really remarkable place. When the time for raising new chicks comes round, and the little bills begin to pick through the shells, then is Iva doubly glad, for each new addition to the hennery receives all the attention of a fond mother to a newborn babe.

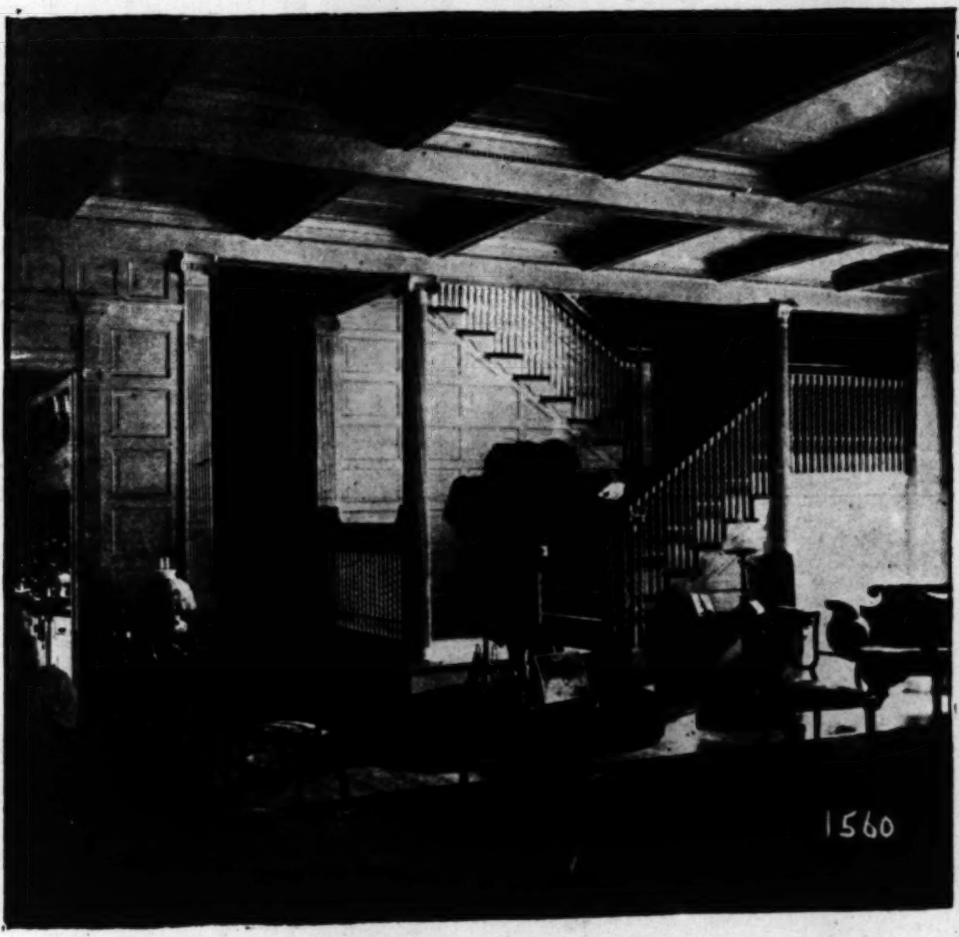


IVA LONG AND HER CHICKENS.

THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

By Kate Greenleaf Locke.

MRS. M. L. C., Los Angeles, writes: "I am having trouble deciding about color of rugs for my hall and stair carpet. Stairs go up out of hall, the walls of hall and upstairs are tinted red (like sample inclosed,) with pink ceiling down to picture molding. The parlor and sitting-room are connected by folding doors and walls are tinted green like sample, with cream ceiling to picture molding. The rugs for parlor and sitting-room are moquette, green with pink roses. They are rather light. What can I do to give the parlor and sitting-room a darker and richer effect? The hall is connected with the parlor by an opening with grille work. Won't jute rugs look well in the hall? What color would you suggest? The floors of all three rooms are painted and finished in imitation of oak. There is a window seat in the parlor; what shall I cushion it with? I have two pairs of curtains like sample inclosed; how would they do for opening between hall and parlor by lining and what shall I use for lining? There is a leaded window in hall; how shall I drape it? I shall have to buy furniture for parlor; would like dark woodwork. I have one piece the wood of which is oak; could it be painted or stained darker to match other furniture?"



A PRETTY STAIRWAY.

I would advise you to use Brussels carpeting on the stairs and made rugs in the hall. I have seen Brussels in rich shades of crimson with very small figure, giving two tones of red. This would look very handsome in your hall with red walls and would also be very durable. Of course Wilton is much more beautiful in effect, but it is also much more expensive. Jute rugs would not last in your hall, although I admit they are very artistic. If you fear there would be too much red in the halls use stair carpet and floor rugs of a dark blue, in Brussels. Use tapestry blue in your parlor with the light green walls; it will contrast prettily and will emphasize. Your window seat could be covered with a tapestry material in blue or silk velour. You could then have an easy chair covered with the same material and a low stool of it. These things, with other pieces of wood or wicker, would furnish prettily. Your oak piece can be stained and finished in Flemish oak. A curtain of Arabian net, or thin silk crimson or blue, to match carpet would look well in leaded window. The sample you inclose of chenille curtaining is double-faced and will not need a lining. These curtains would be much more effective if you would have them dyed a plain dull blue the shade of the blue that now shows in them. The figured chenille is not now considered handsome, but in plain colors it resembles velour.

Tasteful House for a Mechanic.

MRS. R. W. L., Los Angeles, writes: "We are just finishing a six-room cottage, interior light pine, natural color, rooms large with good light. My husband is a mechanic, so our home must be furnished according to our station in life, yet want it comfortable, tasty and attractive. We will buy only a few new articles, using our furniture. For the living-room, 12x16, I have a large Brussels rug, colors, light and dark, tan, old rose and green, wide couch with covering of cotton material of dull blue, dull red, old rose, light green and black, square Weber piano, dark-green cover, two oak rockers, two oak chairs, one dark green wicker seat dark blue corduroy, Japanese matting, table and bookcase, corner seat built solid to use as a receptacle for music; would you upholster it; if so what color and material? One large oil painting, water colors, etc. I think I shall have smaller rugs to scatter about; what kind? Hall 6x9, polished floors in living-room, dining-room and hall, opening from hall to living-room with grille one foot in depth. What shall I use for portieres, and how drape? Hall has a hanging hat rack and a small seat. Shall I use my fern there or in living-room? What size, color and kind of rug? Have Brussels net curtain for the door; would you use sash curtain also of plain china silk? Shall I tie back or hang straight curtains at large window in living-room, which are of Brussels net ruffled? Front room, four-foot window, dining-room, three windows, not bay, but swell a little; want sheer material for curtains; shall they hang straight Large rug of ingrain carpet, tan with red border, wide couch of dull red, one rocker, furniture of oak; what cover shall I get for table? For spare bedroom, what shall I paint floor? What for rug or rugs there? Enameled bed, white dimity spread and bolster. Will use matting on my bedroom floor and rag rug in back bedroom. The walls are in rough plaster; would shades in olive-green tinting in hall, living and dining-rooms lessen height of rooms? What shade for front bedroom, using yellow as color scheme? Have an oak rocker, black chair and table. Front porch 8x18, broad steps; what furniture on porch?"

Look about your living-room and decide carefully just what color will tone down the various combinations you have already there, then use this color in small rugs, cover for corner seat, cushions for couch, etc. Portieres of the same coloring in some appropriate material would emphasize your tone. This could be a cold green, or a dull, soft blue. I think you would derive more enjoyment from your fern in the living-room than in the hall, and a hall is seldom light enough to permit a fern to flourish in it. A small palm usually looks well in a hall, and if given a little water now and then is almost indestructible. Your portieres should be hung in straight folds from the rod, just escaping the floor at the bottom. If they are too long for this treatment turn them over at the top and let this part hang in the regular folds. Do not festoon or catch them up in any way. A rug of Brussels carpeting of small figures made to order with a neat (not glaring) border, will look well and wear well in your hall. Let a margin of polished floor show all around. I am, personally, very partial to crimson rug in a hall, as it suggests cheerfulness at once. This coloring will not interfere with dull blue or green portieres. A pretty figured crimson and white thin silk would be most effective hung over your net curtain at door. If your Brussels net curtains for the living-room window are ruffled I would advise tying them back. Curtains of white-dotted muslin cut to sill and hung straight would look well in your dining-room. Use a cover of dark-red denim with white linen doiley in center for the dining-room table. Paint the floor in your spare bedroom a dark brown and varnish; use apple green touches here and there and rag carpet rugs of green and black "hit-and-miss" pattern on the floor. I would have the window shades all over the house the same color. The rustic rocking chairs made of dark-brown varnished twigs attractive and strong, look well on

Camera Catches Burglars.

A NEW terror is added to the already overwhelming difficulties of an energetic section of professional men—burglars.

By the mere act of entering a room the unhappy housebreaker can now be made to photograph himself from two or three points of view.

It is C. Kearton, a clever animal and bird photographer, who has earned the heartfelt maledictions of the fraternity of the jimmy and dark lantern.

A reporter was invited by Mr. Kearton to go to his house and attempt to burgle his premises. The challenge was accepted. A certain window was to be left unlatched and an entrance obtained through it.

All the lights were turned out as with stealthy tread the writer entered the garden. The window rose noiselessly as he opened it with caution.

All that the writer's dark lantern revealed were a dark interior, and, just under the window ledge, a seat with an innocent-looking cushion. Thinking himself safe so far as the window seat was concerned, the burglar, "for this occasion only," placed his foot inside the room.

His preparations got no further. The moment the slightest pressure was placed upon the deceptive window seat a great flare of light leaped up and expired as suddenly as it flashed.

For several minutes the amateur burglar could "see" nothing but intense blackness, and even when Mr. Kearton turned up the gas nothing could be distinguished in the room owing to the tremendously dazzling effect of the flashlight. The "burglar" having been duly trapped and photographed Mr. Kearton went into details with him. Under the window had been laid two poised pieces of board. The lightest touch upon them brought two pieces of metal in contact, which completed an electrical circuit. The current flowed along the wires that were fixed to a battery. Above the battery was an electrical coil which discharged a half-inch spark. Round the sparkling terminals was a preparation of magnesium powder which was ignited by the spark itself.

On the table facing the window stood the camera which took the photograph, representing the reporter entering the room from the front. Another camera in the garden recorded him as he was silhoutted against the illuminated window.

Though the inventor has applied his idea to the interests of justice he is primarily a naturalist.

He has used the apparatus to secure pictures of nocturnal animals. Food is spread upon the balanced boards, and the weight of the bird or animal "does the rest."

Big game can be photographed by these means. An elephant moving down through the jungle to his habitual drinking place may tread upon a large concealed board, and the next instant will find him trying to "look pleasant" under what would be most trying circumstances.

In the near future, therefore, it is probable that both lawyers and naturalists may have more cause than ever to thank the photographer.—[Chicago Tribune.

Quaintest Village in Land.

THERE is one village in the United States where no modern improvement has ever penetrated, where not the faintest echo of the rush and overwork of modern life has ever sounded, where American newspapers are not read nor the English language spoken.

This is the little German village of Glandorf, in Putnam county, O., where 600 frugal and industrious inhabitants have lived for years in a contented and idyllic simplicity.

In the building of the town, as in everything else about it the people have held very closely to the customs of Germany, from where its founders came.

There is but one street, and that extends for over a mile north and south. Quaint, durable and homelike are the houses scattered along either side, interspersed here and there by the stores. All the residences have spacious and well-kept dooryards.

Back and away from this principal street—yet so near that the laborers can be seen and heard at their work in the fields—stretch the thrifty farms of the German country folk. It is not an uncommon sight to see women and girls at work in the fields with the men, and the whole population shows that rugged health so characteristic of the race.

Among themselves the people converse almost entirely in the German language, and, indeed, there are a great many in the community who can speak no other. They are generous, and clever, and the stranger who goes among them always finds a hospitable welcome, and is impressed with their simple kindness. Nowhere can be found a more devoutly religious people. They are of the Roman Catholic faith, and possess one of the finest church buildings in Northwestern Ohio.

This edifice has in itself been the means of making Glandorf famous, because of its size and the beauty of its architecture. Although most of the work of construction, the quarrying of the stone for the foundation and the hauling of the material was given gratis by members of the parish, the cost outside of all this was over [illegible]. The structure is of brick and is ornamented with white sandstone.

Back of the church is the convent, and all of the work on the farm connected with it is looked after by the sisters.—[New York World.

Unlimited Beard.

JEAN COULON needs a shave more badly than any other living man. If his strength lay in the length of his hair, this Frenchman would be a very Hercules. His beard measures 10 feet 10½ inches in length, while his mustache is over a yard and a half long.

Of course, he has taken his time to cultivate these amazing adornments, as you may gather from the fact that he is 76 years of age. He is very proud of them, and this is perhaps one reason among many why he does not permit the vulgar to gaze on his grandeur every day of the week. The inhabitants of Montlucon, in the Department of Allier, where Coulon resides, are very proud of him, and by way of acknowledging their appreciation, the man with the unlimited beard exhibits his luxurious growth to all and sundry who care to come and see him any Sunday. Indeed, it may be said that for him the Sabbath is scarcely a day of rest, for when not on view he is carefully dressing his amazing appendage and mustache. During the week he rolls his beard in a sort of bag so that he may be able to go about his occupation the more conveniently. Those of the present generation who are inclined to envy him need not despair of emulating his achievement, for they must remember that Coulon's beard has taken seventy-six years to attain its present remarkable growth.

From the earliest times the beard has been considered by almost all nations a sign of strength and an ornament of manhood, and has, therefore, been carefully cherished. Some nations, indeed, regard the beard as sacred. These include the Arabs and Persians, among whom Coulon ought to be held in exceedingly high esteem. The Moslems, who are wont to swear by the beard of the Prophet and by their own, might take to swearing by the Frenchman's if he could be induced to go among them. Unlike the easterners, however, Coulon does not constantly carry a comb about with him, nor does he carefully pick up and preserve for entombment with his remains when he shall come to die those hairs which fall out or break off when he dresses his venerable beard. Nor, like these same Arabs and Persians, does he dye his beard, for he prefers the whiteness of his own to the redness which he could don by using paste after the Oriental fashion.—[London Express.

Farmers Telephone Wirelessly.

ROBERT HALL and Maxum White, farmers living near here, have been using a wireless telephone for two months. Each of these men is at the end of a farmers' system of telephones put in by the Bell company.

Mr. Hall lives at the north end of a system in the village of Lewisville, six miles south, Maxum White, whose house is a mile west of Mr. Hall's, has a 'phone on the north end of a system entirely independent of the one with which Mr. Hall has connection. The two lines terminate in the village of Lewisville, one at the west end of the town and the other at the eastern extremity. The wires of the two systems are not less than a mile apart at any point of the entire course and the houses of Mr. Hall and his neighbor are almost a mile apart.

It was soon noticed that when Mr. Hall rang his telephone bell that of Mr. White responded, and the latter gentleman was able to hear every word of conversation spoken into Mr. Hall's 'phone. Likewise, when Mr. White rang his telephone bell Mr. Hall's also rang, and the voice speaking into White's 'phone could be distinctly heard through Hall's receiver. There is absolutely no communication between the two systems. Electrical experts have not as yet been able to explain the phenomenon.—[Hagerstown (Ind.) Dispatch Cincinnati Enquirer.

Never Called for Their Money.

"A NEW YORK man recently called on me," said Commissioner Evans today, "submitted a list of fifty men and asked me if the names of any of them were on the pension rolls.'

"During the Civil War," he said, "there was a bank on the river front in New York. Across the street was a recruiting station. One day fifty recruits came into the bank in a body and each deposited his bounty. None of them have ever called to obtain his money. Interest was allowed for twenty-two years. My visitor was trying to locate these men, so the accounts might be closed.

"I had the pension rolls examined and found six of the names of the fifty men who had deposited the money forty years ago. Each of the six, by proving his identity, will receive a large sum."—[Washington Correspondence New York World.

Case of Revenge.

A CHINO appeared in one of the municipal courts a few days ago with a great story of how two other Chinos had nearly killed him. In proof of his plaint he exhibited a breast that was one mass of plasters and bandages. The case looked pretty black for the two accused, but something induced the judge to want to look at the injuries—probably with a view of fixing a suitable punishment. Stripped of the bandages not a vestige of a bruise or injury could be found.—[Manila Critic.

Relief for Bachelors.

AN EDINBURGH gentleman has struck an entirely new line in benefactions by setting aside a sum of $35,000 to provide for the relief of indigent bachelors and widowers.

The benefits are not to be limited to persons of any particular religious denomination or belief. The most important qualifications are that the lives of those who benefit by the scheme shall have been characterized by sobriety, morality and industry, and that they shall not be less than 55 years of age. The donor lays down no hard and fast rule as to the form of working arrangements of the benefaction, but suggests that the first three beneficiaries shall be either natives of or residents in the "county of Edinburgh," and that thereafter one shall be chosen from each county in Scotland in alphabetical order until the requisite number is reached.

He also suggests that land shall be purchased within ten miles of Edinburgh, and a building erected thereon, to be known by his name, where such persons as those referred to may end their days in comfort. He thinks that payment should be made for the board of each of the inmates in the institution at a cost, if possible, not exceeding $183.75 per annum. The benefaction is to be administered by certain professors of the University of Edinburgh and the manager of one of the local banks. The name of the donor is not being disclosed for the present, but it is understood that he is a gentleman who has interested himself in scientific affairs, and his desire is that the applicants should have shown a practical sympathy, either as amateurs or professionals, in the pursuits of science.—[London Express.

A Lucky Man.

"THE luckiest man I knew," said a woman who has just returned from New York, "is a man whose house was robbed of $5000 worth of jewelry one day last week. He is John Dillon, the eldest son of Judge Dillon of New York. He was making preparations to remove to his country house somewhere in New Jersey, and the most valuable jewels of his wife had already been sent to a safety deposit company. On the morning of the robbery, as Mr. Dillon was at breakfast in his town house, he remarked to Mrs. Dillon, as he had often said before, that their house seemed to him an especially easy one to rob, and he wondered burglars had never attempted it. Then Mrs. Dillon set out for the country house, and Mr. Dillon, happening to pass the office of a company which insures against burglary, went in and had a policy drawn and signed, promising him $5000 redress in case his house was robbed. He had scarcely reached his office when a telephone message came, informing him that the robbery had occurred probably not half an hour after the policy had been made out. There's luck for you, and luck of the kind only the wealthy can afford."—[Washington Post.

Is He Charlie Ross?

A LETTER from "Charley M.," who says that one of his earliest memories was of a glass marble with a sheep in it, was received by Chief O'Neill yesterday, and the questioner wants to know whether he is "making a fool of himself" or whether he holds in his mind a valuable clew to his real identity.

The letter is dated at Little Rock, Ark., and Mr. M. will eagerly watch the papers to learn the Chief's views. His letter is in part as follows:

"Having just read of the loss of a child some twenty-five years ago by the name of Charley Ross, I write you for a few brief items. The piece of news I read was dated from Chicago, but seen in a Little Rock paper. I had no sooner seen the name of Charley Ross than it called to mind one time I was sick and delirous and it was thought that I would die. Some one said in my ear, 'You are the lost Charley Ross.' I remember quite well that I said, 'I am Charley M., and I'm not lost, either, for I'm going to get well.' I remember after that of several people coming into the room, and I was soon well again, and that name was mentioned to me when I was sick.

"Now I remember of being in a wagon with high sides to it. There was straw in the bottom of that wagon, and in rolling around in that straw I found a pistol. I don't remember anything else except that our headquarters were for a long time at a fair ground.

"Was there any musical instrument at his home? Was he in a position to hear music while at home? Did his father have horses or a carriage? Did his father and mother ever teach him a prayer or pray with him? Was there a bedspread or quilt of pretty colors at home? Was there ever a storm or heavy rain which alarmed the family when he was there? Did he or his playmates ever have a large marble with a sheep or horse inside of it? Did he at any time ever have a pretty severe fall? Did his hair curl when small?"—[Chicago Chronicle.

The Trojan Horse to Date.

EVEN in these latter days an intelligent study of the ancient classics may prove a valuable asset to the conscientious student. That, at least, is what one gathers from the exploits of the pair of Persian knights of the order of industry who stole a dummy horse from a saddler's shop and proceeded to put it to the same use as the Greeks did the Wooden Horse at Troy. The deceptive quadruped was placed on a handcart and wheeled to a house where an innocent concierge consented to take care of it for the night. Before morning one of the confederates had emerged from the interior of the horse, laid hands on such valuables as he could find and regained his hiding place—to be duly carted away by his friend.

This stratagem was actually successful several times—for good "M. Pipelet" had, no doubt, never heard a certain trite tag about gift-bearing Greeks, and the legitimate suspicion with which prudent Trojans should regard such. At last, however, a policeman happened to see the horse passing through the streets, and, having heard of its exploits, made bold to stop it—and the game was up. Even good Homer nods—and the students of the bard were caught napping. Clearly, however, there is still money to be made of a sound classical education.—[London Graphic.

EXPANSION.

A Timely Work.

THE story of the Pacific Islands is one of varied chapters of present-day interest, in view of the great international problems of the hour. The United States is represented in the Asiatic Pacific rivalries with establishments in the Philippines and stepping-stones at Hawaii, Samoa and Guam. Great Britain is represented by Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand, with their interesting flora and fauna, and diversity of races. The British territory of New Guinea and North Borneo, the largest islands in the world, and the Fiji and Solomon Islands each present studies of diverse charm. Great Britain, with her Pacific seaboard on the American continent, and her trade-distributing centers at Singapore and Hongkong, possesses a wide Pacific foothold. The dominions of Holland, which include Java—with its advanced native civilization—and its other possessions; those islands under the rule of Japan, and other powers of the Pacific afford chronicles of graphic history more wonderful than the pages of romance. The public is under vast obligation for a new publication which will have international value, and should in a special sense be welcomed in the Far West. "The Mastery of the Pacific," was written by Archibald R. Colquhoun. This author has been gold medallist of the Royal Geographical Society; silver medallist, Society of Arts; administrator at Mashonaland, South Africa; special correspondent of the London Times in the Far East, etc.

The present octavo volume is accompanied with special colored maps, frontispiece and more than one hundred illustrations from original sketches and photographs. The writer states in the preface, that he has "long been a traveler in foreign lands and a student of foreign affairs, but more especially of the questions which find their focus in the Far East. Among the changes and shiftings of human activity which have taken place in the world's history," he continues, "none have been more striking than those which are rapidly transforming the great ocean zone of the Pacific."

The author was convinced that "the future of more than one great power will be decided in the Pacific arena during the twentieth century." He has therefore visited the ocean territories, and, as he was already familiar with the American-Pacific Slope and the entire Asiatic-Pacific Coast, he had that wide and scholarly grasp of the subject which gives the greatest value to his study of the four chief powers, and those other powers interested in the Pacific, all of which have been treated in this absorbing chronicle.

While the author states that he has not aimed to be either historical or scientific, he repeats the conjecture that long ago a continent lay in the mid-Pacific, of which the scattered islands of Polynesia are the only remains. The ethnology of the islands is considered in the opening chapter. The chapter on "The Expansion of the United States" is one of remarkable interest. The writer says: "The United States has entered the vortex of Asiatic-Pacific rivalries and must share the world problem of the twentieth century. The dominant note of Americanism is its keen receptivity, and as one enters the Pacific Slope, he finds the young State has swept together not only men of all nations, but their ideas and methods, and, in adapting them to her own use, has produced a splendid, if heterogeneous whole."

The author favors the Nicaragua Canal, and has written a work whose conclusions were formed from a personal study of the two routes. It is entitled "The Key of the Pacific." He considers the trans-isthmian canal one of the pressing needs of the age.

The chapters devoted to the "Philippines and the Filipinos" begin with the coming of Magellan, and the customs and racial characteristics in the mixed tribes of the archipelago known as the Philippines. The Filipino proper is said to be primarily a Malay, but the race has intermarried with Negritos, Indonesians, Chinese, Japanese, Europeans, and even Mexicans. The chronicle explains many interesting phases of the influence of the friars, and the peculiarities of the Tagals and Visayans who shared in the recent insurrection.

"The Future of the Philippines" is a chapter of importance. Questions of education, ethical influence, and the policy of the future are themes considered in an enlightening sketch.

Special divisions are given to "The New Australasia," "Canada and the Pacific," and "British North Borneo." The Dutch and Japan and other powers in the Pacific have special chapters, giving many important phases of conditions of past and present times in these localities. The chronicle in each relation is full of the action and zest of great events.

The numerous illustrations of people and scenery give vivid impressions of widely varied races, and their dissimilar types of government. The profuse maps are especially notable for their excellence in detail.

"The United States," in the opinion of the writer, "will be the dominant factor in the mastery of the Pacific. She has all the advantages, qualifications and some of the ambitions necessary for the rôle, and her unrivalled resources and fast-increasing population provide the material for future greatness. She is, however, embarked on an entirely new phase in her career. . . . Large demands will be made upon the public spirit and patriotism of the people. The struggle for which the nations are preparing may be a step in the scale of the world's progress in that it need not involve the shedding of blood. Forethought, preparation, and sustained effort will be the only effective weapons in the coming conflict, and these alone will decide the mastery of the Pacific. The utilization of the huge force lying dormant in China is one of the great problems of the future, and upon its solution depends to a vast extent the future of the Pacific."

Every day journalism is filled with inquiries concerning the new British-Japanese alliance. Whatever may be the effect in maintaining "the territorial integrity of the empire of China and the empire of Korea, as a guaranty of peace in the Far East, the student of today cannot become too well informed of Oriental conditions, and life in the Pacific islands. The work is one of the most interesting and important which has been produced on this subject. The sketches and many of the photographs were taken during the journey by Mrs. A. R. Colquhoun, to whom the work is dedicated. The book, in its type and general presentation, is an admirable one.

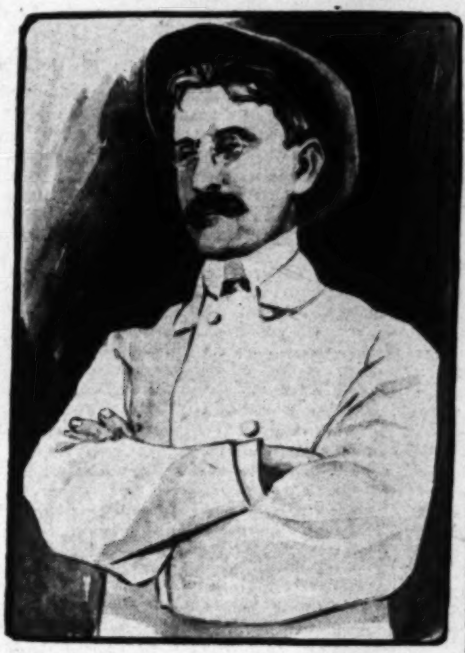
TRAVEL.

The Nicaragua Canal.

It has been frequently stated by great economic leaders that with all America's commercial intercourse with the Orient only the shores of future possibility have been reached which will open with the isthmian canal. The international interest in the theme, the present status of diplomatic relations, and negotiations as to the views of Senator Morgan and others, will enlist public interest in this work, in whose prefatory note the author tells that during the year 1898 he was employed under the direction of the Nicaragua Canal Commission. The volume is the outgrowth of that visit.

The purple hills and green valleys of Nicaragua are attractively presented, that region which the ancient traders called "Mahomet's Paradise." There everything essential to the physical wants of man springs from the soil, and the reader is shown the cocoanut palms, and corn fields, the oranges, mangoes, guavas and plantains, and the physical charm of a lotus land, where the natives have found existence easy and lead a dreaming life. The book deals with the historical and diplomatic history of the mosquito coast, the conditions of that portion of Nicaragua whose topography bears directly upon the problem of canal questions, and projects past and present. The author says "An argument against the Nicaragua Canal advanced by the advocates of rival projects is that the absence of natural harbors will necessitate the construction of costly breakwaters, and will entail at least at Greytown a considerable annual expenditure for dredging. This is true, but it is nevertheless thought that the advantages of the Nicaraguan location are sufficiently great to justify the establishment and maintenance of the necessary harbor works." The book gives an interesting account of the writer's experience in the journey from "Ocean to Ocean," where the camps brought the student of natural science among many picturesque scenes. The wild honey of fine quality, the limes, had for picking, and various fruits, are mentioned as the refreshments of the camp life. Zoology was typified by the parrots, deer and wild cattle encountered, which contributed to the wilderness spectacle. Some insight is afforded of the representative racial life of the land.



JOHN LUTHER LONG.

In the history of the country a biography of "William Walker, Filibuster," is introduced, among whose followers were numerous Californians. Walker was a native of Tennessee, a graduate of its State university. He studied medicine in Edinburgh, and for two years traveled on the continent. After a brief professional experience, he abandoned medicine, took up the study of law, was admitted to the bar in New Orleans. In 1849 he came West, and became the editor of the San Francisco Herald. Later he boldly undertook the conquest of Western Mexico from the Spaniards. After various failures, Walker and Emory and their followers, sailed for La Paz. After a brief stop at San Lucas they captured the town. FICTION.

Social Complexities.

The author of "Madame Butterfly," "The Prince of Illusion" and other tales has written a love story of original freshness and piquancy. The plot is unfolded by the steady cumulative force of amusing dialogue. There is a silver vein in this author's work which lightens every page.

The hero of "Naughty Nan," a bank clerk with no special castles in Spain, and dominated by a high sense of obligation, is delegated to an office, and the duties of a [illegible] position which demands an inexhaustible supply of ready wit. "Jack" was the second cousin of the heroine, and he tells his own story. He had loved Nan from his boyhood, but by his uncle's will, Nan had been given a fortune, and had been educated to become the wife of an English-American counsin, Cawdor, as soon as he took orders in the established church. It was expected that her wealth would aid in the advance of the church, and the maid at 13 had been set to study Greek and Sanskrit. "Aunt Isabel" had received the whole matter as a sacred charge. Nan had confided to Jack that she hated the money.

"Aunt Isabel" is seen in the opening chapter committing the maid to Jack's care, and he was constantly to remind her that "Cousin Cawdor's whole career and perhaps the stability of the church depended upon her." He knew Nan was listening behind the curtain to the part in which he agreed to guard her from the attentions of the violinist, the mandolinist, the poet, the artist and the dramatist, and help to carry out the uncle's will.

"You are to take her to the libraries, to the theater, when Shakespeare is played, or "Rip Van Winkle;" to church whenever you can; to the zoölogical gardens, to the lectures on culture, and so forth—to the hospitals on visiting days." Jack continues: "I was sorry Aunt fancied her husband always with her. He looked an extremely disagreeable man to live with dead or alive. I found him less dead than alive. He had given Nan to Cawdor. It had not seemed utterly irrevocable while he lived. He might change his mind. But he couldn't now."

The hero determines that honor is greater than love, and the dramatic situations that follow are chiefly the result of Nan's resentment. The fine self-control of the hero, his knightly gallantry, while Nan tries metaphorically to dig a pit for the will and vindicate her own right to personal liberty, is a modern illustration that "No man liveth to himself." There is quick, graphic power in the gloom of the situation in the hospital, which illustrates the striking individualty of the hero, in contrast to the compensation of the denouement. While the reader may not altogether approve the desperate mode of the little intrigante he will find her charmingly real and winsome in trying to discover the solution of the vexed problem of her life. "Aunt Izzy's" own romance is one of the minor features of the story, which is shown as a logical conclusion of the situation.

A Marine Novel.

Kate Bonnett, the daughter of a professional pirate, is the heroine whom Stockton has presented in this entertaining story, which takes the reader to the Barbados and West Indian points. The various episodes through which the heroine passes, the unexpected situations which multiply around her path, the facility with which the hero recognizes the full import and responsibility of his position and the method with which his convictions are brought out will entertain lovers of stories of adventure and peril. The book has been illustrated by A. I. Keller and H. S. Potter who have seized the possibilities of the plot to present full-page illustrations and many head pieces, which are an enlightening addition to the clever romance.

NEW MAGAZINES.

The Book Lover for March-April, by its literary and artistic excellence, merits public interest. "The Romance of Book Collecting" is told by J. H. Slater. Theodore L. De Vinne writes of "Perfecting the Press." Van Santwood of "Genius and Morals." Andrew tells of "The Old Black Guard Slating."

Harper's Magazine for April will contain "The Roses of Monsieur Alphonse," by Thomas A. Janvier, illustrated by Elizabeth Shippen Greene; "The Spartan," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, with pictures by Smedley; ," by Octave Thanet, with pictures by W. D. ; "Prosper's Old Mother," by Bret Harte; and in His Books," by Percy Fitzgerald, president of the Dickens Club in London. A particularly interesting feature in the April number will be an account of the trip made "From Paris to New York by Land," by de Windt, F.R.G.S., who is making this remarkable trip across two continents. There are twenty-eight separate contributions in this number.

Scribner's Magazine for April will contain Richard Harding Davis's new serial story, "Captain Macklin." Thomas Nelson Page will be represented by a story entitled "The Sheriff's Bluff." Charming color illustrations commemorate the Easter tide. President Gilman describe "Some Noteworthy Scholars."

The Delineator for April comes with the attraction of variety in literary and artistic features. It abundantly merits a place in the home for the value it affords to questions of domestic and economic science. It contains the latest standards for the toilette and its directions are those of utility and taste. Charles G. D. Roberts is represented in its current fiction by "The Châtelaine of Cheticomp." "A Group of Notable Women," is represented by Dr. S. R. Elliott's study of Kate Field.

The Designer for April, published by the Standard Fashion Company of New York, comes with its multiplicity of suggestions for "Fashions and Fabrics." "Pretty Trifles for Easter Gifts," with numerous designs, will make the number timely. The decorated cover and colored illustrations are attractive features of the issue.

Readers of Current History and Modern Culture now have these two valuable magazines combined in one. The consolidation is announced at the beginning of the twelfth volume of the former, the March number being clothed in a new and comely cover and bearing the full title of Current History and Modern Culture. The publishers announce that the best features and entire editorial force of both magazines will be continued in the consolidated form. The events of the times will be chronicled in a comprehensive, impartial and systematic manner; the fields of science, education, religion, literature, art, and music will be reviewed; and illustrations, attractive and instructive, will brighten the pages throughout.

The success of the Tabard Inn Libraries is told in the March Book Lovers' Bulletin, published in Philadelphia. The name Tabard Inn was chosen for its literary flavor. At the old Tabard in Southwark, five hundred years ago, Chaucer assembled his pilgrims for their march to the shrine of Canterbury. The Tabard Inn will have stations everywhere. A literary center has just been opened in this city of which C. H. Reynolds, 220 West Sixth, is local manager, and Seymour Eaton, librarian.

The March number of the Patriotic Review contains matter of timely interest, and a full-page portrait of Rev. E. E. Hale, with sketch. Among the articles are "Mary Washington, the Mother of Washington," with picture of her home; Deborah Sampson (illustrated,) telling of her lecture tour 100 years ago; "Two Historic Dates in March," by the editor; a full report of the recent D. A. R. Congress, by Marian Longfellow; "Betsy Ross and the Flag," by Elizabeth Porter Gould; an article on "Old Ironsides;" "Mollie Pitcher," a poem by Kate Brownlee Sherwood; news of the various patriotic societies and much miscellaneous matter. M. H. Brazier Co., publishers Trinity Court, Boston, Mass.

Pearson's Magazine for April contains a profuse supply of interesting illustrations, and full table of contents. Earl Mayo writes of "Montana," in "The Story of the States Series." William R. Stuart of "The New York Subway." Archibald Williams describes "The Harmonograph." Ernest H. Rydall tells of "A Mammoth Pigeon Ranch" near Los Angeles.

The Book Lover contains a great volume of literary lore practically or wholly unobtainable elsewhere. It is a large and handsome magazine (112 pages, 9x12,) and suited to all persons of literary likings. Each number covers the whole field of literature in a manner attempted by no other magazine.

The Cornhill Magazine for March contains an installment of Anthony Hope's serial, "The Intrusions of Peggy." Lady Grove considers "Social Solecisms." W. B. Yeats inquires 'What is Popular Poetry?" The number has variety and interest.

"The Coming General Election in France" is a leading sketch of Littell's Living Age. The able article explains the genesis of the present political situation and the work of the government, which is appealing to the electors. "A British Academy of Science" treats of triumphs calculated to unite the peoples in the progress of civilization; the centenary of the foundation of the French Institute and the bicentenary of the Academy of Sciences of Berlin, and the effect of these institutions on the growth of knowledge, are presented in this able sketch. "A Cure for Clever People," and Hugh Clifford's "For the Honor of the Corps" are features of the issue.

The Independent for March 13 contains Justin McCarthy's "Some Lights Gone Out of England," a fine tribute to the late Marquis of Dufferin, and Sidney Cooper, the famous painter. Mary Augusta Channell writes of "A Bit of Guam Life." Frederic Passy tells "The Future of Arbitration."

Donahue's Magazine for March contains, among its leading articles, Lorenzo J. Markol's paper entitled, "Is Russia to be the Future Leader of the Civilized World?" "The Church in the Land of Guadhama," by Rev. Joseph M. Gleason, gives some notable views of Burma.

The World's Work announces for April a varied and attractive table of contents. Robert T. Hill has written an illustrated sketch on "The Transformation of the Desert." Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., furnishes an illustrated study of "Tolstoy." Arthur Goodrich describes "The Expansion of an American Shipyard." "Among the World's Workers" is an important department of this useful and important publication.

M. Hugues Le Roux, the distinguished Frenchman now in this country delivering lectures under the auspices of the Cércle Français of Harvard, has made extensive travels in Abyssinia. He has contributed to the Century for April a paper entitled "New Trails in Abyssinia," whch will be illustrated from photographs which he himself made, chiefly in Addis Abeba, the capital, and along the route of his exploration of the Blue Nile. A companion paper will appear in the same number from the pen of Oscar T. Crosby, giving his "Personal Impressions of Menelik."

Outing has on its list of contributors many celebrated names. The editor aims to make the publication absorbing, interesting and novel. His own contributions will include "A Royal Elephant Hunt in Siam," "With the Aborigines in the Malay Peninsula," and "Rhinoceros Hunting in Sumatra." President Roosevelt, T. S. Van Dyke, George B. Grinnell and many others are announced among the contributors. The entire magazine is illustrated by photographs, where they lend themselves best to the purpose. Such artists as A. B. Frost, Frederic Remington, Howard Pyle, Arthur Heming and others are included on the artistic staff.

The Smart Set has for its initial novelette, "The Ambition of the Baron," by Marvin Dana. "The Science of the Sea" is contributed by Prince Albert of Monaco. The following popular names appear in the announcement for the April number: Richard Le Gallienne, Bliss Carmen, Madison Cawein, Clinton Scollard, Edith M. Thomas, Charlotte Becker, Theodore Roberts, Frank Dempster Sherman, Theodosia Garrison, Charles Hanson Towne, Edwin L. Sabin, Elsa Barker, Myrtle Reed, Albert Bigelow Paine, Clarence Urmy, Carolyn Wells, Samuel Minturn Peck, E. Pauline Johnson, Clinton Dangerfield, and many others.

Harper's Weekly for March 15 contains an illustration in color, "Germany Breaks Bread With the United States." The pictorial attraction of the issue, and the timely themes make the number particularly desirable.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

The Macmillan Company, New York, anounce a new book for April, "The Virginian: A Horseman of the Plains," by Oliver Wister.

The London Daily News, in its review of Benjamin Kidd's "Principles of Western Civilization," says: "It is a work which will doubtless rivet the attention of all serious thinkers in England today. . . . We may not agree with his conclusions, but he makes us, as the French say, 'think furiously.' The book is one of the publications of the Macmillan Company, New York."

Some persons are of the opinion that a number of literary men will be knighted during the present coronation of Edward. Sir Conan Doyle and Sir Rudyard Kipling are at the present time being much discussed. Kipling deserves the honor because of "The Absent-Minded Beggar" and the $500,000 it was instrumental in raising for the widows and orphans. Doyle's "Great Boer War" some persons think may give him a title.

Some one has started the story that the wide popularity of the Russian novelist, Gorky, in his own country is due to his possession of an iron ring recently given him by Tolstoi. According to the Russian legend, the ring has wonderful literary properties and has passed down from one great Russian writer to another for centuries. Turgenieff, when dying, it is claimed, passed the wonderful ring to Tolstoi, and, not long ago, Tolstoi, feeling his end to be near, sent the ring to Gorky.

"India's Love Lyrics," collected and arranged by Lawrence Hope is on the list of John Lane's new publications.

The March Bulletin of Harper & Brothers, New York, offers on its list of fiction S. R. Crockett's "The Dark of the Moon," and Marie Vorst's "Philip Langstreth." "Wild Life of Orchard and Field," by Ernest Ingersoll, is included in the nature books.

Harper Bros. publish a list of desirable Easter books. The books include Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur," and "The Boyhood of Christ;" Dr. Henry Van Dyke's "The Story of the Other Wise Man, and the Christ Child in Art;" "Women of the Bible," by W. P. Snyder and George T. Tobin; "Hypatia," by Charles Kingsley; "The Cloister and the Hearth," by Charles Reade; "Heroines of Fiction," by W. D. Howells; "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," by Lewis Carroll; "Easter Bells," by Margaret E. Sangster; "Prue and I," by George William Curtis, and "From the Easy Chair," by George William Curtis.

"In a Car of Gold," by P. L. Gray, is one of the popular fairy tales of planetary journies among the stars, published by the Saalfield Publishing Company, Akron, Ohio.

E. F. Henderson's "Short History of Germany" will be dedicated to Prince Henry of Prussia, by his special permission, and will be published by the Macmillan Company in two volumes among the March publications.

In the new uniform edition of F. Marion Crawford's works are published this month "Sant' Ilario," "The Ralstons," "Adam Johnstone's Son" and "A Rose of Yesterday," each in one volume. They are among the publications of the Macmillan Company.

"The Constructive and Reconstructive Forces that are Essential to Maintain International Commercial Supremacy," by George J. Seabury, has reached its second edition. It is a plea for the missing links of an American-built and owned merchant marine, a department of commerce and industries, and an isthmian canal.

C. Osborne Ward, who has been a translator of various languages for the government at Washington, has gone to Yuma for his health. Mr. Ward has been engaged for the past thirty-four years on a history of fourteen centuries concerning "The Ancient Lowly." Leigh H. Irvine, author of "An Affair in the South Seas," is said to be rewriting Mr. Ward's work into a popular volume.

A. C. McClurg & Co. announce that they are planning an extensive series of reprints of Americana, in elegant form and limited editions. They will inaugurate this series in the fall of 1902 with the issue of Hennepin's Travels, under the editorship of the man best qualified in America, perhaps, for such a task, Reuben Gold Thwaites. For the text Mr. Thwaites will use the edition of 1698, and the maps and illustrations will be reproduced in facsimile. The work will be thoroughly annotated by Mr. Thwaites, who will also furnish an introduction and prepare the index. The ability of Mr. Thwaites for this work is attested by all who know him.

SHOPPERS WITHOUT SATCHELS.

The hue and cry after shoplifters has had a singular effect on women. Whereas a few years ago it was the practice to carry a small satchel on shopping tours, today it would be difficult to induce an honest woman to use one. If pressed for explanation, she probably will tell you: "I am afraid of being taken for a shoplifter. They all carry satchels. Why, dear me, if I were to enter a department store with a satchel every salesman, saleswoman, floor manager and customer would watch me with suspicion, expecting every moment to see me sneak something off a counter and hide it in my bag."—[New York Press.

Successful Olive Growing.

AN INSTANCE of successful olive culture, on a large scale, is furnished by the ranch of the Los Angeles Olive-Growers' Association, at Fernando, in this county. The company has shown that the olive will respond to care and cultivation, like any other fruit tree. This is the first year that the trees have come into full bearing. Gathering has just been completed, and the crop is immense. The company has 2000 acres, of which 1100 are planted to olives. The company was organized in 1893, and the first trees were planted in the following year. It is a coöperative concern. The land was subdivided into tracts of five acres which the company agreed to plant, cultivate and care for during five years. The land was sold at $350 per acre, in five annual payments. This charge covered all expenses of trees and cultivation. There are now about one hundred owners of land in the company, most of them owning only five acres. Careful account is kept of the expenses and receipts from each five-acre tract, net returns being credited to the owner.

There are about one hundred trees to the acre. The varieties are Nevadillo, Manzanillo and Mission, to which have been added a few Columella. After a thorough test, it is believed a good variety of Mission olive is the best for planting in this section. There are about forty varieties of the Mission olive.

The trees began to bear in 1899, but did not bear much until this year. For instance, one five-acre lot yielded in 1899 311 pounds of olives; in 1900, 380 pounds, and in 1901, 23,002 pounds. The prize lot last season yielded 31,260 pounds, which should net the fortunate owner considerably more than $1000. The total yield last season was 2,406,138 pounds. This was mostly from 950 acres, as some of the trees are yet young.

The company has got the cost of gathering the crop down to a fine point. The cost of picking for pickles last season was about $18 a ton, and for oil $10 a ton, notwithstanding the fact that good prices are paid—$1.50 per day. It is expected that the expense will be still further reduced next season.

The smaller berries are used for oil, and the larger for pickles. Of pickles there have been packed this season 217,093 pounds, or nearly a thousand barrels, and of oil, 2,189,045 pounds, making about 50,000 gallons. The oil is packed in tins, containing five gallons, one gallon and half a gallon, the smaller size tins being neatly decorated. It is also packed in bottles, containing from half a pint to a quart.

The company proposed to mark out a new path in dealing direct with consumers. A neat pamphlet is sent to all new arrivals at the leading hotels of Southern California.

The grove is not irrigated, but is thoroughly cultivated. There is no scale, and the trees have never been fumigated. It is believed that the total absence of scale should produce an exceptionally fine grade of oil.

The average net receipts this season should be about $75 per acre. The company has invested $230,000, of which about $100,00 has been paid out for labor.

A Desert Experiment Station.

THE experiment farm, recently established near Calexico, on the Colorado Desert, by the California Development Company, is acquiring a large and valuable variety of plants and seeds. Mr. Mecholl, who is in charge of the station, is said by the San Diego Union to be much pleased with the success of the project. Of the various plants, he expects to make specialties of the Egyptian cotton, sugar cane and sugar beets. The Bureau of Seed and Plant Introduction of the Department of Agriculture has furnished many varieties of rare seeds, which are being planted and given careful attention.

A Mountain Acadia.

THE Albuquerque Citizen gave the following description of an interesting mountain settlement in that Territory:

"The traveler on the Santa Fé road, approaching Raton from the south, reaches that city about 6 o'clock in the evening. The declining sun produces a picture of rare beauty at this season of the year upon the slopes of the Raton Mountains, which encircle the city on the east. The vast flanks of the range glow in purple and crimson, with dark shadows here and there in the deeper cañons. The whole of the beautiful picture is crowned with glittering snow. The picture is miles in length and 2000 feet in height, and the coloring is blended so perfectly by the setting sun that it attracts the attention of many admiring travelers.

"Upon the top of this vast range of rugged mountains, 2000 feet above Raton and 8000 feet above the level of the sea, there is a mesa of remarkably fertile land, upon which crops are grown without irrigation. The deep snows in the winter and the heavy rains of summer provide just enough moisture for the proper cultivation of wheat and vegetables. The level plain is called Johnson's Mesa, and a thriving colony of enterprising farmers own and cultivate the land. It is estimated that there are 100,000 acres of land upon this mesa that will produce each year forty bushels of wheat to the acre. The whole of the land is now occupied, and it is the most prosperous agricultural community in New Mexic. What makes the land the more valuable is the fact that it is all underlaid with coal, some of the veins being over twenty feet thick. This wonderful mesa, which appears to be a mountain range with the top chopped off flat by some gigantic force of nature, is one of the principal sources of the excellent local trade of Raton. It is in contemplation to erect a large flouring mill at Raton to grind the wheat grown upon this mesa. One of the present needs of the community is a daily rural mail delivery. Here is the proper place for a model daily mail line. The farms join closely, and the people would appreciate a better mail service.

"Next fall the Citizen hopes to secure an exhibit of the products of this mountain Acadia for the Territorial Fair."

New Refinery.

THE Bakersfield Echo has the following in regard to a refinery in Kern county:

"Work on the Pacific Refinery near Reeder Lake, just west of the city limits, is progressing rapidly. Nearly all the machinery is at the present time in place and a few more weeks will see it completed and in operation.

"The 21,000-barrel tank, in which crude oil will be stored, is now completed and the company is advertising for bids to fill it, as it wishes to have a supply of oil on hand before work starts.

"The three condensers are all bricked in and in their places. The boiler-house is completed and everything is in readiness except the riveting of the stills and the setting of the same in place, and this work is now being done.

"A large freight house, 150 feet long by 60 feet wide, has been completed and the carpenters are now busy erecting a frame for the loading racks. A switch runs direct to the freight house from the main line of the Santa Fé.

"There are four 1000-barrel tanks in which the refined product will be stored and as yet have not been put in place. Work on them, however, will be started in a few days."

A New Mexico Town.

CONCERNING the city of Raton, the Albuquerque Citizen says:

"In many respects Raton is the best city of its size in New Mexico. The city numbers about five thousand inhabitants, and there is a population of at least 12,000 tributary to the trade of Raton. No other place of the same size in the Territory has such unlimited resources. The Citizen makes the prediction that the next census will show a population of 10,000 inhabitants within the corporate limits of Raton.

"The resources of the city are varied and developed to only a limited extent. Raton is almost encircled by mountains which contain coal in unlimited quantities. The mines developed employ several hundred men. Under Johnson's Mesa there are 100,000 acres of coal land, and the coal veins measure twenty-three feet in thickness. This coal strata is yet untouched, being a few miles from the railway line, but the demand will soon cause these vast coal measures to be developed. Almost within the city limits there is abundant building stone of excellent quality. The railroad shops at Raton employ several hundred men. The city is a division point on the Santa Fé Railroad, and the headquarters of a large force of railway employés. The city is the center of a vast agricultural and stock growing region. The mountains near are rich in minerals and timber. The Maxwell Grant Company has headquarters in Raton and commodious offices for the transaction of business. The railway company intends this year to erect a new hotel and commodious passenger and freight depots. The railway company will also erect a fine library building for the use of its employés. There are indications of oil in the vicinity, and a company has been formed to drill a well."

Telephone-Hygiene.

THE Telegraph-Hygienic Company of this city has brought out a device to protect users of telephones from dirt and germs of disease, which accumulate in the mouthpieces of telephones. The advantages claimed for this appliance are that it materially magnifies the sound of the voice, and that while the mouthpiece is kept clean by paper drawn tightly over the top the person using it is always talking against a sheet of paper, pure and clean, and rendered germ-proof by antiseptic treatment.

Casa Grande Valley.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Anaheim Plain Dealer writes to that paper in regard to the Casa Grande Valley in Pinal county, Ariz., which is likely soon to be placed under irrigation by the construction of the proposed San Carlos dam, on the Gila River, one of the national reservoirs recommended by the Secretary of the Interior in his report. There are about one hundred and fifty thousand acres of land which has been put under the desert land law in the valley, the balance being reserved for the Indians. The correspondent says:

"The point about this Casa Grande opening is that it is the best offering the western settler today. It distances the Imperial Land Company and kindred Colorado River schemes. There is no water company to take chances with, no payments to make

CARE OF THE BODY.

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR ACQUIRING AND PRESERVING HEALTH.

Compiled for The Times.

[The Times does not undertake to answer, either in this department or by mail, inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. General articles on hygienic subjects, of public interest, will receive attention in these columns. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine section of The Times is in the hands of the printer a week before the day of publication.]

The Cause of Infection.

IN THE Washington Times, Dr. William C. Woodward, Health Officer of the District of Columbia, has an article on disease germs, in which he says:

"It is about as difficult to determine why one person who has been exposed to smallpox contracts the disease and another subjected to a similar exposure does not as it is to determine why, in battle, some soldiers are wounded and others escape unharmed."

Dr. Woodward goes on to explain that there are two factors which influence the chances of non-immune persons who are exposed to smallpox, contracting the disease. First, the length of exposure; second, the number of smallpox "bullets" in the atmosphere. Of course, in the usual complacent way of the medical expert, he takes for granted that persons who have been vaccinated are immune, although it is a fact that thousands of people who have been vaccinated are constantly falling victims to the disease. He says: "It is not surprising that we are unable to say at once whether a given individual who has been exposed to smallpox will or will not develop the disease, but find it necessary to quarantine all and await the expiration of the longest period ordinarily required for its development. In this, Dr. Woodward, like so many other physicians, willfully shuts his eyes to the plain and simple truth which lies at the basis of health and disease. As The Times has frequently stated, if a person's blood is in a perfectly healthy condition, he can no more contract a disease than you can set fire to a pile of iron filings. If, however, impurities lurk in the blood—if there are wooden shavings among the filings—they will burn, when a match is applied, until they are consumed. The size of the fire will depend upon the amount of shavings in the pile. Probably, in civilized lands, not one person in 10,000 has blood in an absolutely pure condition, and then, usually, only after a severe illness, which has burned up the effete matter. Some, however, who observe the laws of health and do not clog their digestive organs with morbid matter, have blood that is comparatively pure, and are able to withstand the results of infection. They do not catch a disease while other around them fall victims.

There is no mystery about this thing. It is so plain that "he who runs may read." Most of the doctors, however, do not read it or, perhaps, if they do, they won't admit it, because, if everyone should read this simple lesson and follow it out, there would be little use for doctors.

To Avoid Catching Cold.

A NEW YORK doctor recently had some sensible remarks in the New York Sun on how to avoid catching cold, which he declares is not a matter of temperature but of physical condition, fatigue causing more colds than all the draughts that blow. He believes that three-fourths of our people wear too heavy clothes in cold weather and recommends two light suits of underwear instead of one heavy garment. He says:

"Imperfect digestion may have impoverished his blood, and he must forswear gastronomic indulgence and eat only food that will make pure blood. The first plunge into wintry air, out of a warm house, will always make a man gasp, and drive the blood from the surface to the inner fortresses in the big veins and arteries and around the vital parts of the body, but, if the circulation is good, the reaction will follow almost immediately and the blood will flow back to the surface with a rush, producing a fine tingling glow.

"In order to bring about this happy condition, a man must take care of his body and encourage his circulation. Pure air, wholesome food, plenty of exercise, frequent bathing and ventilation of the skin, and avoidance of sweltering clothes will put the average man where he can defy any winter weather this cimate can produce. If his nose and fingers do get cold temporarily in extreme cases, they will warm up quickly and general internal chilliness will be unknown to him.

"Our houses and offices are too hot. We all know that, and as far as possible we should remedy it; but, unfortunately, it isn't always possible, especially in an apartment house or office building. When one can't keep the temperature down to some point between 60 and 70 deg. preferably nearer 60 deg. than 70 deg.—one must grin and bear it and do what one can to counteract the injury. At least, let the air be pure. Foul air is worse than a draught. Indeed, if a man is in prime condition, a draught ought not to harm him. One great physician of a past generation used to turn cold draughts of air on different sections of a patient's body until he got the patient in a condition where he could endure the cold current on his whole body.

"Few persons understand how desperately the skin needs ventilation. A large majority of my patients, I believe, do not expose their whole bodies to the air once, from September to June. Now, that is wrong. It would be suicidal for a person who is not used to it to take off all his clothes and loiter in a room at ordinary temperature, but the thing can be done by degrees, and the body needs an air bath at least once a day, if the skin is to do its duty by the blood and nerves. For the same reason, the skin must have a daily water bath. I favor the cold plunge for some persons. I think the warm tub bath should be used occasionally, but a sponge bath, followed by vigorous friction, everybody should have once a day. Cold water is preferable, but that, like the air bath, may be a matter of education. Bathe one portion of the body in tepid water, keeping the rest of the body covered. As the shock lessens with habit, bare more of the body at one time. When you are hardened to exposure to air and tepid water, gradually lower the temperature of the water until you are taking a sponge bath in cold water. That word sponge bath is a misnomer. I hate sponges. They are germ and filth carriers. Use your hands, or, better, a rough wash rag that will create friction and can be boiled between baths. Don't use one wash rag for a week as some people do. The thoughtless uncleanliness of decent people is beyond my comprehension.

"Take the matter of underwear. That's right in line with the cold cure we are discussing. Nine persons out of ten wear soiled underwear next the skin. I admit that laundry bills would keep many, save plutocrats, from changing every day, which is the ideal course, but at least underwear may be well ventilated between wearings. I advise keeping two suits going at once. Wear a suit one day. Put it where it will be well ventilated in fresh air the next day and don a second suit. Alternate the two suits until both are soiled. Then have a new deal. The rule will be worth money to you—but be sure to hang the suit you are not wearing out in the fresh air. Don't tuck it away in a dark closet.

"While we are talking about underwear, wool is unquestionably more conducive to warmth than anything one can wear, but there is absolutely no sense in wearing flannels as thick as a board. If all wool irritates the skin too much, light-weight silk and wool mixture is quite as good. In case a person simply will not wear any wool silk is the next best thing; but most of the physicians will, I think, agree with me that silk and wool is an excellent underwear mixture. Cotton and linen are good conductors of heat. They take the animal heat which the body produces by great effort and carry it away from the body as fast as it is pumped up. Wool, being a poor conductor, allows the body to preserve its warmth for its own purposes."

Deadly Drugs.

A CONFIRMATION of what was said last week regarding the evil effects produced by many of the popular drugs, recently occurred in San Bernardino, where a man shot himself because he was absolutely incapable of refraining from the use of cocaine. It is high time that this question of the wholesale poisoning of our population through the medium of drugs, patent medicines or soda fountain drinks should be taken up and investigated, or the next generation is likely to be largely composed of weaklings and imbeciles. It is not surprising that insanity is increasing in this country to an alarming extent.

What is Food?

WHAT peculiar ideas some people entertain on the subject of food. A correspondent writes to The Times as follows:

"Please print in next Sunday's Times, an article on what foods eaten make blood. I know a party who wants to get fatter, and wants to know what foods make flesh and blood; also how to cook them."

This correspondent does not want much. She is exceedingly modest—not to say bashful. Merely a treatise on foods, and how to cook them, which is equivalent to about two books of about five hundred pages each, if properly handled.

What does this correspondent suppose that food is, or is eaten for? All foods make flesh and blood, to a greater or less extent, also making heat and force, and most of them making muscle. Otherwise, they would not be foods, for they would not nourish the body. The information sought by this correspondent may be obtained in any of the numerous works on hygiene, most of which may be had for about a dollar apiece.

English View of Christian Science.

CHRISTIAN Science has been attracting a considerable amount of attention in Europe of late. From Germany it is announced that the Emperor has forbidden adherents of the new cult to attend court. This seems to be a mistake, as it is a historical fact that religious movements ripen on persecution. The London Times recently published an article from a correspondent on Christian Science, of which the following is an extract:

"No one can study the literature or the proceedings of the 'Christian Scientists' without very soon becoming aware that the founder's authority is very jealously guarded. Her utterances are law and none other are allowed unless they have been authorized by her. The Bible itself is only to be interpreted in the light of 'Science and Health,' which is co-equal with it. 'Even the scripture,' says Mrs. Eddy, 'gave no direct interpretation of the scientific basis for demonstrating the spiritual principle of healing, until our Heavenly Father saw fit, through the key to the scriptures, in "Science and Health," to unlock this mystery of Godliness.' Perhaps the relative value of the two books in the eyes of Mrs. Eddy is more truly indicated by the fact that she prints 'Science and Health' in capital letters and 'the bible' or 'the scripture' in small ones. No more absolute or unquestionable supremacy was ever claimed for the Papal chair. Indeed, Mrs. Eddy goes very much further. 'No person,' she says, 'can compass or fulfill the individual mission of Jesus of Nazareth. No person can take the place of the author of Science and Health (in capital letters,) the discoverer and founder of Christian Science.' The juxtaposition shows how far she has progressed since the days when she was only on a level with the infant Samuel. Another passage runs thus: 'No one else can drain the cup which I have drunk to the dregs, as the discoverer and teacher of Christian Science; neither can its inspiration be gained without tasting this cup.'

"There is something painfully grotesque and revolting in the appropriation by this American lady of the expression just quoted, with its sublime associations; but it is probable that the incredible arrogance revealed by these and other passages mixed with some pious phrases in 'Retrospection and Introspection' is largely responsible for the success of Christian Science. The history of all impostures, down to the scandals of the modern money market, shows that the more extravagant a claim is the more readily it is believed. A boaster will always find admirers, and the louder he is the larger the admiring crowd, more particularly if he believes in himself. Mrs. Eddy certainly believes in herself, and her admiring crowd is considerable, though not quite so large as it is made to appear."

Lemons as Medicine.

THE following indorsement of the lemon, from a hygienic standpoint, is from an exchange. What is said of the lemon is true of the pomelo—only more so. It should be remembered, however, that for medicinal purposes, lemon juice, when mixed with sugar, loses most of its beneficial effect:

"In some parts of Southern Europe, lemon juice cures diarrhoea when all the usual remedies have lost their effect. In the treatment of intermittent fever and ague the whole plant is often used, branches, twigs, leaves and fruit being made to render an agreeable but effective substitute for quinia. In scurvy or any condition due to vitiated or deficient nutrition, with a consequent breaking down of the normal and healthy condition of the blood, there is no medical agent that equals lemon juice, either as an arrester, preventive or as a curative.

"M. Gerard, the well-known chemist and chief of the Paris Municipal Laboratory, pronounces citric acid a prophylactic against cholera. He experimented on the bacillus of both cholera and typhoid fever, and found that in the acid the microbes cannot live. The same competent authority says that fifteen grains of citric acid added to a quart of tainted water will effectually destroy all germs or microbes. With this view of the beneficial effects of lemon juice he recommends the drinking of lemonade during the prevalence of any disease or during an epidemic.

"Citric acid is believed to owe its great virtue to its strong affinity for and solvent powers over urea, with which it unites to form a soluble salt. Uric acid is the bane of civilized man, and to this chemical body in some form or other we are most indebted for our various forms of rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and kindred diseases. Lemon juice acts most beneficially on many of these cases. The use of lemon juice is increasing. Were lemonade to be more generally used it would be a most efficacious arm in the defeat of intemperance, as physically it removes those agents from the system that lead to a craving for drink. In short, lemon juice has a beneficial effect on the system and preserves the health."

Cure for Chilblains.

A LONG BEACH correspondent sends The Times a simple remedy which she says is efficacious in curing chilblains. It was given to her by an old darky woman in the Southern States. It is to boil turnips in plenty of water, pour off the water and put the feet in the turnips, while they are warm. It is probable that, in this case, the turnips have less to do with the relief experienced by the patient than the warmth of the mixture. Probably carrots, or potatoes, or spinach, or perhaps even sawdust would produce similar effects.

An Argument for the Vegetarians.

VEGETARIANS who object to eating meat, because it involves the slaughter of animals, will doubtless find an argument for their side of the case in an event which recently happened in New York State, where the six-year-old son of a butcher, who would often see his father kill cattle, selected his younger brother for slaughter. No animal at hand, he selected his younger brother. He fastened a rope about the smaller boy's neck, led him to the slaughter-house, fastened the rope through a ring in the floor and drew his head down to the floor. Then, seizing a heavy piece of iron he struck him on the head, knocking him senseless. The young butcher then fastened another rope to his victim's feet, and, turning the windlass to which it was attached, triced his brother's body in the air, feet first. Unable to find a knife in the slaughter-house, he hastened to the house, and asked his mother for one, saying he was playing butcher, and had a cow ready to skin. Suspecting something wrong, the mother hastened to the slaughter-house. She lost no time in lowering the suspended boy, who regained consciousness in about two hours.

To Treat Mental Diseases.

SANATORIA are becoming numerous in Southern California. One of the latest is a sanatorium conducted exclusively for the care and treatment of diseases of the brain and nervous system, established by Dr. John W. Harpster, in the boom hotel building at East San Gabriel. Dr. Harpster believes in isolation in the treatment of the insane. He says:

"The fundamental principle of the treatment of the insane is isolation. This consists in separating the patient from his habitual surroundings, from contact with persons and things familiar to him, among whom he lives, and where his disorder had its birth and development. Nothing is worse than the continuation of his stay amid his family. There is in such case the influence of the family on one side, which is injurious; and on the other hand, the influence of the patient on his family, which is not less hurtful, and often dangerous."

Vaccination.

AN EASTERN physician says that "with proper vaccine matter and with proper cleanliness and asceptic conditions, vaccination is entirely without risk." This may be true, but unfortunately these three conditions cannot always be depended upon.

CHAPTER VII.—THEY REACH THE CRESCENT MOON.

AS THE jolly party sped along through the heavens Tom began to find his eyes bothering him a trifle. Brilliant as many of the sunshiny days had been at home, particularly when the snow was on the ground, nothing so dazzlingly bright as this great golden arc in the sky was getting to be as they approached closer had ever greeted his sight.

"It's blinding!" he cried, his eyes blinking and filling with water as he gazed upon the scene. "I can't stand it. What shall I do, Lefty?"

"Turn your head around and approach it backward," said Lefty. "Then you won't see it."

"But I want to see it," retorted Tom. "What's the use of visiting the moon if you can't see it?"

"Reminds me of a peom I wrote once," put in the Poker. "'What's the Use?' was one of my masterpieces, and maybe if I recite it to you it will help your eyes."

"Bosh!" growled the Bellows, who was beginning to get a little short winded with his labors, and, therefore, a trifle out of temper. "How on earth will reciting your poem help Tom's eyes?"

"Easy enough," returned the Poker haughtily and with a contemptuous glance at the Bellows. "My poem is so much brighter than the moon that the moon will seem dull alongside it."

"Go ahead anyhow," said Tom, interested at once and forgetting his eyes for the moment. "Give us the poem."

"Here goes, then," said the Poker, with a low bow, and then, standing erect, he began. "It is called

WHAT'S THE USE?

What's the use of circuses that haven't any beasts?
What's the use of restaurants that haven't any feasts?

What's the use of oranges that haven't any peels?
What's the use of bicycles that haven't any wheels?

What's the use of railway trains that have no place to go?
What's the use of going to war if you haven't any foe?

What's the use of splendid views for those that cannot see?
What's the use of freedom's flag to folks that aren't free?

What's the use of legs to those who have no wish to walk?
What's the use of languages to those who cannot talk?

What's the use of kings and queens that haven't any throne?
What's the use of having pains unless you're going to groan?

What's the use of anything, however, grand and good,
That doesn't ever, ever work the way it really should?"

"Humph!" panted the Bellows, "you don't call that bright, do you?"

"I do, indeed," said the Poker. "And I call it bright because I know it's bright. It is so bright that not a magazine in all the world would dare print it, because they'd never be able to do as well again, and people would say the magazine wasn't as good as it used to be."

"What nonsense," retorted the Bellows. "Why, I could blow a mile of poetry like that in ten minutes.

What's the use of churches big that haven't any steeples?
What's the use of nations great that haven't any peoples?

What's the use of oceans grand that haven't any beaches?
What's the use of Delawares that haven't any peaches?

What's the use—"

"Oh, shut up, Wheezy," interrupted the Poker, angrily. "Of course you can go on like that forever, once somebody gives you the idea, but to have the idea in the beginning was the big thing. Columbus was a great man for coming to America, but every foreigner who has come over since isn't, not by a long shot. As I say in my celebrated rhyme on 'Greatness:'

The greatest man in all the world, by far the greatest one,
Is he who goes ahead and does what no one else has done.
But he must be the first if he would rank as some 'potaters,'
For those who follow after him are merely imitators."

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the Bellows. "You are a great chap, Pokey—you, with your poetry. I hope Tom isn't going to be affected by the lessons you teach. The idea of saying that a man is the greatest man in the world because he does what no one else has done! I guess nobody's never eaten bricks up to now. Do you mean to say that if Tom here ate a brick he'd be the greatest man in the world?"

"No; he'd be a cannibal," put in the Rightandiron, desirous of stopping the quarrel between the rivals.

"How do you make that out?" demanded the Bellows.

"Because Tom is a brick himself," explained the Rightandiron; and just then slap! bang! the party plunged head first into what appeared to be—and in fact, really was—a huge snowbank.

"Hurrah! Here we are!" cried Lefty, gleefully.

"Wh-where are we?" Tom sputtered, blowing the snow out of his mouth and shaking it from his coat and hair and ears.

"Hi, there! Look out!" roared Righty, grabbing Tom by the coat sleeve and yanking him off to one side. A terrible swishing sound fell upon the lad's ears, and as he gazed doggedly about him to see what had caused it he saw a great golden toboggan whizzing down into the valley, and then slipping up the hill on the other side.

"You had a narrow escape that time," said Righty, as they excitedly watched the toboggan speeding on its way, and which, by the way, was filled with a lot of little youngsters no bigger than Tom himself, children of all colors, apparently, red, white and blue, green, yellow and black. "If I hadn't yanked you away you'd have been run over."

"But where are we?" Tom asked, bewildered by the experience.

"We're on the Crescent Moon at last," said Lefty. "It's the boss toboggan slide of the universe."

"A toboggan slide?" cried Tom.

"The very same," said the Poker. "Didn't you know that this dazzling whiteness of the Crescent Moon is merely the reflection of the sun's light on the purest white snow? It's too high up for dust and dirt here, you see, and so the snow is always clean, and so, equally of course, is dazzling white."

"But the tobogganning?" asked Tom.

"It's like swinging and letting the old cat die," explained the Rightandiron. "You see, it's this shape, and he marked the crescent form of the moon on the snow and lettered the various points as follows:

"Now," he continued, "you start your toboggan at A and whizz down to C. When you get there you have gathered speed enough to take you up the hill to B. Then of its own weight the toboggan slides back to D, from which it again moves forward to E, and so it keeps on sliding back and forth until finally it comes to a dead stop at C. Isn't that a fine arrangement?"

"Magnificent," said Tom. "And do they call it tobogganing here?"

"No," said Righty, "it's called oscillating, and the machine is known as the oscycle——"

"Don't confound it with the icicle," put in the Bellows.

"Oh, I know what an icicle is," said Tom. "It's a spear of ice that hangs from a piazza roof."

"That's what it is at home," said the Poker, "but not here, my lad. Here an icicle is a bicycle with runners instead of wheels."

"But what makes it go?" demanded Tom.

"Pedals, of course," returned the Poker. "You just tread away on the pedals, as if you were riding on a bicycle, and the chain sets a dozen ice picks revolving that shove you over the ice like the wind. Oh, it's great sport!"

Another rush and roar of a passing toboggan caused them to pause in their conversation for a moment, and then Tom turned his attention to the diagram Righty had drawn on the snow.

"Suppose you didn't stop at B and go back—what would happen?" he asked as he considered the possible dangers of this wonderful new sport.

"You'd fall over the edge, of course," said the Poker.

"I see that," said Tom. "But if you fell over the edge what would become of you? Where would you land?"

"If you had luck you wouldn't land anywhere," said Righty. "The chances are, however, you'd fall back on the earth again. Maybe in Canada, possibly in China, perhaps in Egypt. It would all depend on the time of night."

"And wouldn't you be killed?" Tom asked.

"Not if you had your rubbers on," said Righty. "If you had your rubbers on it would only jar you slightly. You'd just hit the earth and then bounce back again, but there's no use of talking about that, because it never happened but once. It happened to a chap named Blenkinsop, who took an Oscillator that hadn't any brake on it. He was one of those smart fellows that want to show how clever they are. He whizzed down one side and up the other, and pouf! First thing he knew he was flying off into space."

"And what became of him?" demanded Tom.

"He had the luck not to hit anything, but he suffered just the same," said Righty. "He flew on until he got to a point where he was held fast up in the air by the force of gravity of 1600 different planets, and he's there yet. At a distance he looks like another new star, but when you get close to him he's nothing more than just a plain, every-day Smarty."

"I should think he'd starve to death," said Tom, as he reflected on the horrid fate of Blenkinsop.

"He would if he had any appetite," said the Bellows. "But he hasn't. He's so worried all the time that he can't eat, so he gets along very well without food."

"Let's quit talking now," suggested the Poker, "and get a ride, eh?"

"I'm ready," said Tom eagerly. "Where do we start?"

"There's the station up on the hill. It's only about 700 miles. We can walk it in a year," said Righty.

"I move we take this cloud that's coming up," said the Bellows. "I'm winded."

Tom looked in the direction in which the Bellows had pointed, and, sure enough, there was a cloud coming slowly along, shaped very much like a trolley car, and on the front of it, as it drew nearer, the lad was soon able to discern the funny little figure of a Brownie acting as motorman.

"Why, it's really a trolley!" he cried.

"Certainly it is!" laughed Righty. "Didn't you know that? When you have watched the moon from your window at home and seen constant lines of clouds passing up to it and stopping before its face night after night what did you suppose they did it for? Fun? I guess not. They're clever people up here, these moonfolk are, and they make use of everything going. They've taken these electric clouds and turned 'em into a sort of Sky Traction company, and instead of letting 'em travel all around the universe doing nothing and raising thunder generally some of the richer Brownies have formed a company to control them."

By this time the cloud had reached the point where our little party stood, and the motorman, the Bellows's signal, brought it to a

"Step lively, please," the conductor cried end.

Tom and the two Andirons and the Poker clambered aboard.

The conductor clanged a bell. The his wheel and the cloud moved rapidly on.

And what a queer crowd of folks there that strange trolley cloud. Tom had never interesting group before.

THE PLANDUC TAKES A CLASS IN FISHING.

The Planduc is a small deer of Borneo, and it is well that he is the possessor of a bright mind. One he called the other animals, the Horse, the Bull, Carabao, the Rat, the Cat, the Elephant, the Mon- the Parrot, the Snake and many others and said to "Provide yourselves with hooks and lines, and teach you all how to fish." Then he got a boat when they all came with their tackle, took them and instructed them in the art of fishing. They a good catch, and when they returned with it, a kiln in which to dry the fish.

they made ready for another fishing trip the at once arose who should watch the drying fish the rest were gone. The choice finally fell upon Horse. They had not been gone long when a great, hairy giant called Agasi, who lived in the moun- forest, came up and said:

Hello, Horse! What are you doing here?"

"Not at all. My parents fed on grass, but I have adopted a fish diet, and now I live on them almost entirely."

"Well, at any rate, your wants are small compared with mine. Two or three hundred fish are a meal for you, but that many thousand are scarcely enough for me."

"But these belong to my friends, who are now away fishing."

"Well, I am also your friend, and I need them more than the others," said Agasi, helping himself. This gave the Bull a new idea, and he asked:

"Where do you live?"

"About four hours' walk from here."

"Well, I will go home with you."

"No, you cannot; no one can come to my house. It is built in a tree, and is not like a man's house."

"Do you mean that it is in the top of a tree?"

"No, it is inside a big, hollow tree."

"Oh, no matter; I'll go."

"Every one that goes there I kill and eat."

"But you have just said I am your friend. Surely you would not kill a friend."

"Well, come along, if you wish," said Agasi, setting off at a round pace, with the Bull running as hard as he could after him.

After traveling three hours, the Bull was exhausted, and had to lie down to rest. When he got up Agasi was gone, so he returned to the fish kiln. When the others returned and asked for the fish, the Bull said:

"The giant was too big for me. Why, he was eight fathoms high. I tried to follow him to his house, so we could go and catch him, but he went so far and fast I gave out, and had to come back."

"Well," said the Planduc, "you have all tried and failed. Now, since I have taught you how to fish, I will stay and show you how to keep the fish. The Cat also has a good head, and he shall stay with me."

So the Cat and Planduc stayed, and the others went to their fishing again. When Agasi came he saw the Cat, and said:

"Hello, Cat; what are you doing?"

"Helping the Planduc watch the fish," replied the Cat.

"Oh, yes, there is the Planduc, sure enough. Well, I will just take the fish," said Agasi, beginning to eat, without more words.

"Look here, Agasi," said the Planduc, "do you feel

"Yes, I feel a wind."

"Do you see that big, black cloud?" asked the Plunduc, pointing to a cloud overhead.

"Yes, I see it; but what of it?"

"Well, there is going to be a storm, worse than you ever saw. I know the look of it. A hundred years ago there was one just like this. I ran as hard as I could for three hours, and just managed to get out of it. But all my friends were killed. There is a great whirling wind that will lift you up and dash you to the ground, and the water will wash you away."

"Let us run away, then," said Agasi, who was now trembling so that he could hardly stand.

"Impossible. It is now too close upon us."

"What shall we do?" asked Agasi, jumping about.

"If you will keep cool and do as I say, I will save you, although you have stolen our fish so often," said the Planduc.

"Tell me what to do, and I will be your friend always."

"Well the only thing you can do is to let me tie you tight to a big tree that is strong enough to stand the wind, and then neither the wind nor the water can carry you away."

Agasi readily agreed, so they hunted a big tree, and he stood with his back against it while the Planduc and the Cat began to tie him to it with a piece of rattan. They tied his legs and body and arms, all the time telling him of the terrors of the coming storm.

"Tie me good and tight," said Agasi, "so I cannot be torn away."

Then they put the rope around his neck, and the Planduc said: "Now, we will give you a tight haul on this, and I am sure you will be safe." So they put a stick in the loop of the rope, and began twisting it to tighten it about his neck, and by swinging on to the end of the stick they made the rope so tight that Agasi was choked to death. When the others came back and found their fish all right, they said:

"Well, the giant didn't come, did he?"

"Oh, yes, he came," said the Planduc.

"But here are the fish. What did you do with him?"

"Oh, he is tied to a tree over here."

"You are lying to us," said the Horse and Carabao and Monkey and Bull all in one breath.

"Very well, if you do not believe me, come and see," retorted the Planduc.

So they all ran to the tree, and, sure enough, there was the giant stone dead. Then they cut the rattan and let him fall down. When they measured him they found he was seven fathoms tall.

HOME-MADE PING-PONG.

FULL DIRECTIONS FOR MANUFACTURING AND PLAYING TABLE TENNIS.

By a Special Contributor.

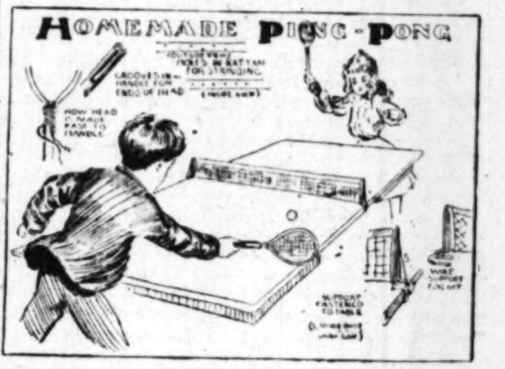
Of all the indoor games that the writer has tried—and he has tackled about all of them—none have proved such jolly good fun as table tennis, or as the English call it, "ping-pong."

A first-class ping-pong outfit with two rackets that are perfect little tennis rackets on a small scale, will cost about $4 at the shop. When it comes to a very cheap set you can probably make at home just as good an outfit and maybe better.

First, as to the rackets. In England the kind most favored have centers of parchment like a drumhead, from which the ball rebounds with that humming ping-pong sound which gives the game its name.

The writer prefers the string racket. Pieces of rattan soaked a while in steaming hot water to make them very supple make good racket frames. A wooden handle hollowed out at the end with grooves for the rattan frame to fit in is simply constructed, as shown in the diagram above. In stringing, the string used on a banjo would be about right. Two strings for each racket should be enough.

These strings should be thoroughly soaked and then used while still wet. Do not string too tight, for if you do when the strings dry and shrink they will pull the frame all out of shape. String first across and then up and down exactly as in a regulation racket. In making a support for your net a couple of yards of heavy telegraph wire will answer. Take each length and double and bend into shape shown in the diagram. This of itself may not be quite stanch enough to hold the net taut, but by running a cord from the top of one wire support down and under the table to the top of the other support, you should be able to obtain the necessary amount of rigidity. The net itself should be about six inches high from the table, and should clear the table by enough to allow the ball to pass easily under it. Any material will do for the net though a guaze or netting of some kind bound at the top, with an inch or two of white tape is best. As to the table itself, it should be simply a smooth and flat surface about 5x10 feet, or say 4x8 feet.



DIRECTIONS FOR PLAYING.

The game is played exactly as tennis is played, except that there is but one court on either side of the net. If the ball strikes the very edge of table and so bounces off in such a way that a return is impossible, call it an "edger," and serve over again.

The method of scoring is the same as in tennis. One rule of the old game which is barred because of the narrow bounds is volleying. A ball can never be returned, except on the bounce. Pickups, however, are allowable. Another strict ruling of ping-pong is that no overhand strokes are allowed; the hand must never be raised above the height of the elbow. Also, the serve must be delivered from a point beyond the end of the table.

A NOVELTY IN RACKETS.

The tennis experts and all-round athletes have devised a new sort of racket that makes of this parlor game a rather strenuous and exciting affair.

The racket is simply a wooden paddle of about the same outside dimensions as the ping-pong strung racket; that is, about six inches in diameter—roughly speaking—the handle being of any desired length.

The paddle part is not of one piece with the handle, as it would break or split too easily. The handle is spliced on. The paddle—on one side or both—according to how you play, is covered with emery cloth or paper glued on carefully. With this rough surface you can cut the ball or give the "Lawford" stroke in splendid fashion.

As to balls, the best are those made of celluloid, which can be bought at any sporting or toy store for a few cents apiece.

This ping-pong is really a great game and we think it has come to stay.

LANGUAGES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

A compilation of considerable interest has just been brought out by Dr. R. N. Cust, LLD., the well-known oriental scholar. It takes the form of a complete list of the languages and dialects spoken and written in the British empire at the close of the nineteenth century. The total number of these is 204, of which eighty-five are furnished by Asia, fifty-eight by Africa and thirty by Oceania. Among the tongues included in this list are many which are directly unfamiliar to the "man in the street." India, for example, furnishes Khowar (Chitral,) Kortha (Assam,) and Lepcha (Thibet frontier;) then from the Celebes Islands comes Alfnor, from the Island of Zanzibar Pokomo, from Sierra Leone, Bullom, and from the Niger territory Igbira. The language spoken in the Hudson Bay district is called Kri, in New Brunswick, Malisit, and in British Guiana, Acawoio. In the Friendly Islands the inhabitants wish one another a Merry Christmas in Tonga, while at Port Moresby, they do so in Roro.—[London News.

HOW A RATE WAR WORKS.

James J. Hill, the railroad magnate, says, in regard to the effects of competition, that commercial wars between roads really result in higher tariffs. "They cut each other to the heart," said he, "and then patch up an agreement whereby everything is higher than ever. The rebate system is a part of competitive warfare, and you know the rates the general shipper gets thereby. He pays the freight which the large shipper has dodged. Roads are bound to hustle for business, and they will do much to secure the patronage of a large shipper."—[Baltimore Sun.

CURLS ARE COMING.

THE REIGN OF RINGLETS HAS BEGUN IN THE OLD WORLD.

Paris Letter in London Mail.

THE reign of curls has begun. New coiffures have arrived, and if the modern woman would be fashionable she must forget the waved hair that rolls back from the face and is drawn tightly upward from the nape of the neck, must let her ever-ardent love for the knob that has traveled from neck to forehead become past history, and must fix all her affections upon curls.

Curls as drooping ringlets there, as little kiss curls here, and as clustering masses of soft tendrils that mean to fascinate every one represent the dernier mot in coiffures, and the Parisienne, knowing (who better?) that to be well dressed in this respect is more than half way toward that goal, perfectly habited in all ways, is making all haste to show courtesy to the new régime. It is from the days of Louis XVI. that these new coiffures come, and the soft curls and ringlets they bring with them are acknowledged as the daintiest and prettiest of frames, both for the young débutante and the matron. I send sketches to you of the models that are going to lead the fashion here—a front view and a back.

For evening wear the dressing of the latest coiffure is arranged very low upon the neck, making even more marked the contrast between the new fashion and that which has just departed. Then all the hair was carried upward. Now all tends downward, even that around the face, which hangs in little cudls over the temple and ears. Not that loose waving has quite disappeared, however; a glimpse is still possible, but it is ousted from its position of prominence, though the continuance of a vague side parting in front, not too visible, is graciously offered for individual choice. Fashion does not make a rigid law in Paris. If one would rather, the parting may be down the center, or it may not exist at all, though there is fear in this latter case that the coiffure may lose much of its twentieth-century distinction.

With front strand of hair loosely waved and well set up on the head, the ends drawn to one side, comes the opportunity for the side parting. And the hair on either side forms itself into loose little ringlets and kiss curls that tumble down one over the other until the ears are nearly covered. Then the long hair from the top of the head, prettily waved with large loose undulations, flows down the back of the head, and just below the middle all is drawn together, tied, and the new dressing arranged.

A number of little finger rolls compose the upper part of this. They are not arranged in rows or sets, but with a wonderful charm of apparent carelessness, while escaping from this cluster of puffs and rolls fall some three, four, or five curls that swing attractively with every movement, and bring an old-time fascination with them that is most alluring. Just how much of the hair at the sides of the face is curled depends upon the ambition of the wearer, for while some are loath to acknowledge short hair at the sides and have but a slight veiling of short curls and ringlets over the long background of hair that goes waving toward the back, others are luxuriating in the freedom of the new coiffure and wear a thick mass of short curls, some of which even dangle down behind the ear. They recall the ringlets of the days of coquetry and vapors, when women were not the Amazons they are now, but delicate to fragility.

With the evening coiffure the shower of curls is usually seen, when some curls from the back dressing rest lightly on either shoulder. Not as a long, hard-looking ringlet that hangs determinedly, but as a fugitive trying to escape from the bondage of confinement whose rather ruffled ends peep gracefully over the shoulder line. Soft puffs caught up with large pins rather than rolls fashion the dressing, and a long coil of hair that twists up again carries it down to its lowest point.

Thick horizontal rolls, one dropping down lower from beneath the other, is a fancy that may be preferred if strict attention be duly given to the front of the coiffure. Here the centerpiece is of loosely-waved hair, mounting up high above the forehead. Ornamental pins, large or small, fix it in position; then on either side of the face comes a succession of little horizontal curls, mingling with others that bob about over the face, suggestive in themselves of laughter and merriment.

The whole effect is dainty in the extreme, especially with fair-toned hair. When tresses are almost black the side curls should be arranged with great discretion. But it is difficult to decide what is best for the new shade of hair that is trying to force its way into fashionable recognition. Picture tresses of the old-fashioned maroon color, plentifully mixed with black, and you get the peculiar shade that is occasionally to be seen among those who would exhibit the very last new thing in France's capital.

The milliners naturally compose all their hats to suit the new dressings, and in many the salient features are a drooping plume rising from a pearl boss, such as one illustration demonstrates, and a smart knot of taffetas hanging on the hair after the fashion of another pictured scheme.

Flatness is the general tendency of all the first spring millinery, but there is an idea in the air that the summer will see crowns made a prominent feature again. The opposite extreme has reigned long enough for a change to prove acceptable. Probably it will arrive at first in a tentative manner, aided by tall adornments among which one, the waving Paradise plume, is already an accomplished fact.

Jess: Awfully so. She can't force her way through a crowd of women at all."—[Memphis Scimetar.

A BASKET LUNCHEON.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ENTERTAINMENTS SUITABLE TO THE POST-LENTEN SEASON.

By a Special Contributor.

Soon the heavy, ashen-gray curtains of Lent will swing back and society will arise from her sackcloth and ashes of the forty-day meditation time, and emerge once more into the gay round of dinners, dances, luncheons and receptions.

The joyous Eastertide is perhaps the occasion of more luncheons than any other festival, and there seem to be countless pretty ideas that may be worked out in this connection. Every hostess likes to have something new to offer her guests despite the fact that Solomon, conceded to be the wisest man of his time, informs us that there is nothing new under the sun.

In giving any kind of an affair, be it elaborate or simple, it is always best to strike a keynote and keep it. Harmony in entertaining is, in its way, quite as important as in music or art. Indeed, entertaining is in itself a fine art, and may be made either a discord or a symphony—and there sometimes lies but the difference of one note between the two.

What could be prettier for the Easter entertaining than a basket luncheon or dinner, the motif of decoration and menu being carried out in delicate straw color? In flowers the California hostess has so many from which to make her selection that she need never be at a loss to evolve some artistic decoration, though of all the sweet blossoms that make their début in the glad spring time none are prettier or more suggestive of the joyous Eastertide than the beautiful little cream and gold fresias, a species of lily, the pale gold jonquils or daffodils, and the creamy narcissus.

If the table is a round one, which is ever to be recommended when obtainable, a large rustic basket caught with a huge bow of straw-colored satin ribbon, and overflowing with the fragrant fresias, intermingled with sprays of asparagus plumosus and maiden-hair ferns, form an effective centerpiece. Across the table through the center may be laid a broad sash of pale straw-colored liberty satin ribbon, terminating in chic French bows or being marked by arching-handled be-ribboned baskets of fresias and ferns or ferns alone if preferred. At a radius of perhaps twelve or eighteen inches describe a circle with small crystal vases, each holding a few delicate blossoms and fern sprays, while a few lacy fern fronds scattered over the cloth will add to the dainty effect. It must be remembered that this outer circle should be lower than the centerpiece, as the general effect must be of a slope from a central point.

If, as is usually the case, candles are desired, they should be chosen of palest yellow or green and sticks of old brass, silver, or wrought iron may be used. Silken poppy shades are by far the prettiest, although those fashioned of crepe paper and caught with asparagus fern sprays are pretty. A charming effect may be produced by placing an inner circle of tiny "Christmas tree" candles in among the flowers and ferns.

If there is a chandelier directly over the table, a basket filled with fresias and ferns should be suspended by satin ribbons from it. I saw such a pretty, though simple, arrangement for a chandelier not long ago at a smart débutante reception that I thought it worth making note of. It was entirely concealed by dozens of sprays of asparagus plumosus, while caught in among the feathery green were fluffy "chrysanthemums" of pale green narrow satin ribbon loops, one rosette being joined to another by a careless looping of ribbon. In either green or straw color this would be charmingly effective for the basket luncheon.

In case the table is oblong instead of round, a pretty effect may be obtained by arranging the flowers and ferns through the center in a kind of low, flower bed style, higher and wider in the center, tapering gradually down toward the ends. Little fairy lamps or miniature candles twinkling saucily among the blossoms, will be found a great addition.

In the decoration of the buffet one must of course be governed by its style, for this varies so that what would be pretty for one might be utterly impossible for another. However, the habit of the flower chosen should always be studied and the scheme of decoration made to conform. With fresias this would mean more broad, low effects, while with the jonquil or narcissus rather high effects are pretty, the length of the slender, graceful stalk adding much. Spiraea, if obtainable, is one of the most beautiful and exquisitely dainty blooms for decoration where cream or lemon tints are desired. A mantel or buffet banked with this is a veritable dream. The long, trailing tendrils of the asparagus sprengeri make it particularly desirable for mantel decoration, and a fireplace filled with it is pretty. If a frieze about the walls is attempted there is nothing prettier than sprays of feathery bamboo or tufted grasses. Baskets of flowers hanging in doorways or caught about the walls may be often used satisfactorily.

In any of the novelty stores now one can purchase for 5 cents apiece or 50 cents a dozen, the tiny splint orange-wood baskets, which tied with little butterfly bows and filled with salted nuts or bon bons, make the daintiest of favors. If ordered before hand, any up-to-date confectioner can make short, thin sticks of candy in any color desired, and a bundle of these tied together with ribbon and laid in the tiny market or "chip" baskets, give you an ideal basket of faggots!

In carrying out the straw-colored motif no more appropriate place cards can be chosen than those of orange wood, shaved to paper thinness. When decorated in sepia heads, lettered in gold, and tied with smart bows of straw-colored ribbon, nothing prettier can be imagined. If desiring to add the menu, two tied together in booklet form, the menu being inscribed upon the second in fantastic lettering, make odd and pretty souvenirs. Cards of yucca fiber, a parchment-like substance made from the yucca tree or Spanish bayonet, make very quaint cards. Before this material can be painted upon it must be smoothly sand-papered.

If for a child's party the baskets may be filed with candy eggs, while Easter eggs bearing the suggestion was indulged in as to new buildings. When the hotel came to be done over the ladies accomplished their wishes as to the interior decoration. Before the erection of the new Mayo business block, now nearly complete, a certain influence suspected to have sprung from a source not far from Dr. Mayo's own household, is credited with having teased for the same architect who planned the new Dewey Hall of the Norwich University, and got him. Listen to the voice of benighted woman expressing her thoughts upon municipal estheticism through the person of the High School preceptress, Miss Angie Badger:

"Every one who approaches the new Mayo block from across the common will be satisfied with the space relations of the windows, with the general effect of the arches rising above the lintels, and the wide but light cornice over all. As he comes nearer he will not be disappointed to find the substantial decorations genuine granite, and the cornice a copy of an ancient Roman combination of rich Greek moldings and acanthus scroll. Those who visit the newly-frescoed halls of the Northfield house will be satisfied with the subdued color harmony. No matter if it did cost more than so many yards of impossible wall paper roses and vines, the esthetic influence it will have on all who go there is worth more than money."

THORNHAM IRON WORKS.

A UNIQUE INDUSTRY, FOUNDED AND MANAGED BY A WOMAN AND WITH A GROWING TRADE.

[London Mail:] The village of Thornham, lying between Hunstanton and Brancaster, is one of the most interesting spots in Norfolk. Projecting prominently from the roof of one of the ordinary dwellings in the ancient, solitary village street is a strange iron sign representing two sons of Tubal Cain hammering zealously upon an anvil, with the inscription "Thornham Ironworks" beneath.

This unpretentious dwelling is probably the strangest iron works in the country, if not in the world. Herein are manufactured, by hand labor, some of the most beautiful specimens of iron work and repoussé, from huge gates to delicate table decorations, strongly reminiscent of the medieval times of England.

Another peculiar feature of this quaint village industry is that it is controlled by a lady—Mrs. Ames-Lynde—who not only superintends the actual working, but prepares the designs herself. Mrs. Ames-Lynde is a zealous artist, with a distinct tendency toward the Italian school, and frequently visits Italy and other continental art centers for photographs and matériel for her designs.

The Thornham Iron Works were started twelve years ago, in a very unostentatious manner, in the village schoolroom, Mrs. Ames-Lynde being assisted in her work by the schoolmaster. The village boasted at that time 550 inhabitants, and the leading members of this little community attended the classes, which were held in the evening, two or three times a week. At first the work was entirely devoted to bent iron work, but, artistic though this industry proved, it was soon discovered that to make it thoroughly interesting, the forge would have to be utilized.

In view of this fact, a house was secured for conversion into a workshop, replete with all the implements incidental to the iron worker's calling. At first the regular workmen numbered two, but the business developed so quickly that now there are some half a dozen forges at work, with several skilled mechanics and apprentices, while the staff also now includes an artist and a photographer.

The work of this curious factory soon attracted attention on account of its excellence and artistic character. The King was the first to patronize it, by commissioning a lamp for the hall at Sandringham and a bracket for Shembourne Church, while recently a large gate has been manufactured at Thornham for the entrance to the grounds surrounding His Majesty's Norfolk home.

Today the products of the Thornham factory have gained a widespread reputation. Now there are more orders in hand than the limited resources of the works will permit being accomplished as expeditiously as is desirable. At the residence of Sir Dighton Probyn, at Park House, Sandringham, may be seen a fine medieval-looking lamp made at the Thornham works, while at the entrance to the grounds of Somerset Beaumont's home at Wiseton, Bawtry, is a splendid specimen of the Thornham handicraft, in the form of a massive gate, fashioned after the Italian style.

Mrs. Ames-Lynde does not confine her energies to the manufacture of gates and similar work entirely, but designs the repoussé work for table and other decoration. The designs are executed by hand throughout, and in some instances are of a very laborious description. In the making of a gate, for instance, containing liberal floral designs, every petal has to be formed separately and then welded on.

One of Mrs. Ames-Lynde's greatest achievements was the fulfillment of an order given by the Royal Commission for the Royal Pavilion at the Paris Exhibition of 1900. In this work the King himself evinced an intimate interest.

A STRANGE BIBLICAL STORY.

A Rome correspondent writes that the Corriere della Sera, the leading journal of South Italy, publishes the following extraordinary piece of news:

"On July 13, 1879, there died at Jerusalem an aged hermit named Core, who in his lifetime was reputed to be a saint. Having left behind him a small fortune, the Governor sought out his relatives and handed them f.200,000 in the coinage of various countries which had been found in the cave where the hermit had lived for many years. Together with this money the relatives received certain documents which they were unable to decipher. Some time later several learned Hebraists had an opportunity of examining them and then discovered, to their surprise, that they were written in very ancient Hebrew. On deciphering the documents, they read: 'Peter the Fisherman, servant of Jesus, Son of Mary, thus speaks to the people in the name and by the will of the Lord.' And the epistle ended: 'I, Peter the Fisherman, in the name of Jesus, and in the ninetieth year of my life, have decided to write these words of love, three Paschs after the death of my Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, Son of Mary, in the house of Bolier, near to the Lord's temple.' The savants concluded that the manuscript dated from the days of Peter, both on account of its archaic form and because St. Mark, in his gospel, says that the venerable apostle wished to pen an epistle to those to whom it is attributed (!) The London Bible Society is of the same opinion, and after having submitted the palimpsest to expert examination, is now offering 400,000 lire to the hermit's heirs for its acquisition."—[London Chronicle.

POMPEII.

Pompeii is the cleanest city we have seen in Italy. It is swept and garnished; the pavements are as neatly kept as a Dutch kitchen, and there is no filth or dirt or smells in any of the houses. This is perhaps due to the fact that it has no inhabitants, but it is nevertheless a matter of surprise and satisfaction that any town in Italy should be clean. Pompeii is about fifteen miles from Naples, and can be reached by a carriage in about three hours or by rail in an hour. Most people go by rail, but the carriage drive is more interesting, because it takes you through a busy part of the city of Naples and a series of villages so close together that one cannot detect the boundary lines. The people along the route are all working in the streets, polishing and drilling coral for necklaces and other ornaments, carving intaglios and canoes, making ornaments of seashells and pieces of mother-of-pearl, and engaged in other and less delicate occupations, such as shoemaking, cabinetmaking, washing and ironing, cooking, knitting and other forms of household work. The people of the tenements use the sidewalks for a kitchen as well as a dining-room and drawing-room, and there is a cluster of women around every doorway and a group of dirty children playing in every gutter, regardless of the unspeakable filth and the smells which rise to heaven.—[Chicago Record-Herald.

CONFISCATION IN MOROCCO.

It is a custom in Morocco that all the property of an official reverts at death to the crown. The logic which leads to such a result is simple, for the government argues that all fortunes thus accumulated consist of moneys illegally retained by the authorities. A Governor when appointed is probably possessed of no considerable fortune. When he dies he may be a millionaire. Whence came this wealth? Squeezed most certainly from the tribes under his authority, and therefore amassed only by the prerogatives of the position in which the Sultan had placed him. It has never struck the Moorish government that these great fortunes might more honorably be returned to the people from whom they were stolen. The result is entire confiscation to the crown, including often such private property as his Governor may have been possessed of before his appointment, and not selom, too, of the property of his relatives.

When the mighty fall in Morocco the crash brings down with them their families, even uncles and cousins and all connected with them, and it is not seldom that the sons of great Governors, who have been brought up in the luxury of slaves and horses and retinues of mounted men, have to go begging in the streets.—[Blackwood's Magazine.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY MARTYR.

A touching story of the early days of the mutiny is told of the Allahabad massacre. Seven cadets just out from England were murdered before they had time to join their regiments. The eighth, a boy of 16, was left for dead, but survived, in spite of horrible wounds, for four days, hiding himself in a ravine. On the fifth day he was discovered, dragged to the native lines and thrust into a hut as a prisoner.

He found there a Christian catechist, who had been formerly a Mahometan, and who was being tortured by the Sepoys to make him renounce his faith. The catechist's courage had given way, but the gallant English lad—himself only 16 years of age—urged the unhappy catechist: "Don't deny Christ! Never deny Christ!" Neill reached Allahabad in time to rescue both catechist and ensign. But the ensign, Arthur Cheek, died of his wounds four days after Neill's arrival.—[The Great Mutiny.

THE ITALIAN GIRL.

HER BONDAGE AND LIBERTY—WHAT SHE READS AND HOW SHE MAKES LOVE.

[Household Words:] The popular English notion of the Italian girl appears to be limited to the idea of a picturesque little creature in a short frock of brilliant colors, with a folded white handkerchief lying flat on her head. This person is as typical of the average Italian girl as the man in the kilt is of the average Highlander. Only in the remoter country districts, on festival days, or among the artists' models on the steps of the Piazza di Spagna, are Italian girls clad in this primitive costume to be found now. The ordinary Italian girl of today is hardly distinguishable from the English or American girl in the general character of her dress. Her physical type has no doubt points of difference. She is fuller in figure, and darker in complexion, her eyes and eyelashes, as well as her hair, are blacker, and, except when she is partly of English or American blood (a frequent occurrence among the Italian aristocracy,) she is not usually so tall. The best types of Italian women are, certainly, no less beautiful than the best types of their foreign sisters, and among the examples of mixed Latin and Angl-Saxon races there are, undoubtedly, to be found in Italy some of the very finest living specimens of female loveliness.

The Poor Italian Girl.

The education and training of the Italian girl differ in various respects from the education and training of a girl in England, in America, or even in France. If she is born of the humbler classes, the difference is not so noticeable. The little piazzas are her playground while she is a child, and when she is a girl in service she may walk bareheaded and unattended about the streets. In her early teens she spends her holidays at the osterias, outside the walls of the city, where she dances to the music of the mandolin with the young waiter from the restaurant, who is her devoted lover for the day. When she marries, she has children in quick succession, and grows old very rapidly. Thus the Italian girl, in the humbler condition of life, has little to distinguish her from the girl born and brought up in the East End of London, who learns to dance to the tunes of the Italian organ in the blind alleys of Whitechapel or Clerkenwell, spends her August holidays with her coster boy on Hampstead Heath, and when she marries him becomes his slave.

The Rich Italian Girl.

The Italian girl born in a higher condition of life has an entirely different upbringing. She is probably baptized in the private chapel of the family palace, and nursed by one of the great wet nurses, in flaming frock and glittering head dress, who, if Italian mothers are to be believed, are the tyrants of nearly all Italian households! Her earliest education is usually at the hands of an English governess, and at 10 or 11 she is sent to the convent school. The convent, frequently under the direction of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart, may be either a day school or a boarding school, or both, but it is always strict in its discipline. If the child is a day scholar, an omnibus calls for her at 8:30 in the morning, and brings her home at half-past four in the afternoon. If she is a boarder, she shares to some extent the ordinary religious life of the Sisters, wearing her little white veil during the offices in church. The garden of the convent is her playground, but once or twice a week she may be taken out with her fellow pupils to the public gardens of the city, such as the Borghese Gardens in Rome.

The Reading of the Italian Girl.

The young ladyhood of the Italian girl is no less strictly watched and strictly guarded. Having left school, she lives almost entirely within the parental palace, hardly ever sleeping outside of it except in the hot season, perhaps, when the family remove to their country villa. She may never stir out of doors into the public streets unaccompanied by her maid, and she may have no male friends or even cousinly correspondents. The reading is usually under the strictest maternal censorship; novels are almost always denied to her; she may know nothing whatever of foreign fiction, and of contemporary Italian fiction she is forbidden to be even aware. She knows D'Annunzio only by name, and, except in rare cases, she has not even read of the classical Italian story of Manzoni, "I Promessi Sposi." Newspapers are no less carefully kept out of her way, and, except in liberal families, she is not permitted to see the daily and weekly papers of her own country. Occasionally the English illustrated papers are allowed to her, but for the most part the "Lives of the Saints" and religious treatises of a like character comprise the library of the Italian girl, who is brought up under the discipline of a strict Italian mother.

The Love-Making of the Italian Girl.

When the Italian girl becomes engaged, her love making has to be conducted on principles consistent with the rigid discipline under which she has lived from her cradle upward. She may never meet her betrothed alone. Her mother, the governess, or some staid elderly member of the household, must always be present at her love scenes to play the thankless part of the duenna. Under no circumstances whatever must she walk or drive in the streets or the parks or the gardens with the man to whom she is engaged unattended by maid, family companion, or friend. If she were guilty of the indiscretion of walking with her lover alone, she would be said to be "courting like a cook." Her marriage is frequently arranged for her by her friends, and it rarely originates in her own choice. Her opportunities for learning the character and disposition of the man who is to be her husband are few and limited, and her knowledge of other men is of the slightest. She rarely goes into society, and only once or twice a year is she present at the great social functions of the court. The family palace and the parish church, with the domestic dining table, and, perhaps, an occasional glimpse of her mother's salon, make up her range of the world in which she is presently to play her part.

How the Italian Girl is Married.

The Italian girl is married at least twice, and often three times. Owing to the conflict of church and state in Italy, and to the complications arising therefrom, the civil and religious marriages, which are covered by one ceremony in our country, are two distinct and independent functions in the peninsula. Therefore, the Roman girl is first married at the Capitol, and this, in the case of the highest nobility, is usually a ceremony conducted by the Mayor. Then she is married in church, or, perhaps, in the chapel of her father's palace, and this service is, of course, conducted by an ecclesiastic. One day at least and sometimes two, three or four days, separate the marriages; but although the civil marriage is an absolute contract in the eyes of the law, the religious sentiment is still so strong in Italy that no marriage would be considered complete, even by the most liberal society, without the religious ceremony. If the Italian girl is marrying a foreigner, a third marriage is sometimes considered necessary. This takes place at the embassy of the government to which the husband owes allegiance, and there the Ambassador is usually the presiding functionary.

After the Italian Girl Has Married.

Such in general, and allowing for notable exceptions, is the customary education and upbringing of the Italian girl. The severity of her life, down to the moment of her marriage, could hardly be greater if she were a cloistered nun. But from the day her marriage vows are taken her condition in the world is entirely changed. From that time forward she may throw off all restraint. She is free to go where she will and see whom she pleases, and, speaking generally, she takes advantage of her freedom. She surrounds herself by many friends, and her house is often the rendezvous of numerous young bachelors. She reads the novels of D'Annunzio, and the latest yellow-backed book from Paris. She speedily makes up for her lost time, and her amusements become many and various. Whatever else may be said of her, she cannot be described as a hypocrite, and within a year of her emancipation the liberality of her speech would sometimes surprise an English woman. That is a natural sequel to so rigid an upbringing, and so swift a liberation from its thraldon. The Italian girl, now the Italian wife, frequently finds herself, before she is fully aware of danger, in a difficult and perilous position. Disasters are not unknown in the social world of the Italian fashionable woman, and who shall say they are not due in part to the serious faults of her education?

SOME QUININE DATA.

The druggist on the next corner charges a dozen two-grain capsules of quinine. The middle of the block charges 7 cents. Both are houses. Now let's see. An ounce of quinine dealer 31 cents. Each ounce contains 480 ficient for 240 two-grain capsules, or twenty over the counter for $1.40 to $2. Capsules a pound, and there are enough in a pound many ounces of quinine. The quinine the for $2 costs him (capsules included) 32 cents making, therefore, a profit of over 500 per is actually a household necessity.

It is no exaggeration to say that quinine In numerous localities it is eaten as regularly Men and women pour it into the palm of the toss it down their throats. Ohio and Florida— The government might regulate the price, as the government does in India, where quinine is sary than meat. Quinine is sold at every in India at the rate of five grains for a is, ten grains for a cent, or 48 cents an ounce, Bengal alone 1,440,000 five-grain packets nually. The government used to import of quinine every year, but Lieut.-Col. King tendent of the Royal Botanic Gardens in introduced its cultivation in India, and there 4,000,000 trees in Bengal.—[New York Press.

OVELS FOR PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

are seriously discussing the new novel Some of them, including the head of the Li- ngress, advocate the application to fiction of rule regarding books in general, and would new novel on their shelves until a year after By this method, they would save money, popular craze for a book rarely lasts for a and—what is more important—they would of the responsibility, however innocently incurred, of having purveyed worthless literature to their patrons.

Whether this view of the situation will command enough support to secure concerted action for its general adoption it is too early to predict. Certainly Mr. Putnam's position (now reinforced by Mr. Carnegie, who may be supposed to know something about libraries) invites the commendation of the judicious. Putting aside the question of the good or harm done by the indiscriminate devouring of the latest novels as they come in shoals from the press, the librarian takes the ground that the primary function of a public library is the instruction of the public (the term including the forming of its taste,) and that for mere amusement the reader should look elsewhere. The item of expense, too, is not to be disregarded. If the demands for the books of the moment are to be met with anything approaching promptness, the librarian in a large city must purchase from ten to twenty copies of each popular success, to find most of them junk at the end of the year; whereas the money thus spent might have been invested in standard works or new books of acknowledged value which would have been a permanent addition to the library. It may be urged that the librarian should read all the new fiction, sifting the chaff from the wheat, but sober second thought will surely reject such a proposition as "cruel and unusual."—[New York Tribune.

PURITY AND CLEANLINESS.

Because we realize that pure water will be no longer pure if saturated with impure air, and will soon lose its character if placed in unclean packages. We take as much pains with the details of the process of aerating and bottling Puritas Distilled Water as we do in the actual distillation.

After the distilled water has reached the great block tin tanks from which the demijohns are filled, a steady flow of air is forced up through the fluid, which is kept constantly in motion.

This air is purified—purified twice. We want to make sure that it's fit to go into pure water. And the air is forced through absorbent cotton and through a chemical wash, in order that we may be sure of its character—and that you may get pure water.

It's Puritas then—the water in the tanks—pure and sweet and sparkling. The next step is to bottle it in such a way that it may retain its purity.

The shining glass demijohn with the gilded seal across the cork that our driver leaves at your door is the result of our efforts in this line.

But it doesn't look so attractive before we begin on it; we take the demijohn and wash it thoroughly in cold water for a starter. And then, when it is dry one of the men pours in a lot of fine, clean sand and shakes it about until every vestige of dirt has been rubbed from the glass.

Then comes the hot water bath—not so hot that it will break the demijohn, but so warm that you want to handle the thing rather gingerly. Then a rinse in Puritas right out of the tanks, after which the demijohn is filled and quickly corked with a cork that has been sterilized by being passed through steam.

Polished with a soft cloth until it shines and glitters in the sunlight, the demijohn of Puritas is sealed with the little gilded seal we spoke of and set into place in the long row of demijohns awaiting next morning's delivery.

That's about all. Pure water in the first place. Aerated with pure air. In a clean bottle. Sealed so you'll know you're getting what you order (and don't take a demijohn on which the seal is broken.)

SANTA CATALINA ISLAND.

GLAD FOR SARDINE PROTECTION.

AVALON, March 22.—The San Pedro fish cannery boat Alpha made another haul of sardines in the bay this morning, taking only the remnant of the school which escaped last time, amounting to perhaps five or six tons.

The residents here are rejoicing that the Board of Supervisors has at length passed an ordinance prohibiting the seining of bait fish in this bay, and are only sorry that nearly three weeks must elapse before it becomes operative.

The cannery people deny that the Alpha entered Avalon Bay on a recent occasion, and seined more fish than they could carry away, and that they turned loose any of their catch in a bruised or battered condition. There were a dozen fishermen near the Alpha when the carnage ceased, who testify that tons of sardines, the estimates varying from two to four, were dumped out of their nets after every bucketful they could make stick on the boat had been loaded on her. All who are familiar with the boat and have seen her loaded many times over, say that they never before saw her so heavily loaded. There were fish fore and aft and amidships; boards were set up as the farmer does when hauling pumpkins, and the fish were heaped up, pressed down, shaken together and running over. A former engineer on the boat says that they rarely take aboard more than eleven tons of fish, as they are not fixed for carrying more conveniently, but says possibly they had fifteen tons on the occasion referred to, as in all his experience he had never seen the boat so heaped up with fish.

MRS. FRANCIS MURPHY TO SIT BESIDE HIM.

BLUE-RIBBON RALLY AT HAZARD'S PAVILION TODAY.

Work at Bethlehem Institutional Church Will Open This Evening—Pacific Gospel Mission—For the McKinley Memorial Industrial Home.

On account of the mass meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Hazard's Pavilion, to hear Francis Murphy, the gospel temperance apostle, both the men's and boy's meetings at the Y.M.C.A. will be omitted. This will be the opening of the third week of the great reformer's work, following a week of comparative rest, and the phenomenal gatherings of the two previous Sundays, will no doubt, be duplicated today, limited only by the capacity of the great hall.

During the past week, when Mr. Murphy was supposed to be resting, he delivered four addresses and entertained an almost endless string of callers. Beside old acquaintances, the latter included many people who came in behalf of relatives, addicted to drink, or who brought them to him in the hope that he might say something to turn them from the cup. All such he received with the greatest consideration, and, boiled down into the fewest number of words, his talk with them usually amounted to about this: "Come up here into my room, my boy, and pray with me."

Mrs. Murphy arrived from the northern part of the State yesterday and will spend the week in the city with her husband. Mrs. Murphy has not been well, but if her health permits she will be at his side on the platform this afternoon.

Mr. Murphy's work at Bethlehem Institutional Church will begin tonight and continue for a week.

PACIFIC GOSPEL MISSION.

New life is being infused into the Pacific Gospel Mission at No. 323 East Second street. On Tuesday evening Rev. Mr. Chandler, colored, will conduct a service, assisted by a colored choir of jubilee singers.

M'KINLEY HOME.

At a meeting in the interest of the proposed McKinley Industrial Home for Boys, held last evening at the home of Charles H. Barker, No. 633 Burlington avenue, Rev. Frank S. Forbes made an address and gave an encouraging report regarding the attitude of Redlands people toward the construction of a building to be called the San Bernardino cottage, the funds to be raised in that county. He stated that there will be no difficulty in raising the required funds in San Bernardino county. After the address there was music by Miss Baldwin and Mrs. Haralson.

The strike of agriculturists is spreading throughout Italy, and 150,000 farm laborers are now out in the provinces of Ferrara, Bologna and Vincenza, while in sixteen other provinces the laborers are represented to be organizing. Thus far no violence has been reported.

A BLIND WANDERER.

Didn't Know that Food Could Restore Her.

A well-known writer uses Grape-Nuts as a tonic when feeling the effects of extra heavy work. She writes: "Grape-Nuts should be taken regularly as one would a tonic. I eat mine cold in the morning with hot milk or cream poured over it, and it is delicious, nourishing and strengthening.

"Some time ago I said to a lady friend who was a great sufferer from dyspepsia and has been an invalid for five years, and who was a mere skeleton, 'If I had only known you sooner you need not have suffered all these years.' She looked at me in surprise and asked me what I would have done. 'I should have put you on Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food,' I replied quite confidently. 'Did you ever hear of it?' Oh, yes, she had heard of it, but never tried it, as she had never had her attention called to it especially and had not thought it applied to her needs.

"'Now,' I said, 'if you will just set about it and try Grape-Nuts for a week, three times a day, I will guarantee you will rise up and call me blessed.'

"She took my advice and followed it faithfully. When I saw her about a week later she looked like a different person, although she had only gained two pounds in weight, but said she felt so much better and stronger and has greatly improved in health and strength since using the food.

"She is getting well and you can imagine her delight is unbounded. My own experience and that of others is sufficient evidence of the scientific value of a food that supplies nourishment to the system and builds up the brain and nerve centers." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

INDIANS AT CHUTES.

Capt. Chittenden Will Add to His Exhibit Basket and Arrow Makers from Cahuilla Tribe.

Capt. Chittenden, who is displaying at the Chutes his many Indian relics and lecturing on his life among the red men, has returned from a trip among the Cahuilla Indians of Southern California.

Chief Manuel of the tribe promised him to allow his daughter, Dolores, one of the most skillful of the Indian basket makers, to come to Los Angeles and exhibit her work at Capt. Chittenden's lodge. She will be one of the attractions at Chutes Park the first of next week, and several other members of the tribe will also be brought to the city by Chittenden, and will show their callers how bows and arrows are manufactured.

OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE.

THE DOCTOR SENDS IT FREE.

The world's greatest living philanthropist, who has been the means of curing thousands of men of nervous debility, lost vigor, varicocele, failing memory, and all other consequences of youthful ignorance or other causes, and restoring to full strength and vigor, sends free to every sufferer the entire receipt so that each despairing man may cure himself at home and thus obtain the grand result of perfect manly strength and vigor.

He wants all suffering men to share with him the knowledge he has personally attained. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp, M.D., 2837 Hull Building, Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

Fit Guaranteed.

I had twenty-seven teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain. I have since had an upper and lower set made, and they fit fine. They fit so tight that it is with difficulty that I can remove them. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Schiffman and his work, and advise every one needing work done to patronize him.

INTENSE SUFFERING

From Dispepsia and Stomach Trouble

Instantly Relieved and Permanently Cured by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A New Discovery, but Not a Patent Medicine.

Dr. Redwell relates an interesting account of what he considers a remarkable case of acute stomach trouble and chronic dyspepsia by the use of the new discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He says: "The patient was a man who had suffered, to my knowledge, for years with dyspepsia. Everything he ate seemed to sour and create gas in the stomach. He had pains like rheumatism in the back, shoulder blades and limbs, fullness and distress after eating, poor appetite and loss of flesh; the heart became affected, causing palpitation and sleeplessness at night.

"I gave him powerful nerve tonics and blood remedies, but to no purpose. As an experiment I finally bought a 50-cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a drug store and gave them to him. Almost immediate relief was given, and after he had used four boxes he was to all appearances fully cured.

"There was no more acidity or sour, watery risings, no bloating after meals, the appetite was vigorous and he has gained between 10 and 12 pounds in weight of solid, healthy flesh.

"Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are advertised and sold in drug stores, yet I consider them a most valuable addition to any physician's line of remedies, as they are perfectly harmless and can be given to children or invalids or in any condition of the stomach with perfect safety, being harmless and containing nothing but fruit and vegetable essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal.

"Without any question they are the safest, most effective cure for indigestion, biliousness, constipation and all derangements of the stomach, however slight or severe."

Murphy is doing a work just now that must warm of every good man or hears about it. The man an old soak out of the of dissipation, and who a little lower than the is so much alleged tem that is worse than use a worker comes along a system that is the real down there ought to take off your hats to him; just as the Eagle would, if he wore a hat. As it is, I salute the gallant and able man who has a heart to feel and to dare and do, and common sense enough to have lasted him in his splendid labors for the uplifting of the fallen for, lo, these many years.

I never could see what sense there is in having saloons, in the first place, but here they are tight and fast on the body politic of the world, like a tick on a dog, so the only thing to do is to make the best of them, and save as many from their ravages as you can.

I think I would about as soon take the chances of Francis Murphy in the great and impenetrable hereafter as of any human being that has yet taken hold of the hot end of a hard subject, and blown his breath on it, to the everlasting good of humanity in general—and in particular, particularly.

Here's to the blue ribbon. May it never fail to flutter where a flutter is of any use. And as for the man who exploits the decoration, may the good God bless him as he deserves.

You ought to be up here, where I am, so you could look out over the housetops and see how beautiful the country is these days. My, my, my, such loveliness of mountain and plain, of foothill and valley, of seeded landscape and of the orchard lands! Every hillock is a garden of green and bloom. Every slope at the foot of the mountains is a field of the cloth of gold. The orange orchards are riotous with fruit and blossom. The barley fields are a-ripple in the sun. The meadow larks are singing their hearts out in the chaparral. The sheep are feeding and gamboling on a thousand hills. The days make even an Eagle Bird glad that he is alive.

If the people from back East who are lingering in these fragrant byways are not satisfied with the way things looks, and with the weather that is offered, then heaven will be no home for them, even if they are lucky enough to get there.

Glorious climate! Glorious season! Glorious California, you are really and truly the only proper spot on the map! THE EAGLE.

Curiosity.

There was a sign upon a fence, the sign was "Paint", and everybody who passed by, sinner or saint, put out a finger, touched the fence, and quickly onward sped, and as they wiped their finger tips, it is, they said. If you are actuated only by curiosity we want you to visit our store. You don't know what we can, and will do for you unless you come in the store. You'll no doubt want a new suit, or a new hat, or a new tie for Easter, won't you? We show everything that's new and we sell the goods at very reasonable prices. Come in tomorrow and order your Easter suit. We'll have it for you on time.

We have been planning for the Spring selling for a long time. Long before you began to think of Easter, and of the new hat, or garment or gloves or other accessories to your Spring toilet, we were arranging for the which you are now invited to come and enjoy. The Easter period is so early this year that it has taxed the facilities of the enter organization to complete all of the details for this showing. But the results are worth the effort and we would like you to visit the store, not some department but the store. You will find it ready everywhere.

Millinery--Just Received

We have already told you something of the beauties and of the exclusiveness of our this season's showing of millinery. The verdict of those who saw the initial display was most gratifying to us. But even then, we had this Easter showing in mind and you will find the present display equally as satisfactory. Moreover, on Thursday we shall have a new and especially fine lot of French hats, augmented by an elegant line of trimmed hats from our own work rooms.

This week we shall also make a special Easter display of a new line of children's hats. We have given especial attention to children's head wear, and this display is wonderfully complete.

New hats are arriving continually. During the week we will show a lot of Phipps and Atchison hats which are just received. Our entire line of street hats is priced in an appealing way, and as those street hats are trimmed in our own work rooms we are able to give many varieties and styles of trimming without making exorbitant charges. The materials for millinery work are shown here in every variety and quality. The display of flowers, ornaments, fancy quills and other materials which are required by this season's modes are shown in a complete assortment, and in the same qualities as are used in our own work rooms.

Easter Gloves.

Every pair of gloves we sell carries the most absolute guarantee—and we accentuate the Easter season by bringing together the most complete assortment of the year.

The Spring importations of the celebrated Trefousse kid gloves and of all the other new and novel lines have been assembled for this week.

Our first quality trefousse glace comes in every conceiveable shade and is absolutely the most perfect glove made, price....$2.00 the Pair

The extra premier quality pique is always in stock in a vast assortment of colorings and is a favorite Easter glove ....$2.00 the Pair

Our $1.50 real kid gloves are the peer of any glove sold at the price. They come in 8 clasp and in every shade. A most desirable glove at ....$1.50 the Pair

We call special attention to our line of black suede gloves. Every lady knows how difficult it is to obtain a perfect black suede glove, combining fine quality, durability and wear. This line is also shown in all the staple and pastel shades at..$1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 the Pair

We carry a complete line of Dent's English gloves in both glace and suede at ....$2.00 the Pair

Easter Parasols.

This is really the opening display of the season, and the latest creations in coaching shades and handsome chiffon and lace effects, are shown exclusively by us.

We also show a complete line of 24 inch sun umbrellas in black and in colors.

Our line of parasolets and children's shades is more complete than ordinarily shown, and presents a wide variety from which to choose.

Easter Novelties and Toys.

Such an army of rabbits and chicks and hens and ducks as has taken possession of our store. Lots of other animals, too. Some are to be filled with candies, some are hitched to carts filled with eggs. There are large bunnies and small bunnies, and cunning little yellow, downy chicks. Our south window is just crowded with the Easter toys—and there's more inside. Many fancy boxes and baskets to be filled to your order with eggs or candy. And there are many exclusive novelties that no other store shows. Let the children come down and take a peep at our wonderful menagerie.

SPRING AND THIRD STS.
TELEPHONE MAIN 259.

This year Easter comes early; that means you'll have to prepare the Easter costume a week or so earlier than usual. All those little nicknacks and necessary dress accessories that go so far toward the success of the Easter Outfit must be selected between now and Saturday night so it behooves those who would be correctly dressed to choose as early this week as possible. Better assortments and greater variations in style will be found now than later in the week.

Women whose tastes are directed toward the best, the latest novelties in all lines, will find much to please them here this week.

Fancy Hosiery.

Makers of hosiery have certainly outdone all past performances in this season's production of fancy stockings. We have never before seen such an array of new and beautiful weaves and color effects. The new arrivals especially for Easter embrace all that's popular, stylish and good. Many original patterns are shown in embroidered cotton, lisle and silk. Dainty effects in white grounds, "Moderne Kunst" vines, sprays, buds and flowers, the greatest variety of color combinations and designs; "Kid Points," "Shirt Waist," "Linens," "Lace Allovers," drop stitch and embroideries, fancy fronts and boot effects.

Lucotherapy.

A new Scientific Discovery, wonderful in its curative powers. Cures Consumption, Appendicitis, Cancer, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Asthma and diseases of the uterus and ovaries. Lucotherapy destroys Germs and cures Inflammations. That Consumption is easily curable is no longer a question of experiment and doubt. All cases in the first and second stages are curable. If Lucotherapy is used in the treatment the Bacillus will be destroyed and in any stage of the disease and in one person as well as another. This is not a probability, it's a law. After the formation of cavities and the occurrence of hemorrhages, even though severe, recoveries are frequent. The question of recovery is simply one as to there being tissue cells not destroyed sufficient for the patient to build up and thereby recover health. Lucotherapy destroys the germs and stops the disease, and correct living does the rest. Cancer of the face or breast is easily cured; another striking feature of Lucotherapy is the prompt manner in which it relieves pain in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and painful Menstruation, both in women and young girls. The pain will often stop in two minutes, and if treatment is used at proper intervals a cure will result. There is no known remedy that will remove the irritation or inflammation from the ovaries as surely as Lucotherapy. In Appendicitis the cure is prompt and certain any time before the formation of pus. We want every one to become acquainted with this fact. The latest and most improved methods in the science of surgery, medicine and electricity are employed. Diseases of the Bones, Blood, Skin, Nervous System, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Stomach, Rectum and urinary organs of both men and women treated; medicines furnished at the office. Consultation free. Nature Cure.

In my advertisement last Sunday I said that anyone who promises to cure a rupture is a fakir. And I can prove it.

Nevertheless, hundreds of ruptures have closed up under my trusses. Such results are reported to me every day. But I do not promise to cure. I simply fit a truss which takes all the strain from the injured ligaments and allows Nature to contract the opening. That is the only way in which a rupture can be cured, and no man can prophesy what Nature will do.

If you will give me opportunity I will prove that these fake "cures" do not cure; that I have put trusses onto hundreds of "cured" patients; and that my scientifically fitted trusses often DO ENABLE NATURE TO EFFECT A CURE. It will take just about five minutes to convince you of these facts if you will come to my store. If this is not convenient I can send you documentary proof.

Whatever you do, don't class me with "rupture curists." Call or write for my free book on rupture.

A NOVEL COPARTNERSHIP.

An Energetic Flea and an Enterprising Druggist Form a Combine.

An amusing story comes from California, the land of the warm sun and the little insect that is never there when you go after him. Every one in these parts is familiar with Newbro's Herpicide, the remedy that destroys the dandruff germ. A certain young druggist of Southern California heard his customers remark that Herpicide stopped itching of the scalp almost instantly. Now, this young druggist had more gray matter than yellow gold, so he reasoned that if it will stop the itching caused by a parasite burrowing under the skin, why would it not stop the itching caused by a flea bite? He mentioned this idea to a person, who promptly became a customer. The customer mentioned it to several others and they became customers. The remedy did the business and every one is pleased; so was the druggist. California is a great state.

There is but one preparation that will kill the dandruff germ, and that preparation is Newbro's Herpicide. Take nothing "just as good." You can afford to pay for the genuine. Take no other.

Shampoo with Newbro's Herpicide Soap

Before beginning treatment with Herpicide, the hair and scalp should be washed thoroughly; and regularly once a week thereafter. The best soap for this purpose is NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SOAP (Aseptic Tar). This soap is manufactured for the sole purpose of protecting the users of Newbro's Herpicide from the harmful effects of inferior or alkaline-dangerous shampoos. It represents the highest skill of modern soap making, and stands for purity and cleanliness. It is invaluable for the nursery and for persons who cannot use the ordinary commercial soaps. Physicians may use NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SOAP with the positive assurance that it is absolutely Aseptic.

LAND GRANT SOLD.

LORD THURLOW TAKES HOLD.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 20.—The Luis Maria Baca land grant, in Northwestern Yavapai county, has been sold by Dr. E. B. Perrin to an English company headed by Lord Thurlow, formerly secretary of the English embassy in Washington. He and Baron Von Rosenburg, a civil engineer of some repute, are on the grant plotting extensive works of improvement and development. The grant is twelve and one-half miles square, and it lies immediately north of the rich Hillside mining camp, and though inadequately prospected, is believed to contain many valuable mineral ledges. Some portions of it are covered with a heavy growth of juniper, and the entire expanse is available for grazing. The purchasing corporation will fence and cross-fence the entire tract, and will stock it wholly with sheep. Lord Thurlow is also heavily interested in this district in a number of mines. He is to organize new mining companies, which are to purchase tracts in the southern part of the grant, inclusive of a number of located mining claims which are to be developed.

WOULD PROTECT BIG GAME.

Northern Arizona sportsmen are agitated over a bill introduced in Congress by the League of American Sportsmen, which provides for the conversion of all forest reserves in the Western States and Territories into game preserves, to be governed practically as is Yellowstone National Park. This would serve to absolutely prohibit hunting lion, bear, deer, antelope and other large game in the Prescott, San Francisco Mountain and Black Mesa forest reserves, which cover practically all the good hunting ground in Northern Arizona.

PRESCOTT BREVITIES.

The Indian Department is preparing for the expenditure of $80,000 for the enlargement of the buildings of the Indian school at Keam's Cañon, close to the northern edge of Arizona, and eighty miles north of Holbrook. In the school are 175 pupils, mainly Navajos and Moquis, under the superintendency of Charles E. Burton.

A Navajo shepherd, well known to the whites as "Navajo Jim," murdered his wife and child last week near Winslow and then disappeared, leaving behind two other children, who had managed to hide and escape. The Indians have assured the civil authorities that they will see that their homicidal brother is captured and duly punished, and that no fear need be felt that "Navajo Jim" will ever again be seen in Winslow.

Prescott has raised $525 toward the McKinley memorial fund.

The Arizona Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows will meet in Prescott, April 21.

The Prescott Journal-Miner entered its thirty-ninth year a few days ago. It lays claim to the distinction of being the oldest newspaper in the Territory, through descent from the Arizona Miner, established at the Chino ranch, near Prescott, in March, 1864.

TUCSON.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 20.—It is proposed to raise not less than $5000 for the purposes of the Chamber of Commerce, and only a small part remains unsubscribed. Additional large subscriptions to the fund are: Arizona National Bank, $250; L. H. Manning, W. A. Julian & Co., Andres Rebell, Ezra Bartlett, $100 each; W. J. Corbett, Brena Commercial Company, Fred Fleishman, C. Christensen, Palace Market, F. Ronstadt, Tucson Mill Company, Dr. M. A. Rodgers, Trost & Rust, $50 each.

J. J. Henry, president of the Tucson Electric Light and Power Company, has announced the intention of his company to install a new gas plant at an expense of $50,000, and to make expensive improvements as well in the electric-light service, installing the alternating-current system.

DOUGLAS DEVELOPING.

Douglas, the new border town, has developed to the point of organizing a fire department, with J. M. Sparks as chief. The Townsite Company has laid water mains along the more important streets, and connection has been made as well with the stand pipe of the railroad company. Another improvement is the installation by the townsite company of a telephone system. Forty applications for 'phones have been made already. The only thing that appears lacking now in Douglas is fresh milk, the lacteal fluid selling at the present time for $1 a gallon. Of newspapers Douglas has two, the latest published by A. F. Banta, a pioneer Arizonan, formerly editor of the Prescott Prospect. His salutation was to the point. It was: "Some one has said 'Brevity is the soul of wit.' The undersigned is again harnessed to a journalistic car."

TUCSON BREVITIES.

The Coroner's jury which sat in the inquest on the body of the railway foreman found dead near Douglas lately could find nothing new about the mode of death or the individuals concerned in the murder, but developed additional facts concerning the past of the dead man. His real name was not McKay, but McClandish. He was a native of Michigan, had once been Sheriff of a Michigan county, and later represented Alpine county in the California Legislature.

The body of an unknown man was found lately in the outskirts of Naco. He is supposed to have been killed, but the Coroner's jury could develop no evidence of value.

Joseph Belcher of Bisbee took a trip to Naco Sunday to try to induce his wife to return to him. He met her in company with Dr. Lindley, formerly a surgeon in the First Territorial Volunteers. The doctor caught Belcher just as the latter pulled a revolver, and managed to take the weapon. Belcher was arrested in Bisbee and held to the next grand jury.

Late Los Angeles visitors to southern Arizona have included Ben Goodrich and Mrs. J. M. Wheeler. The former was on legal business. The latter came to attend her son, seriously injured in a railroad accident at Douglas.

The case of the government against ex-Collector Hoey has been materially weakened by the death of one of the main witnesses, J. L. Hathaway, mounted inspector of Nogales, who died at his home a few days ago of pneumonia.

American and German Ways.

In Germany it may be said that the tendency is to make better workman; in America and England the tendency is to make better men. The Anglo-Saxon policy is to "cast the bantling on the rock," and let him work out his own salvation through temptation. In Germany the policy is quite the reverse; the workman is protected from disciplining temptation, and ruled in a thousand ways by the government instead of being allowed to rule himself. American discipline is from within, German from without. The German workman is without hope even in religion, for it is rare that a German workman is ever seen in church after confirmation; there is little or no chance for him to rise; he has before him no possible career in politics, nor any hope of becoming a Carnegie or a Huntington. Consequently he is without ambition to do his work faster or by better methods; he is content to do what his father did, without thinking, though the all-seeing government is making herculean and industrial efforts through its scores of technical and industrial schools—the best in the world—to stir him from his stolid and precedent-bound lethargy. The German workman is slow, therefore his wages are small. It is less expensive in Germany to hire muscle than it is to install expensive machinery. Therefore in all sorts of German manufacturing establishments one sees clouds of workmen bending their backs to burdens which in America are borne swiftly, noiselessly, and more cheaply by electricity or steam.—[Outlook.

Chutes Captive Balloon Breaks Away

Four Men and One Woman Take an Involuntary Journey.

BLOWN OUT OVER THE OCEAN.

Land on Catalina Island After Six Hours Spent in Mid-Air—Balloon Not Damaged and Passengers None the Worse Except for Fright.

To go up in a big captive balloon, on pleasure bent, to see the beauties of the city at one glance, and then return to terra firma is commonplace enough, and satisfies most mortals. But to find that the tie that binds so firmly to the earth has broken, and to see that fairy land, the Chutes, gradually dropping from beneath your feet, and a strong east wind driving you steadily westward is no commonplace matter.

That a merry party of four men and one woman should ascend from the grounds, make a voyage of fifty miles in a runaway balloon, is strange enough, but that they should be carried in a direct line twenty miles over land, and then in a zigzag course over thirty miles of the Pacific Ocean, sometimes approaching within twenty feet of the water, and at other times floating a mile high. To spend six long hours between heaven and earth with an equal chance of being dashed to pieces on the solid ground or drowned in the ocean, and then, after all, to land, without physical injury or harm to either the passengers or the balloon, on an island thirty miles off the mainland, happens but once in the lifetime of few individuals. In fact, so remarkable is the statement that it reads like a tale from the "Arabian Nights Entertainment." It is, however, only modern fiction, not true at all, and in this respect is entirely different from the statements of the Pittsburg Aluminum Co., 312 South Spring Street regarding the remarkable wearing and economical qualities of their aluminum cooking utensils. There are utensils in Los Angeles made of Aluminum that have been in constant use for eight years, and are today in as good condition as when first purchased. The fact that Aluminum utensils do not burn out if left dry on a fire, is one reason for their long life. Aluminum has great tensile strength, and is one of the toughest of metals. It is also remarkable for its rapid heat conductivity, and high specific heat. This gives the utensils the ability to heat much quicker than others and retain the heat for a longer period of time.

Do you know the reason many women have the reputation of being poor cooks? In nine cases out of ten it is because they have no utensils to work with. What could a cook prepare with one or two half-burned-out saucepans and a grease-covered iron skillet, or fry pan. No man would begin work without proper tools to work with, yet he will expect his wife to prepare him an appetizing meal in utensils purchased at the second-hand store, probably reinforced with a couple of lard pails and a cake pan borrowed from the neighbors.

We maintain, and can prove, to any reasonable person, that aluminum has not only the longest life of any utensil, but that it is the most economical in the use of fuel, the most satisfactory in wear and the most sanitary. For baking griddle cakes no grease is needed, at all, and for waffles, and who has not noted the disagreeable appearance of their waffle pan with disgust, and you only need to grease the pan for the first waffle. You can, with little effort keep aluminum cooking utensils look as nice and clean as the day you purchased them. If you do not need utensils now, but would like to know more about them, we assure you you will receive kind and courteous treatment at our hands whether you purchase or not.

We do not expect you to purchase aluminum utensils unless you know the truth about them, the quicker you learn the exact facts the sooner will you enjoy their many advantages.

Marvelous Elixir of Life Discovered by Famous Doctor-Scientist That Cures Every Known Ailment.

Wonderful Cures are Effected That Seem Like Miracles Performed—The Secret of Long Life of Olden Times Revived.

The Remedy is Free to All Who Send Name and Address.

After years of patient study, and delving into the dusty record of the past, as well as following modern experiments in the realms of medical science, Dr. James W. Kidd, 1502 Baltes Building, Fort Wayne, Indiana, makes the startling announcement that he has surely discovered the elixir of life. That he is able with the aid of a mysterious compound, known only to himself, produced as a result of the years he has spent in searching for this precious life-giving boon, to cure any and every disease that is known to the human body. There is no doubt of the doctor's earnestness in making his claim and the remarkable cures that he is daily effecting seems to bear him out very strongly. His theory which he advances is one of reason and based on sound experience in a medical practice of many years. It costs nothing to try his remarkable "Elixir of Life," as he calls it, for he sends it free, to anyone who is a sufferer, in sufficient quantities to convince of its ability to cure, so there is absolutely no risk run. Some of the cures cited are very remarkable, and but for reliable witnesses would hardly be credited. The lame have thrown away crutches and walked about after two or three trials of the remedy. The sick, given up by home doctors, have been restored to their families and friends in perfect health. Rheumatism, neuralgia, stomach, heart, liver, kidney, blood and skin diseases and bladder troubles disappear as by magic. Headaches, backaches, nervousness, fevers, consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, catarrh, bronchitis and all affections of the throat, lungs or any vital organs are easily overcome in a space of time that is simply marvelous.

Partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, dropsy, gout, scrofula and piles are quickly and permanently removed. It purifies the entire system, blood and tissues, restores normal nerve power, circulation and a state of perfect health is produced at once. To the doctor all systems are alike and equally affected by this great "Elixir of Life." Send for the remedy today. It is free to every sufferer. State what you want to be cured of and the sure remedy for it will be sent you free by return mail.

AT THE CITY HALL.

ABOUT THE RISE AND FALL OF CASH FUND.

CONTRACTORS AND MERCHANTS WANT TO GET THEIR MONEY.

Movement to Form a Pool for the Purpose of Securing Transfers to the Fund With the Biggest Deficit—Councilmen Worried.

To the taxpayer the fluctuations of the cash fund are of considerable interest; but it is the contractor and supply man that watches the balance with the greatest anxiety. If there is money in the fund he knows that pay for the work of supplies will be immediately forthcoming; if there is not he is kept on the anxious seat for an uncertain length of time. It means a great deal to a contractor of limited means if his resources are tied up in demands on the cash fund; it means infinitely more to the laborer, who is compelled to pay tribute to money sharks in order to get his meager wage.

For such a time as the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the cash fund has been in arrears. During the present year it has been getting further and further behind. Yesterday the deficit was $40,776.05. The men who furnish the city with supplies have to wait seven months to get their money, and workingmen have to pay a heavy discount to get their demands cashed.

Very naturally such a situation has caused much comment and criticism. The men who furnish supplies do not lose much, as they charge the city proportionately more for the articles; and the contractors are able to figure the delay in payment in their calculations; but the workingman who draws $2 a day is powerless. At the beginning of the year an effort was made to better the condition of the regular employés in several of the departments, and this has succeeded to a certain extent. Several special funds were established, to which is apportioned a certain number of cents of every dollar of tax money. But there are many men in the employ of the city who did not benefit by this new arrangement, and it is alleged that the Finance Committee in planning the apportionment rate favored the special funds to such an extent that those whose demands are still drawn against the cash fund are much worse off than before.

Both in and out of the Council, the Finance Committee has come in for unlimited criticism because of the apportionment rate. As an illustration of what many are pleased to call a bit of bad financiering, it may be remarked that last year the cash fund was allotted 32.9 cents out of every dollar of tax money apportioned. This year several special funds, that had formerly been included in the cash fund, were created, and the apportionment to the cash fund was only 2.5 cents on every dollar.

This rate of apportionment was fixed about September 1. The Finance Committee then knew that the taxes charged against the Tax Collector for the year were $813,797.91 on real and secured personal property with about $70,000 unsecured personal property taxes to come from the Assessor. On this amount of taxes the apportionment to the cash fund on the 2.5 cents rate would be $22,634.95. But the books show that on September 1 the deficit in the cash fund was $25,139.22. In other words the amount allowed the cash fund in the apportionment rate would not pay off the deficit then existing, to say nothing of the current bills for supplies. Despite several small transfers the deficit has grown until now it amounts to over $40,000.

Banks will not accept demands against the city as collateral security and unless the contractor pays a heavy discount to a money broker he cannot secure his money. Demands dating back to July 18, 1901, are still unpaid. The majority of demands have been on the books about seven months. The number of separate demands outstanding today is 732. As the holders of these demands are scattered, and as the amount represented by each claim against the city is small, not as much political influence is brought to bear on the Council to make transfers to the cash fund as to other funds. Some favored contractors whose demands are drawn on special funds never have to wait long for their money. The amount involved is considerable and they know how to pull the wires.

Those who have demands against the cash fund have marked the progress of events, and a movement is on foot to form a combination in the hope that the Council can be induced to do something. There is a question in the minds of many lawyers regarding the right of the city to pay bills contracted one year out of the revenues of the next, and the long period during which the cash fund has been behind is causing some anxiety. Yesterday a lawyer who refused to give his name for publication, said:

"It is high time that something was done to bring the Council to terms on the cash fund. My client has quite a little money tied up in demands on the fund, and he is seriously inconvenienced thereby. We were given to understand that our demands would be promptly paid, but some of them are now overdue six months.

"There isn't a bank in the city that will take the demands as collateral security, and as no interest is paid, the contractors and supply men cannot well afford to wait so long for their pay. I am somewhat worried over the attitude of the Finance Committee, and next week I intend to try and form a pool of those who have demands against it in the hope that the Council will take some action to straighten out the city's finances."

Last week a transfer of $6500 was made to the cash fund from the water revenues. It had been understood that the water moneys would be used solely in bettering the system, but the Council in seeking to ward off the threatened agitation over the cash fund and other accounts that were marked in red ink, took $25,000 and apportioned it among the funds in arrears.

It has been the sustaining hope of the Finance Committee that franchise sales would bring sufficient money into the treasury to meet the deficit, but the unfortunate litigation has tied up the franchises indefinitely. There is also a special fund, containing $20,000, created when the Commercial Investment Company of Duluth made a deposit on the $2,000,000 water bonds under a bid which they repudiated. Several times the Finance Committee has sought to use this money; but the City Attorney has advised against it.

Yesterday the Auditor's daily balance sheet showed most of the city funds in good condition. The building fund is behind $3961.55; new water, $1509.98; street sweping, $7385.64; tunnel improvement fund, $8305.24. These deficits with that in the cash fund make a total of $61,829.46. The balance of cash on hand in all the city funds is $432,577.26.

PRINTING CONTRACT.

MAY BE READVERTISED.

If the statements of five Councilmen are to be believed, the vote by which the printing contract was awarded to the Los Angeles Express, two weeks ago, will be reconsidered by the Council tomorrow, and a readvertisement ordered. This course, it is maintained, is the only one open to the Council, if it would secure a bid based on actual, active competition. Manager Clover's letter to Manager Wilson of the Journal, written after the bids were opened, proves conclusively that there was an understanding between the two papers when the bids of 29 and 40 cents an inch were made.

Powers, Bowen, Walker, Pierce and Lauder all declare that they are in favor of readvertising the contract, and securing bids that are not tainted with collusion. As five votes are all that are needed to secure a reconsideration of the vote of award, it seems that such a course is almost assured.

If the Express and the labor agitators can prevent reconsideration, a strenuous attempt will be made to have the contract awarded on the 40-cent bid. Yesterday Attorney E. L. Hutchison ("El Hutch,") was at the City Hall, buttonholing the legislators on behalf of the Express. As far as known, his efforts were futile.

Want New Quarters.

Tomorrow a petition from the Board of Health, asking that suitable quarters be provided for the department will be presented to the Council. The board says that it not only requests, but implores, the Council to take some action. At the present time the health office is a very poor excuse at best. There is no laboratory, and Dr. Powers purchased about all the meager apparatus used with his own money.

Petition for a Switch.

A petition was filed yesterday by the Armour Packing Company, through F. S. McCullough, manager, asking that it be given permission to build a switch across Vine street, between Second and Third streets.

Fine Original Drawings.

Miss Mary L. Jones, the librarian, is very anxious to secure for the library a fine collection of original drawings by Harry Sandham, which were used in illustrating an edition of "Ramona." When the new library building is secured, it is hoped to have a California room, and these pictures would make fine wall decorations. "Ramona" is one of the most popular books in the library, and Miss Jones believes the pictures will make a valuable addition to the department. The board of directors will be asked to make the purchase, but it is feared that there will not be sufficient funds available, unless some public-spirited citizen steps in and helps out.

Specifications for Pipe.

A copy of the specifications for materials to be used by the Domestic Waterworks system of the city during the six months ending August 1, 1902, was before the Water Supply Committee of the Council yesterday morning. It was decided to ask for bids on pipe and other materials by April 14. No change was made in the specifications as proposed by the Water Commission.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

SCORCHING WORDS FROM JUDGE'S BENCH.

LONG BEACH JUSTICE GIVEN A FEW VERBAL RAPS.

Judge York Takes Ousting Case Against Justice Hall Under Advisement, but Doubts if Latter Can Be Removed from Office.

Justice R. A. Hall of Long Beach is in the throes of anxiety—he does not know whether he is going to lose his robes of office or not. The suit to oust him, brought by one John Williams for alleged willful neglect of official duty, has been taken under advisement by Judge York, who, in so doing, took occasion to say some very harsh things about the justice of the peace.

Williams, convicted of battery in Hall's court, avers that the justice tried to thwart him in taking an appeal.

"The justice," said Judge York from the bench yesterday, "was exceedingly arbitrary, and what he did in the matter of an appeal surpasses anything I ever heard before. I certainly would not lend my approval to his conduct in that case. The evidence shows that he had an animus toward Williams that cannot be approved of in a judicial officer. I don't think he treated the man right at all. Nevertheless, it is a very serious question in my mind whether or not, from the technical standpoint of the law, he can be removed from office for any willful neglect of his official duties, and for that reason I shall take the entire matter under advisement."

Hall contends that he filed the notice of appeal as required by law, settled the statement on appeal within a reasonable time and also forwarded all the papers in the case to the County Clerk's office—in fact, that he did all in the premises that the law laid upon him to do.

He denies that he wished to thwart an appeal, but rather he invited one. The evidence elicited at the trial of the cause also shows that he acted in the matter strictly upon the advice of Deputy District Attorney Wilbur, who instructed him to apply Williams's $100 bail money to the payment of a fine in that amount, and thereby satisfy the judgment. This instruction, says Justice Hall, he followed explicitly, and Deputy Wilbur testified from the witness stand that he had given the above advice.

"INFANT'S" SUIT.

WANTS BIG DAMAGES.

Complaint was filed in the Superior Court yesterday against the Los Angeles Traction Company, asking damages in the sum of $50,000 for personal injuries.

The plaintiff, according to the complaint, is "an infant of the age of 19 years," and John G. Orth, a brother, has been appointed his guardian for the purposes of the lawsuit. The "infant" was injured in an accident on February 16 at the corner of Third and San Pedro streets. While he was attempting to cross the track a car struck him, and he was rolled along in front of the coach for a hundred feet, sustaining a fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain, and many internal injuries.

INCORPORATIONS.

HOMES, POWER AND GOLD.

The Chicago Home Building Company, with principal place of business in Los Angeles, incorporated yesterday with a capital stock of $10,000, divided into $1 shares, fully subscribed. The directors are E. M. Hitchcok, L. C. Hulburt, J. Frank Ballard, R. H. D. Pakenham and H. G. Dow, all of this city. The principal subscribers are J. A. Townsend, R. D. Lamson, T. E. Bird, each of whom holds stock in the sum of $3725.

The Western Power Company, with principal place of business in Los Angeles, also incorporated, naming the capital stock at $5,000,000, divided into $100 shares, of which amount $500 has been subscribed. The directors are T. L. Neal, A. L. Stephens, B. D. Neighbours, T. H. Hastings and W. H. Anderson, all of this city.

The Royal Gold and Copper Company incorporated yesterday, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into $1 shares, of which amount $600,000 has been subscribed. Los Angeles will be the principal place of business. The directors are E. Hill, $250,000; Harry G. Pound, $150,000; Truman Cole, $20,000; Dr. H. K. Emerson, $10,000; Guy Hill, $70,000, all of this city.

CRIMINAL CASES.

KELLY NOT SENTENCED.

Owing to the one case of smallpox in the County Jail, William Kelly, highwayman, of the notorious combination of Myrtle, Case and Kelly, was not sentenced by Judge Smith yesterday, and the matter was continued until next Saturday. This was a great disappointment to the idle hangers-on of the criminal court. A crowd was on hand to see Kelly get a life sentence, even as had his pals before him, who are now doing time in Folsom penitentiary.

An abundance of precaution, however, has directed the authorities to decree that no prisoners shall be taken from the County Jail until such time as danger of spreading smallpox shall have been passed beyond all peradventure of a doubt. Consequently, but little business was done in the criminal court last week, after the discovery of the disease on Wednesday, and this week's business will also be curtailed for the same reason.

No new cases have yet developed in the bastile and it is not likely that any will do so.

Other matters than the Kelly engagement that have been continued are the sentencing of W. C. Wilson for burglarizing the house of Abraham Halsey on February 4 in Fernando and the setting of the trial of John Hayes, "the supper thief," who is facing six burglary charges and one of assault to kill.

The trial of Wong Bin for murder, scheduled to begin tomorrow, will also be postponed.

Informations charging burglary in Pasadena were filed yesterday against Ernest Dowell, alias "Jiggers," and F. A. Smith, alias "Smithy"—the men whom the authorities had to go to Kansas to capture.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW DIVORCES. Divorce suits were begun yesterday by Rosa S. Chapman vs. Henry Chapman, and Minnie J. Carrig vs. John C. Carrig.

AMERICAN NOW. Joseph Mandurati, a native of France, was naturalized by Judge Trask yesterday.

DIVORCES GRANTED. Judge Allen granted divorces yesterday to David J. Liddell from Annie Liddell (unfaithfulness,) and Mary C. Faulkner from Robert H. Faulkner (desertion.) Judge Shaw gave decrees to Ona Baines from G. W. Baines (failure to provide,) and Nellie J. Masters from John H. Masters (unfaithfulness.) The latter court is also taking testimony in the case of Jennie L. Walsh vs. W. H. Walsh. Defendant cross-complains, and the trial is a long series of crimination and recrimination of the ordinary family-scrap sort.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

BOB WIDNEY'S FATE HANGS IN BALANCE.

HEARING ENDED, BUT COURT'S DECISION IS RESERVED.

Justice Austin Will Decide Monday Whether He Shall Be Set Free or Held Over for Trial in the Superior Court.

Bobby Widney's fate will hang tottering in the balance until Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Justice Austin wants to think it over.

The examination on a charge of robbing young Hansen of Boston, after giving him knock-out drops, came to an end yesterday just before noon, the morning session being devoted to the arguments of Deputy District Attorney Chambers and the reply of Mr. Rogers.

When Rogers had fired his last Supreme Court decision and announced that the case was in the hands of the court, there was a long dramatic pause.

There was the stillness of death in the big courtroom crowded to suffocation with spectators.

Widney thought that his doom was about to be read; that in a matter of a few seconds he would either be a free man or started on the way that leads to a long, weary trial and perhaps State's prison in the end.

In that wait there must have been an agony of torture.

Bobby leaned forward in his chair with every muscle tense and his eyes fixed upon the judge. It seemed as though he were scarcely breathing and his face went red and white in waves.

Up on the bench against the purple curtains significant of the majesty of the law, the judge sat a long time, playing with his eye glasses and gazing at them with a fixity as though they were the matter of vital moment.

Rogers sat at the table for him busily fussing with some papers which he was arranging and disarranging. It might mean a triumph for him, and the biggest, perhaps, of his phenomenal career as a criminal lawyer.

So much depended on the words the judge seemed about to say.

Finally the judge slowly turned, looked over the courtroom and asked: "Do I understand that you are through, Mr. Rogers?"

Rogers had been through, but he instantly threw in another brief on such a chance as that. It was another last kick to support his contention that Widney's deed was not a crime, for the reason that it lacked the essential element of unwillingness on the part of Hansen.

"I should like to take this matter under advisement until Monday morning at 9 o'clock," said the judge, "as I cannot do justice to the brief between now and adjourning time."

"No hurry at all," said Rogers briskly; but the expression that came over Widney's face was pitiful.

At the thought at the long hours of doubt and anxiety and uncertainty he must wait there came a look of weary hopelessness beyond all words to tell.

State's prison can hold nothing worse for him than what he must be suffering during that wait.

Policelets.

Joe E. Smith was fined $15 in Justice Morgan's court yesterday for shooting a pigeon within the city limits.

John F. Naden, who stole a finger ring from his employer, got $30 or thirty days in Justice Morgan's court yesterday.

Albert Bell was held for trial for forgery after examination in Justice Morgan's court yesterday, bonds being fixed at $600.

A Whistling Choir.

J. T. Lockhart, superintendent of the Berean Baptist Sunday-school of Augusta, Ga., is responsible for a new departure in church music, and through his efforts the innovation has been eminently successful.

Mr. Lockhart obtained his idea from "The Burgomaster," which recently appeared in Augusta. He heard "The Tale of the Kangaroo" whistled, and when the audience joined in the chorus the effect struck him as being so unique that he at once decided to put it in use in his choir. Mr. Lockhart talked the matter over with the Rev. J. H. Oliver, pastor of the church, and it was decided to try the plan the following Sunday. The Sunday-school numbers 307 members. On the Sunday when Mr. Lockhart had planned to introduce whistling music the exercises were opened by a short talk on the sacredness of all melody and harmony and of the praise that could be rendered to God in every form of music. Mr. Lockhart then told the pupils that they were going to try a new form of music. He said that as a great many of the young men, who had really good voices would not sing because they had never been trained in music, he had decided to form a whistling choir.

The superintendent had no difficulty in inducing the boys and young men to come forward and whistle.—[New York Commercial Advertiser.

Pictorially Maligned.

"Now, if the Goddess of Liberty were only a real person," commented the briefless barrister thoughtfully, "I might stir up some business."

"How?" asked the curious caller.

"Why, she would certainly have a good claim for damages for some of the alleged pictures of her that appear in the cartoons, wouldn't she?" demanded the briefless barrister.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

GAGE IS A DEAD ONE.

Has No Chance for Renomination.

Whole State in Revolt Against Governor.

People Resent His Truckling to Corrupt Politicians.

Discomfited Republican Bosses Turning to Democrats for Succor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Chronicle says in an elaborate article: "Henry T. Gage will not be renominated, and that he could not be elected if he were is conceded by all who are familiar with the temper of the people of California. From every county and hamlet in the State come emphatic protests of Republicans and Democrats alike against even consideration of another term of the administration of Herrin and Gage. The understudy of a few corrupt political bosses is regarded too small and insignificant to be the head of a great and growing State.

"The revolt has reached to the inner circle of the party. The State governing body of the Republican party has not escaped the spirit of defection. The officers of the State Central Committee see the handwriting on the wall.

"W. M. Cutter of Yuba, secretary of the State committee, is outspoken in his opposition to Gage.

"'Notwithstanding that I am secretary of the State Central Committee, I hope Gage will be defeated,' declared Cutter. 'I do not see where he can get even three-eighths of the delegates to the nominating convention, and in this calculation I have given him the best of it at every point.

"'Even the district leaders despise Gage and would willingly vote for another candidate if given an opportunity to do so. He is so manifestly running his office to renominate himself that he has disgusted every decent citizen of the State.

"'In some of the counties the Republicans are ten to one against him. Having found this out, he is turning to the Democrats for support, but for every Democratic vote he secures he will lose five Republicans.'

"Other members of the party from different parts of the State are equally as emphatic as Senator Cutter in their expressions of dissatisfaction with Gage and his administration. In San Joaquin and adjoining counties it is so intense that he will be in luck if he receives one delegate from them. Alameda county is preparing to swing an ax that bodes no good to the political head of the present Governor.

"In San Francisco it is predicted Gage will not carry a Republican district, and that this situation has dawned upon the machine, which he is running is apparent from the fact that its workers are devoting most of their time to the Democratic districts. They hope to be able to secure votes of enough purchasable Democrats to make something of a showing on the South Side.

"Hervey Lindley, formerly boss in Los Angeles, is endeavoring to manipulate Siskiyou for Herrin and Gage. To this end he pretended to take up the fight of Edson for Governor, with a view to turning that candidate down for both Governor and Railroad Commissioner. While he may have succeeded in wiping Edson off the political map for this campaign, the people of Siskiyou are not fond of bosses, and they may furnish a surprise for the Herrin-Gage machine when the convention meets. Placer, Nevada and Sierra are also in the list of counties opposed to the renomination of Gage. In Tehama, Banker Runyon, who was appointed to the Paris commission, is doing all he can for the State machine, but reports from that county have not been encouraging to the State 'push.'

"Santa Clara is divided, with Gage on the small end. In his home county (Los Angeles) Gage is losing ground rapidly. As the Herrin-Gage machine is making its main fights in San Francisco and Los Angeles, the failure to carry either or both of them, which at this time seems the inevitable result, means the defeat of Gage for renomination.

"Other southern counties are also opposed to Gage, and what his administration means. The character of 90 per cent. of his appointments is objectionable to self-respecting citizens, and this feature of the present administration of the affairs of the State will cause the taxpayers and electors to file their most effective protests on the day of the primary election next August; if they are not heeded at that time, they will again be made at the polls in November."

FOUGHT FOR LIBERTY.

Convict Knocks Down Jailer With Iron Bucket, Makes His Escape, but is Soon Recaptured.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This afternoon, a desperate encounter took place at the County Jail between Jailer Molina and two convicts, Ernest Wold and C. D. Benson, sentenced to four and five years, respectively, in the penitentiary.

The fight occurred while the prisoners were being fed. Wold struck the jailer on the head with a ten-pound iron bucket, knocking him to the floor. He then forced the iron door open and escaped into the back yard, scaling a high stone fence. Benson got only part of the way out before he was overtaken by the jailer and forced back.

The pursuit after Wold was at once taken up, he being finally captured after an exciting chase, a shot from one of the officer's guns causing him to submit to rearrest.

BIG HARDWARE COMBINE.

ST. LOUIS, March 22.—The Post-Dispatch will say tomorrow that E. C. Simmons, advisory director of the Simmons Hardware Company, stated tonight in reply to questions that there was a $30,000,000, deal which would probably end in the consolidation of four of the largest hardware concerns in the country.

WASHINGTON.

MILES TO RETIRE.

President's Mind Made Up.

General to Be Taken Off Active List.

Disruption of Cabinet May Be Outcome of Trouble.

Hornet's Nest Stirred Up at the White House—Army Bill Threatened.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The President decided today to assert his authority as commander-in-chief of the army and order Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles out of active service at once.

News of this decision was positively stated today by a member of the Cabinet. It was given at the conclusion of a protracted meeting of the President's advisory body. The feeling on the part of the President is that the repeated so-called "breaks" of the general commanding have seriously affected the discipline of the army, and that he has proven he is no longer fit for command. His retirement, if forced, will stir up a hornet's nest about the White House, but the President is firm.

The old story told again in a New York paper inimical to Gen. Miles, that Gen. Miles made an attempt to get on the last Republican ticket, and, that failing to be named in company with President McKinley, made overtures to Roosevelt, to appear on the same ticket with him, was stamped as a lie by the lieutenant-general.

"All I need to say on that point," said Gen. Miles, "is to refer you to my letter to George F. Washburn, president of the Commonwealth Club of Massachusetts. Here is what I wrote: 'I have not been, and am not now, a seeker for Presidential honors. My ambition has ever been to serve my country faithfully in whatever sphere duty may dictate, and this will be my sole purpose in the future.'"

Gen. Miles declines to talk regarding the reported step to place him on the retired list, but his friends warmly denounce the action. Leading Republican Senators, among them Senator Aldrich and Senator Hawley, it is said, have notified the President that he must look for trouble if he makes use of statements made in confidence before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs as ground for action against the general.

If the President had not found anything to offend him in the testimony before the Senate committee, it is said he would have acted solely on the interview which Miles gave out in regard to the comment his remarks had stirred up.

SERIOUS SNAG.

MILES INCIDENT'S UGLY ASPECT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Journal's Washington correspondent says that the controversy between Secretary Root and the President on the one hand, and Gen. Miles on the other, has become the most serious snag the Roosevelt administration has yet encountered.

If Gen. Miles be disciplined in any way, Secretary Root's army bill will be beaten. If Gen. Miles be not disciplined, the Cabinet will be placed in a ridiculous attitude, having made an issue of Gen. Miles's talk before the Senate Military Committee.

There is no question that the President and Cabinet had a hot discussion of the Miles matter yesterday. All but two members of the Cabinet were for delivering an ultimatum against Miles, but two eminent lawyers of the body succeeded in staving off this action till a "more opportune tme." It is believed these two will resign if any action be taken now.

The dismissal of Miles or rebuke or reprimand of him will precipitate a fight, in which Miles will have the support of Republican leaders, who can make all sorts of trouble for the administration. Senators Aldrich and Hawley will carry their support of him to the length of defeating the administration's army bill. The latter Senator is chairman of the Military Committee. He said today:

"I see the newspapers have linked my name with the bill for the origin of a general staff of the army. I want it distinctly understood that this is not my bill. I had nothing to do with its construction. It was prepared by Secretary Root and the War Department, and not by myself.

"I am bitterly opposed to this measure, and hope it will be defeated. Gen. Miles, in his statement before the committee a few days ago took the proper view of the case.

"Of course we have not had time to ascertain the sentiment of the committee regarding the bill, but from a cursory investigation of the matter I feel warranted in saying that it will be many long days before the bill in its present form is reported to the Senate."

The desire of the administration is to retire Gen. Miles under the statutory provision. If this be done while Congress is in session it is certain both the Senate and House will call for all the papers and the case and precipitate a fight in the Congressional elections this year. This, it is believed, will be avoided at all hazards. Nothing would so effectively split the Republican party as adverse action as to Gen. Miles. The administration is in a quandary. It has announced that action will be taken "as soon as the testimony has been received from the Senate Committee." But no action is possible on this testimony, which is privileged. Therefore, if the President acts adversely, it must be for some reason not yet assigned. The President must seek some other cause for the removal of Miles, which seems to have been determined on.

WATTERSON'S COMMENT.

ROASTS THE ADMINISTRATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Henry Watterson is of the opinion that Gen. Miles is marked for punishment. In an interview today Watterson said:

"Little need be added to what has been said already as to the case of Gen. Miles. From the day when he refused to become an orderly for the administration he was marked for punishment. While Mr. McKinley lived this was limited to condemnation chiefly. But with the advent of Roosevelt a more drastic course of procedure was adopted.

"The President fairly leaped at the first chance to assail and humiliate Gen. Miles that offered itself, or rather that seemed to offer itself, for he had, as a matter of fact, no authority, either under the Constitution of the United States or the articles of war, to reprimand the general, except for a single offense.

"As I have repeatedly shown, without contradiction or denial, the only act for which, under the articles of war, the President may reprimand an officer, is indecent behavior at divine worship. Gen. Miles has not as yet been even accused of that.

"To forge a pretext for the President, the law ruling in such cases was shamefully garbled. The head and front of Miles's offending was that he agreed with Dewey. Yet Funston is permitted and even encouraged to roam at large, abusing his betters without stint or limit.

"Retirement is the club which is held by the choice occupant of the White House over the head of the lieutenant-general of the army, who was fighting the battles of his country when our President bronco-buster was fighting the battles of the nursery. Just now this club is particularly in evidence, the occasion being Gen. Miles's opposition to the administration's new army bill.

"This bill ought to be entitled 'An act to make the President of the United States a military dictator,' because, in effect, that is precisely what it proposes.

"The President has so long and so successfully played the part of a cowboy in politics, that he really aspires to become a 'man on horseback.' Differences of opinion are not to be endured.

"The intolerance which marked the Dreyfus epoch in France is to be the rule or measure of the American War Department.

"An astute and very able New York attorney and politician is to find law for it. Because he answered the call of a committee of Congress, Miles is to be retired.

"Moral: Let the officers of the army beware.

"Result: Arbitrary power culminating in absolutism. Thus slowly but surely is the administration 'Mexicanizing' the government of the United States."

LOS ANGELES BUILDING.

MANY TELEGRAMS ON SUBJECT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In consequence of the setback suffered by the Los Angeles Public Building Bill yesterday and the publication of that fact in the dispatches to The Times, Chairman Mercer of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee has been almost swamped with telegrams from Los Angeles today. These telegrams urged upon Mr. Mercer the necessity for some additional money for the Los Angeles public building, and they came in such volume that Mr. Mercer fled from his committee room, and went off looking for Mr. McLachlan. He asked several dozen members of the House where McLachlan was, but failed for some time to find that statesman.

In his distress Mr. Mercer pounced upon Representative Needham, knowing him to be from Southern California, and asked Needham to tell him what it all meant—whether there really is such an intense need of additional money for Los Angeles or not. Mr. Needham told Mr. Mercer that while he did not care to mix up in the affairs of any local matter outside his district, he did happen to know something about the situation with regards to this building, and that it was his firm conviction that the committee owed it to the government postal service to provide additional money for the work.

"I am strongly in favor of giving Los Angeles an additional appropriation," said Mr. Needham to Mr. Mercer. "I hope that the committee will yet decide to do that."

Representative Kahn said today that he, too, was entirely willing to fall in and help out Los Angeles, because it was apparent to all Californians that there is necessity for more money.

Representative Loud also expressed the hope that some means would be found to give additional funds. If these three nimble-witted Californians get busy on this matter they, with Senator Bard, may be able to pull this chestnut out of the fire yet. But it will be a hard job.

CHUMS' LONG WALK.

PRESIDENT AND GOV. WOOD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was a man to man greeting which took place at the White House today, between the President and Gov.-Gen. Wood. They have been intimate friends for years, having ridden together on bicycles on nearly every street in Washington. This morning Wood burst through the doors while the President was con-

STOLE A MILLION.

Death of Eccentric Stage Celebrity.

Mystery Cleared Up by Her Demise.

Was Widow of Defaulting City Treasurer of Boston.

Husband Committed Suicide Because Wife Rifled the Hub's Strong Box.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Daily America this morning says:

News from Boston saying that "Imogene" is dead, tells of the closing of one of the most remarkable careers of fact or fancy. No romance of the stage was ever more weird or devious than that of this actress, who died almost in obscurity. Many secrets of her career are to be told here for the first time. Her death clears up the mystery surrounding the supposed defalcation and suicide of H. Woodward, treasurer of Boston, in 1878, and gives a chance for relating what became of the $1,000,000 which disappeared from the Hub's strong box with him.

Imogene was Woodward's wife, though none knew it until long after he was dead. She was arrested after a trip around the world, but she was not identified as Imogene. Nor was the real truth about the million dollars ever more than hinted. Now it is known that Imogene was the one who appropriated this huge block of cash, and that Woodward's self-inflicted death was to escape disgracing her and humiliating himself by having her apprehended.

Imogene had a mania for the stage, and to satisfy it, deliberately stole a thousand $1000 bills from funds in her husband's keeping. This information comes from Col. John R. Rogers, under whose management she left New York for a trip around the world in 1878, in Mrs. Johnson's "A Child of Nature." Rogers first heard of Imogene while with a "Pinafore" company in Decatur, Ill. This was in 1878, just a few months after the woman, as Amy Louise Knowlton, had wed Woodward, and only a few days after the treasurer's death. Rogers received a telegram asking on what terms he [illegible] take the management of a youn[illegible] He thought the matter a joke, [illegible] named a very large figure, with $10,000 down to bind the contract. He was astonished to receive the money by wire. He joined her in Boston, and the only stipulation was she should first play in Australia. She wanted to go as far away from Boston as possible.

Maurice Grau and the late Gen. Barton were then managing the California Theater in San Francisco. They had a fine stock company headed by Thomas W. Keene. They heard of Imogene and her money and offered to star her in "A Child of Nature," supported by their company.

The play was produced. It lasted but one week, long enough to consume just forty of the city of Boston's $1000 greenbacks.

Rogers concluded that Imogene was a bad business proposition at any price. Moreover, he was convinced that her mentality was not of the best, and he determined to give up the enterprise. He advised the woman to go back to her parents in Cambridge. In the meantime, he engaged Howley and Bisuley, two famous players of that day, and decided to take them to Australia.

After receiving Rogers's admonition, Imogene sent for him, and he went to her hotel, presumably to bid her farewell. She took him to her room, locked the door, drew a pistol from her skirt, and told him she would kill him, if he did not agree to continue their original agreement. Rogers endeavored to parley for advantage. She flew into a rage, and, raising the revolver, pulled the trigger. The weapon missed fire. She tried again, but each time the cartridges refused to explode. Rogers finally wrested the pistol from her. He has it to this day.

The woman followed Rogers around the world.

The manager of the Theater Royal in Auckland got $60,000 of Boston money. She paid Walter Reynolds, then manager of the Alexander Theater in Melbourne, $25,000 for the privilege of playing there. Then she secured passage on the same ship with Rogers, and on the voyage to England counted out 500 $1000 bills and offered him these to marry her. She followed him to America, where she was arrested, but the authorities decided she could not be held for a crime it was thought her husband had committed. Her last days and money were spent projecting fly-by-night companies in which she played obscure parts under queer assumed names.

RAILROAD RECORD.

HARRIMAN WANTS MORE.

Appetite for Railroads Seems to Grow.

Preparing to Absorb Mexican Central.

Central Pacific Cut-off Contracts—Surveyors Meet at Imperial.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. H. Harriman has been making very thorough inspection of Mexican Central properties during the past six days. He has traveled back and forth between San Luis Potosi and Torceon and has just finished a trip over the Tampico and Monterey divisions.

Harriman seems to have paid little attention to the Mexican National during his stay in Mexico, and the opinion prevails in railroad circles that the Mexican Central is really to be transferred to the Harriman interests, notwithstanding the general understanding that the H. Clay Pierce syndicate had no desire to part with it.

Harriman's failure to inspect the Mexican National is taken to indicate that the deal for the acquirement of the property by the Southern Pacific interests has already been consummated, and as his time in Mexico was limited, he gave his whole attention to the Mexican Central.

MEET AT IMPERIAL.

TWO SURVEYING PARTIES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

IMPERIAL, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Surveyors of two railroads met here today in prosecution of their work. One party concluded the preliminary surveys of the Imperial and Guten from the Southern Pacific road south to Imperial, and now will begin the permanent survey on the line. Graders will begin work within thirty days.

The other party is surveying the San Diego Eastern. The survey has reached the eastern base of the mountains. The men are reconnoitering the desert before continuing the survey through to Yuma. They are supposed to be working in connection with the Burlington.

CAN GO THROUGH RESERVATION

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative Needham today obtained from the Secretary of the Interior leave for the San Diego Eastern Railroad Company to make a survey for the road through the Yuma Indian Reservation. The surveying camp is now on the desert headed for Yuma.

TWELVE CONTRACTS SET.

CENTRAL PACIFIC CUT-OFF.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Several contracts for the construction of the Central Pacific between Wadsworth, in Nevada, and Ogden, have just been let, making a total of twelve contracts up to date. The latest contracts call for the building of 200 miles of new road at a total cost of $5,180,000. Contracts for the reconstruction of a hundred more miles of road will be let later on, the object being to eliminate curves and cut down grades.

By the middle of May, 7000 graders will be at work along the Central Pacific. The Southern Pacific people want to get the heaviest part of the work in Nevada and Utah finished by the end of the year. The cut-off across the northern end of the Great Salt Lake will require a longer time. Work on the first sixteen miles of the cut-off west from Ogden has been commenced.

DENVER SHORT LINE.

MOFFATT HAS THE CAPITAL.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

DENVER (Colo.) March 22.—It is stated that David H. Moffatt, at a conference with New York capitalists, who met to consider plans for the new Salt Lake road, announced positively his intention to see that the road is constructed. Capital for the completion of the road is available, and the awarding of contracts, April 2, for the first ten miles of the Denver and Northwestern beyond Arvada to Coal Creek will be the beginning of construction work on the line.

HILL'S MERGER.

MORE SUITS THREATEN.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PAUL, March 22.—Atty.-Gen. W. B. Stratton of the State of Washington has been in this city during the past week in consultation with Atty.-Gen. Douglas, and plans have been outlined for proceeding against the so-called merger of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railways. The plan embraces a suit against the two railroads and the Northern Securities Company in the State courts of Washington.

FRENCHMAN EXECUTED.

Arbitrary Action of the Haytian Government Likely to Get it into Trouble With France.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PORT AU PRINCE (Hayti) March 22.—[By West Indian Cable.] Leon Gabriel, a man charged with treason, fired a revolver today at Gen. Cameau, the Chief of Police, who intended to arrest him. The general, who was not wounded, drew his pistol, fired at Gabriel and wounded him. Gabriel was arrested and immediately afterward was executed.

Gabriel was a French citizen, and came from the island of Gaudeloup. Hence complications with France are feared. The body of Gabriel was claimed by the French Minister, and was taken to the French hospital. The French colony is much affected by the event.

"OUR STEVE'S" SPEECHES.

Utterances of the Late Senator White in Great Demand.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] None but really great Senators are remembered long after they are dead, and in but few cases are there demands for the speeches of Senators after they have passed from the public gaze. Yet many Senators and Representatives are now ordering the "Speeches of Stephen M. White," which will be presently published in attractive book form. These speeches have been compiled by R. Woodland Gates, who was secretary to Senator White during his services in Washington, and who is now secretary to Senator Bard.

LABOR.

UNION LABORITES AGAIN RIOT IN NORFOLK.

DRIVE PASSENGERS FROM CARS AND BEAT TRAINMEN.

Several Shots Fired by Men in Mob That Made Attack at Atlantic City. Three of the Cars Run into Suburbs and Wrecked.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NORFOLK (Va.) March 22.—Riotous disturbances by sympathizers with the striking street railway men were resumed here and at Atlantic City tonight. Three cars were raided by strike sympathizers, who drove the passengers out, severely beat the non-union trainmen and then ran the cars into the suburbs, where they were disabled and abandoned. In Atlantic City several shots were fired by the crowd, which attacked a car. Two of the rioters were arrested there.

WANT HIGHER WAGES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—There is a posibility that bridge work on the great structure known as the East River bridge and all other ironwork on buildings in the course of construction in New York, will come to a sudden stop on May 1 next.

On or before that late the representatives of the Housesmiths' and Bridgesmiths' Union will demand an advance of wages from their present scale to 40 cents an hour. Unless their demands are met with they are determined to stop work throughout the entire county.

MINERS IN DEADLOCK.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SHAMOKIN (Pa.) March 22.—Difference of opinion on matters pertaining to the wage scale prevented a final adjournment today of the convention districts 1, 7 and 9, United Mine Workers. After being in session for three hours the convention adjourned to meet Monday and many of the delegates assert that a conclusion will not be reached that day.

The conservative element is known to favor referring final decision to a committee composed of President Mitchell and District Presidents Nichols, Fahey and Duffy. The radicals, who represent principally the Wyoming and Lackawanna regions, insist upon the adoption of a resolution allowing the operators until April 12 to grant the concessions demanded in the wage scale, and if this time limit is fixed, they say, they have no objection to placing the matter in the hands of the committee named.

PAPER MAKERS MAY STRIKE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Representatives of newspaper manufacturers and of labor unions interested in the paper trade had a conference today. It was called by Secretary Easley of the National Civic Federation, to avert, if possible, a threatened strike of the men employed in the paper mills. The men had said they would go out in the near future unless the different companies would grant certain concessions in their favor. Up to six months ago they worked twelve hours a day and six days a week. This did not suit the employers, and it was decided that a schedule of eight or nine hours a day would be put in force, with seven days' work instead of six. The labor unions would not indorse this schedule, and it is one of the rules that no work be done on Sunday. The employers wished to keep to the new rule on account of the necessity of using the pulp before it became dry.

"HUNGRY JOE" COULD NOT CHEAT DEATH.

NOTORIOUS BUNCO STEERER IS TAKEN IN AT LAST.

Gen. John A. Logan, Judge Noah Davis, Charles Francis Adams and Oscar Wilde the Most Notable Among His Many Scores of Victims.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Hungry Joe" is dead. He was a noted bunco steerer, who swindled many famous men, and was known to the police of many countries. He died in an apartment house in this city, after four weeks' illness from Bright's disease. He had other names than that by which he figured in police records. Among these were Joseph Lewis, George H. Post, George Howard and Francis Alvaney.

For a quarter of a century Hungry Joe was one of the most conspicuous figures in criminal life. He was known wherever the English language was spoken, but could take care of himself in French or German centers quite as easily.

Probably "Hungry Joe's" most notable victim was Gen. John A. Logan, who lost $5000 by him. The late Judge Noah Davis was also one of his early victims, and Charles Francis Adams fell into his net. Another conspicuous victim was Oscar Wilde. Oscar paid for his acquaintance with "Hungry Joe" $1000 in cash and $1500 in notes.

PITH OF NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Northeast winds continue to keep down the temperature. The mercury today registered 37 deg. at its highest point. Temperatures at 7 o'clock a.m., were: New York, 48; Boston, 50; Philadelphia and Washington, 44; Chicago and Minneapolis, 36; Cincinnati and St. Louis, 42.

SENATORIAL RACE.

There were two important developments in the race for the Senatorship today. One was the announcement that Luther Laflin Mills would declare himself a candidate Monday, and the other the withdrawal of Congressman Foss from the contest. A non-factional review of the county conventions thus far held in Illinois shows that thirty conventions have elected a total of 331 delegates. Of these 148 are credited for Congressman A. J. Hopkins to succeed Senator Mason, eleven are instructed for Mason, while the remaining 172 are untrammeled, though a majority are against the Yates-Lorimer-Hopkins combine.

GRAIN GOES DOWN.

The Board of Trade pits today were the scenes of excitement not equaled since the Phillips deal. The closing figures on May were 72 cents for wheat, 58¼ cents for corn and 41¾ cents for oats. The overwhelming desire to sell was due to favorable crop outlook. The weather is highly favorable for plowing and planting. Rains in the Southwest were another favorable indications for large crops.

MRS. CATHERWOOD IMPROVES.

Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, authoress, who submitted to an operation several days ago, and is ill at the Woman's Hospital, is much improved and it is expected that she will be able to leave the hospital within a week or ten days.

WROTE HIS OWN EPITAPH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge William Cole Talcott of Valparaiso has completed his own funeral service, which is to be read bo Judge William Johnson, and which is in stately verse, not only written, but set in type by the aged subject. Judge Talcott has had a monument erected in the Valparaiso Cemetery, and on this he has caused to be written his epitaph in accordance with his ideas of a much-needed reform in phonetic spelling.

TARKINGTON'S ENGAGEMENT.

The engagement of Newton Booth Tarkington, author of "Monsieur Beauccio" and other well-known books, to Miss Louise Fletcher, daughter of Stoughton Fletcher, the banker, while not formally announced yet, is admitted by the relatives and immediate friends of both.

WILL SEE BETTER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ogden H. Fethers of Janesville, head of the Knights of Pythias, in this country, is at St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment for an affection of the eyes. He will be able to return home in another week.

WIRELESS MESSAGE.

The City of Racine, which has arrived today, reported that during the passage from Milwaukee to Racine messages were received by wireless telegraphy instruments at intervals of half an hour or more from this city. Four were successfully read on board the ship.

DRUMMED OUT OF TOWN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NILES (Mich.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Hill, the former until recently pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal Church at Marshall, were given an unusual send-off this evening, when they departed for Jackson. Mrs. Barbara Taylor, one of the leading members of the congregation, with whom the preacher had trouble over church affairs, dressed herself in a gown representing the devil and with an eighteen-quart tin pail and a baseball bat, drummed them out of town.

CASE AGAIN INTERRUPTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

QUINCY (Ill.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. Josiah Barnes, aged 64, was stricken with cerebral congestion today in Riverside township, where, as town clerk, he was hearing a contested election case which was interrupted Thursday by the sudden death of Gen. E. B. Hamilton. It is thought that he will die.

FAMILY POISONED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EMPORIA (Kan.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank Gadberry, his wife and two children, were taken suddenly ill tonight with symptoms of poisoning. They are not expected to survive. About six months ago the entire family was taken sick in a similar manner. At that time it was decided that the illness was caused by eating impure canned goods. Neighbors are suspicious that the poisoning resulted from some other cause.

INCORPORATED IN ARIZONA.

Charter from State of Iowa Too Expensive for Million-dollar Beet-sugar and Oil Company.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Several weeks ago the local papers published under flaring headlines a story of the incorporation of a "million dollar" beet-sugar plant. The incorporation was the Western Development Company. Its articles of incorporation provided that it should have the right to engage in the raising of sugar beets, and manufacture of beet sugar, but also included the right to own oil and coal lands, and to engage in the drilling of oil wells, refining of oil, mining of coal, and a number of other similar enterprises.

When the articles of incorporation were presented to the Secretary of State he demanded a filing fee of $1017. The result is that the incorporation has been made in Arizona, where the filing fee amounted to only about $40.

The company, which is composed of a number of Council Bluffs business and professional men, controls valuable oil lands near Los Angeles, which it expects to develop.

Steamer Alice Probably Lost.

VANCOUVER (B. C.) March 22.—The steamer City of Seattle from Skagway brought news today of the probable loss of the little steamer Alice in Mill Bank Sound on Thursday night. The Alice was in tow of the Neptune and broke loose from the latter during the night. Next morning no trace of the steamer could be found, and it is thought she was lost.

VICEROY OF CANTON URGES MA TO DO SOMETHING.

According to Mail Advices the Reformers Are Back of the Revolution. Avalanche in West Japan Kills Over One Hundred Persons.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HONGKONG, March 22.—[By Asiatic Cable.] The rebels have captured the prefectural town of Kam Chou, in the province of Kwang Tung, and have seized the arsenal and granaries. The mandarins of the garrison fled, and appealed to Canton for reinforcements. The Viceroy of Canton replied that it was impossible to further deplete the Canton garrison, and urged that Gen. Ma make the utmost efforts to put down the rebellion.

REFORMERS' WORK.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) March 22.—According to advices received by the two oriental liners, which arrived here today, the reformers are back of the big revolution in South China, which is widespread, and a serious movement. Coincidentally reports come from Kansu and Mongolia, in the northwest, of outbreaks fomented by Tung Fu Hsien, ex-Boxer, aided by Mongolian princes. The Nang correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury says that 10,000 rebels have massed there to move on Kwang Si towns.

A terrible accident is reported from West Japan, where an avalanche slid down upon a petroleum works beneath a hill February 18, causing the death of over a hundred Japanese. About eighty bodies were taken out, and four were rescued alive, but terribly burned.

The oil works, warehouses, offices and dwellings were crushed and in parts not entirely submerged, fire started and all the buried buildings with the imbedded people were burned.

VERY RIPE OLD AGE.

Pierre Laverdure Dies in Lewiston, Mont., After Having Lived One Hundred and Eleven Years.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LEWISTON (Mont.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pierre Laverdure, the oldest inhabitant of Montana and probably of the United States, died here yesterday. Laverdure was 111 years of age, and had lived in three centuries. For nearly thirty years he lived near Lewiston.

The dead man was a French and Indian half-breed, and there is not the slightest doubt as to the accuracy of the numbering of his years. Up to the time of his death he was straight as an arrow, and retained his mental faculties.

The pictorial edition of the Lewiston Argus issued last year contained a picture of Laverdure together with an account of his life, which is most interesting in the annals of longevity. Owing to the distance that Laverdure lived from railroads, but little has been known of his existence outside of Fergus county and North Montana. His father lived to be 112, and his mother was 120 when she died.

GIVES OFFICE TO GUDEN.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Justice Gaynor of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn late today handed down a decision, to the effect that Charles Guden is the Sheriff of Kings county, and declaring the action of Col. Dike and his associates in breaking into the Sheriff's office unwarranted. Guden was recently removed from office by Gov. Odell, who appointed Col. Dike in his place.

The Quickest Cough Eradicator.

[From the Shortsville, N. Y., Enterprise.]

This is the month that one takes cold so easily, and quickly—secures that "hacking" cough, which is so persistently disagreeable as we know by personal experience. And we also know that the quickest eradicator of such cough has been Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and which has been our staunch standby for several years. This is no paid "puff," but merely a just recognition of an invaluable remedy for coughs, colds and all lung affections, and like the editor, it has scores of other staunch friends in this town.—[Adv.

Town of Imperial....

Imperial is to be a railroad town in a very few months. This is now a settled fact. It is another settled fact that a railroad town offers the very best inducements for investment and speculation. To this rule there are absolutely no exceptions. The Imperial Land Company has not pushed the sale of lots in Imperial, because the management desired to first make sure of the building of the railroad. That being now an assured fact, the lots will sell themselves; buyers will now seek the sellers, and the sellers will not have to seek the buyers. Readers should watch for the daily change in the Imperial advertisements—a new statement every day.

San Jacinto Mountains,
Riverside County, California.

The Company that is making a signal success of the Idyllwild Sanitorium has just purchased 2713 acres more of pine forests, making their entire tract a beautiful mountain park of nearly 16 square miles, and will open June 1st a rustic tavern, about one-half mile from Idyllwild, for summer guests.

In connection therewith will be bowling alleys, golf links, lawn tennis, croquet, shooting range, pleasure pavilion, baths and five hundred tents.

Mr. Frank W. Cain, who for two years successfully managed Sturtevant's camp, and is now connected with the Raymond Hotel, will be the camp and tavern superintendent under the general management of Mr. R. A. Lowe.

The table will be supplied to satisfy the usual mountain appetite.

Every person is invited to write his choice of a name for this mountain house on a postal card and mail to Mr. R. A. Lowe, Idyllwild, Riverside County, Cal. The person whose selection is accepted will receive free of charge one month's board at the new tavern.

If more than one person suggests the name accepted, then the one received first will get the prize.

LLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

AINS of earlier Christian art e to be found in the East, and in gypt. That Christians made their o Damascus and to Egypt before y went even to Rome has been the ntion of many scholars, and the ains tend to confirm this theory, as l as remains of early art which ve been discovered only lately.

The catacombs of Rome are by no ns the only Christian catacombs in world, nor were they the first to be nd. They were only the first to be overed, because they were located the modern capital of the Roman rch, and the tradition of their ex- e was fresh in the minds of Chris- scholars.

ensive ruins of the catacombs of yra have now been found, and decorations rival those of the n subterranean meeting places of faithful. It is easy to see why the y Christians went to Palmyra, for one of the great commercial of ancient times, and especially e second century of the Christian Palmyra was only 150 miles east amascus, the very city in which postle Paul received his revela- and the place in which the re- of the oldest Christian church in d are now covered by a Mo- dan mosque. more than possible that much inspiration of Christian art in is due to Palmyra and its congregations; for it was the majestic Queen of Pal- who made her capital so beauti- it attracted the covetous eyes emperors, and thereby about her downfall, and caused led a captive in a Roman tri- procession.

doubtless true that many of were converted to the by the ardent Christians, from the scene of the cru- and that the first thing to oc- them was to dedicate their tal- service of Christianity by the subterranean chapels and tombs where they met for worship.

It is plain to the eye of the archaeologist that this art belongs to that of a late Greek period, but that it was influenced by Persian and Semitic ideas. In fact, the discovery of the catacombs at Palmyra makes it possible to explain the peculiar art found in the Roman catacombs, which has been hitherto hardly explicable. It is made plain at last that the inspiration of Roman Christian art came from the East and Egypt, and not that the art of Rome was the original, extending its influence eastward and southward. Light has again come from the east—ex oriente lux!

Other treasures of even greater interest than these catacombs, with their rare paintings, have lately been brought before the world by Prof. Josef Strzygowski, who has made a special study of some treasures lately acquired by the National Museum at Berlin.

CHRIST AND APOSTLES.

The most notable among these is a wonderful group in marble representing Jesus and two of His apostles, probably Paul and Peter. The capitals employed prove that the group was made in Asia Minor, and that the Central figure is intended for Jesus appears to be absolutely proved by the nimbus with a cross in it which is over his head.

This bit of statuary dates from no later than the early part of the second century, if not from the latter part of the first. It was still possible for the artist to have a reliable tradition of the personal appearance of Jesus, although his Greek training was such that he portrays Him without a beard, which, of course, was imposible, since it is certain that Jesus belonged to the sect of the Nazarites, who neither shaved nor cut their hair.

This artistic and imposing group is of sligthly less than life size, and was found in a little Armenian church on the outskirts of Constantinople, whither it was taken from Asia Minor, where it was probably the altar piece of some richly-adorned church That the personages on each side of Jesus are probably Paul and Peter is evident from the books in their hands, symbolizing the spread of the gospel through them.

A comparison of this group of statuary with the sarcophagi of the second century shoys that they come from the same time and from artists inspired by Greek thought and influenced by Persian and Semitic ideas.

Such, then, are the treasures which have so lately been brought to light from the Far East, both the catacombs of Palmyra and this marble group proving the most valuable discoveries of recent years. In fact, the statue of Jesus may justly claim to be the first statue of Him found, remarkably well preserved, when we consider the time which it has stood, and the various fortunes which it must have suffered.

How it was taken from the original church in Asia Minor and brought to the little Armenian church near Constantinople, must ever remain unknown, but that so heavy a piece of statuary should have been transported hundreds of miles, and at last placed in this church, speaks volumes for the devotion of those who brought it thither.

WOOD-CARVING IN SECOND CENTURY.

From Egypt now come some remains of Christian art no less remarkable in their way and just as unique.

Here is a wood carving dating from the second century, found in Hermopolis, in Northern Egypt, tending to prove the permanent settlement of at least one Christian colony in this famous city. This carving is in itself a work of art of no small pretensions, but its subject adds considerably to the interest in it. It seems that this must have hung in some Christian church, probably on one of the pillars, as an inspiration to the true believers when attacked by their foes.

Here we have a spirited representation of Christian warriors driving off barbarian foes. To the expert, the devices upon the shields indicate the Christian faith of those repelling the assault. Here is telling evidence of the strenuous life led by the early Christians in Egypt, a bit of history told by a contemporaneous carving tool with far more effectiveness than pen or pencil could present it. Though only fifteen inches in height, it is remarkable for the power of the sculpture and the lifelikeness of the grouping.

From other districts in Egypt come some very interesting, if different, testimonials to the devotion of the first Christians. In the Fayum, that district in which the famous "Logia" or "Sayings of Jesus" were found a few years ago, some curtains and weavings have been discovered which are peculiarly interesting as illustrative of the early date at which the custom of weaving scriptural scenes into hangings and altar cloths prevailed. The nature of the material is such that we can hardly expect to find these hangings so well preserved as are statues and wall paintings.

Though fragmentary, the fragments are in themselves remarkable. Anyone who has studied the pictures upon the walls of the Roman catacombs has been struck by the fact that of all the stories of the Old Testament that of Daniel in the lions' den seems to be the favorite with the Christian artist. It is explained by the fact that the story of his devotion and miraculous rescue appealed most powerfully to those who were in almost daily expectation of themselves being forced into the den of roaring lions in the Roman arena. In Egypt the same thought led the Christian weaver to perpetuate the story of Daniel in his altar cloth, and there are the lions and Daniel, with the name Daniel written above his figure so that no mistake is possible.

TAPESTRIES BEAR HAND MARKS.

These fragments and strips of what were once imposing hangings and altar cloths have now found their way to the museum in Berlin, where they are attracting the attention of every visitor who understands their significance. Discovered in the Christian tombs of the Fayum, they are additionally identified as of Christian origin by the peculiar marks which any one will recognize as convincing.

For instance, when we find that Daniel's robe is covered with crosses we can hardly attribute the making of the curtain to other than Christian hands, although the subject of Daniel is taken from the Old Testament, and it is well known that there were numerous settlements of Jews in Egypt during the two centuries before this era and after it.

There is another Old Testament subject—Moses—whom we would hardly recognize were it not for the rude writing of his name in uncial Greek beside the strange drawing. There is, unfortunately, only a fragment of this curtain left, but it is supposed, from the position of Moses, that originally this was a representation of the revelation on Mt. Sinai.

The most interesting of all these Christian weavings is that on which the head and figure of St. Peter is found, identified by the name scrawled around it. He is receiving the gospel from Jesus, whose figure, unfortunately, has disappeared with the decaying fabric on which it was once embroidered. There seems to be little doubt that Jesus and two of the apostles were represented here originally, for there is space for the two other figures, and over their heads the miracle of the loaves and fishes, a favorite theme with early Christian artists, is to be seen.

Another hanging represents Peter and Paul, but time has so dimmed the color of the threads in which they were woven that it is rather difficult to follow the outlines. The wonder is not that we cannot see them more plainly, but that the fabric has not perished altogether in the lapse of eighteen hundred years, as it would have done anywhere else than in the dry earth and air of Egypt.

Prof. Strzygowski also calls attention to that remarkable Constantine bowl in the British Museum, on which is found the nimbus with the cross on it, discovered on the marble group described heretofore. This is one of ahe chief Christian treasures of the British Museum, for, even though it is only a broken bit of glazed white clay, it could not be bought for ten times its weight in gold. On the inside of the bowl is a striking picture of Jesus, with the cross nimbus etched on the clay. Above and on each side are outline drawings of a man and a woman.

The picture of the man bears a close resemblance to the profiles of Constantine the Great found upon coins, and it is supposed that the other picture is that of either his wife, Faustina, or his mother, St. Helena. She is generally considered to have led her son to Christianity, and it is to her that the discovery of the cross upon which Jesus was crucified is attributed. She it was who erected the great Basilica over the grotto at Bethlehem and over the sepulchre at Jerusalem.

There is no doubt as to the genuineness of this bowl, and that once it stood upon the table of the Roman Emperor whose name it bears in the inscription. It shows how much Constantine must have been impressed with the new faith when he put a picture of Jesus and His cross upon this bowl.

Of all these treasures it is the latest, but not the least valuable on that account.

THE STEWART FORTUNE.

All That A. T. Stewart Built has Been Destroyed or Made of Little Value—Fate of His Greatest Charity.

[Kansas City Star:] Strange is the fate which pursued New York's great merchant, Alexander T. Stewart, destroyed the buildings which he reared as mouments, and even robbed the grave of his body. All that he built, with the exception of two business structures, has been obliterated. His mansion of marble, which cost a million dollars, has been leveled to the dust, and a dealer in second-hand material gave a few hundred dollars for the rubbish. The Workingwomen's Hotel, one of the projects which was dear to his heart, has become the scene of tragedy and ruin. The house which he bought from M. Depau, painted and decorated and furnished with glass and mahogany and gold, has been torn down, and in its stead is a lodging-house. Niblo's Garden has been razed; The Metropolitan and St. Nicholas hotels have long since disappeared.

The city in Long Island which was to have been the center of a new life did not fulfill his expectations, and the great caravansary which he built there is closed for a large part of the year.

Prosperity smiled on Alexander T. Stewart in his lifetime. Yet every place where he lived seemed to be blighted. First of the pretentious adobes in which he made his home was one of the mansions of the famous Depau row, in Bleecker street. In the parlor of that house I have seen twenty of the men and women of the sweatshop plying their trade. A dealer in horse medicine had strewn the floor of the dining-room with a loose heap of his panacea for equine ills. A tinsmith occupies the stable where once the sleek coach horses and the handsome carriages had been kept. A family of five persons dwelt in the bedroom, the ceiling of which was canopied and painted to resemble the firmament. The mansion served as a tenement, and was finally demolished to make room for the Mills Hotel No. 1.

Mr. Stewart abandoned Depau row for his mansion at the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street. He watched the growth of the palace of marble. Each block passed his inspection. The plan of the building was largely his own. The rooms, uncomfortably full of draughts, magnificently uninhabitable, were his pride. He built the dwelling, he firmly believed, as one of the permanent show places of the metropolis.

Long before the house was finished he gave orders to weavers of carpets and rugs all over the world to prepare their choicest fabrics for its furnishing. The carpets for the big rooms were woven all in one piece. The lace curtains represented a fortune. The furniture, large, cumbersome, and expensive, was prepared before a roof was in place. Curious sideboards, cupboards and strange devices were built into the walls. The studios of Europe were searched for the paintings, which furnished the art gallery.

The merchant prince finished his palace in time to die amid the splendors of the "lace room." The Manhattan Club leased the house, and finally it had no tenant. It was found so ill adapted to any public purpose that it was reduced to second-hand building material.

As Alexander T. Stewart lay dying, he said he was glad that he had made provision for a charity which should forever attest his interest in those whom he had employed. Women had been his customers. He had built a fortune upon the whims of fashion as shown in feminine attire. Young women he had employed by the hundreds in his great stores.

"I have made my money out of women," said he, "and now I intend to do something for them, at least, for the poorer ones."

It was with this idea in mind that he developed his plans for the Workingwomen's Hotel. Never did a founder of a charity go about his work with a more beneficent purpose. The hotel was for self supporting women of moderate means, and he was positive that it would be a success. He died in 1876, and two years later the much-talked-of Workingwomen's Hotel was formally dedicated. It was a splendid structure, containing 600 rooms, a beautifully-furnished parlor, a library and an inner court, where there were palms and a fountain in summer. It was an ideal home for 1000 young women.

New Yorkers well remember that day when the doors were opened. Thirty thousand persons are said to have thronged the halls and corridors until they became confused in the great hotel, and as a result the place was not cleared for hours after the reception was supposed to be over.

Thousands of young women applied for admission to the hotel. Their credentials were apparently all that could be desired. Yet of all the applicants only 150 were accepted.

The life of this exclusive number was not a pleasant one, for the rules of the institution became stricter with every week, as though they were made to drive patrons from the place rather than to attract them to it. The "tips" required to get any service were considerable, and the cost of living was far above the rate which Mr. Stewart had in mind. The rules emptied the place.

After the place was abandoned as far as the idea of the founder was concerned, it became a hotel for the accommodation of the general public—the Park Avenue Hotel. It was considered a splendid and substantial example of architecture when it was built, and it was supposed to be fireproof. The fire in the armory of the Seventy-first Regiment filled the corridors with smoke. If the hotel was fireproof, the lungs of the patrons were not. Nearly a score of them perished from suffocation. The hotel which Alexander T. Stewart planned as a charitable enterprise is now as desolate as the walls of Balclutha.

Thought the Editor Was Lazy.

At the Waldorf-Astoria the other evening a good story was told of a western newspaper owner who was at the hotel recently. He made his money as a miner, and when he purchased the newspaper to aid him in his political aspirations he was by no means thoroughly familiar with the inner workings of a newspaper office. After the paper had been his for about a week he discharged the exchange editor. There was consternation in the office, as the man was a faithful and efficient person, and the managing editor went to protest. "Why, I think he's lazy," said the new proprietor. "He is doing nothing but reading the newspaper every time I pass his office."—[Editor and Publisher.

NEW YORK HOME FOR LITTLE MOTHERS.

AN EAST SIDE INSTITUTION TO HELP SMALL GIRLS.

Its Work Among the Tenement Children—The Influence of Surroundings—Pride That the Children Take in Their Homes.

[New York Sun:] The lofty, mirror-lined rooms at No. 236 Second avenue, where the clever men and women of two continents used to assemble as guests of the British Consul, is now the home of 6000 tenement-reared young girls who make up the membership of the Little Mothers' Aid Association. They and their mothers come up nightly from the heart of the tenement district and sit in their club meetings under a wonderful cut-glass chandelier, bought by the Consul, and their shabby figures are reflected in three mirrors of Venetian glass.

"Pitifully as we need money," say the officers of the association, "we would not turn that glass and gilt into dollars. Its influence is really stronger than we are."

Indeed, the sparkling chandelier has thrown its beams far into the dark of the East Side, and illumined many a top-story home and brightened life for many a discouraged heart. The association's work is in its twelfth year. And many homes in New York owe to it gifts ranging from rent and bread to health and cleanliness, and the use of books.

"Our name ought to go to everybody's heart," said Mrs. A. C. Packard, the superintendent, to a a Sun reporter. "Girls under 14 make up our membership, some of them 6 and 7 years old.

"Upon these devolves the care of two or three babies, while their mother is out at work, and often of a neighbor's child, too. They are the little mothers, and they have had almost no childhood themselves."

When the association bought the great house called the old "Canada" place, for $30,000, the officers chose it partly on account of its location and partly because it is beautiful. Nearly all homes of philanthropic effort, they argued, lack the dignity and atmosphere which are powerful allies to actual effort.

The huge drawing-room, the music-room back of it, and the library at the rear, connected by great carved archways and sliding glass doors; the enormous mirrors and chandeliers and the handsome velvet portieres sold with the house did not, they thought, make the "Canada" place unsuitable for their purpose. Far from that; it enabled them to prove that the children of the tenements are peculiarly sensitive to their surroundings, and to turn that sensitiveness to good account.

"We have wonderfully proved our belief in what would be the influence of the house," said Mrs. Packard. "The children were happy at first just to walk through the rooms. Gradually, when it was necessary, we let them use the drawing-room for their sewing classes.

"It is strange, indeed, to see the little pinched faces and plain gingham gowns working soberly on coarse garments in the rooms whose walls look ready to welcome at any moment a line of the brilliant guests wrom they used to shelter. But I doubt if the mirrors, reflecting velvet-gowned and jeweled women in the old days, were ever filled with such happy faces as on the nights when the mothers of the little mothers, decently shawled, slip in and sit breathless through an entertainment by their children.

"The personal pride of the children in the place is not only pride in their home, but pride because it is a beautiful home. Sometimes I enter the drawing-room suddenly and find a little girl stepping delicately about with a dust cloth, lovingly touching the marble of the mantel or the gilt frames of the glass. They steal in unbidden to this task, and it is recreation to them.

"I never recall without tears the joy they had in the purchase of the house. We had outgrown the Stuyvesant street place, and the floors on Third avenue, and the whole house in Twenty-first street, and the classes were sadly cramped for room. After we bought the house one of the little mothers came to a temperance meeting with a newspaper in her hand.

"'Girls,' she said, 'now we're rich. We've bought a house.'

"I said: 'Is it true, we have bought a house? Well, then, we're very poor, because we've got to pay for it.'

"So I put up a box on the wall for their pennies, to go toward the new house, and in an incredibly short time they had saved $15—these children who have nothing.

"'This is our house,' they tell visitors now. 'We helped pay for this house.'

"Indeed, they did help, with cents and with tears. One bitterly cold day, while the box was yet unfilled, two little girls came, bringing their tiny brother.

"'Baby would come,' they said; 'he has a penny for the box.'

"So they stood him on a chair, and he dropped in the cent, and Lizzie, the sister who had earned it, turned her wistful face to me, the tears kept bravely back, as she said:

"'Well, it'll help buy the house, whichever one puts it in.'

"I believe the love and reverence those children have for their home is a great deal owing to their delight in its real beauty. If we let them in here for a day we influence them. It is not only another world in spirit, but to them it is another visible world.

"Briefly, our aim is simply to take care of these little girls who are entrusted with the duties of mothers before they can speak plainly; to constitute ourselves a day nursery for their baby charges so that they themselves may go to school; and then, when school is over, to welcome them home to bread and milk, and two hours of class work in cooking and sewing, and general housework.

"The lessons in personal cleanliness, in care of clothing, and in morals, the loaning of books, the mother's club, the sheltering of those turned out of doors at night by drunken parents, the summer outings for them all, and the daily care and amusement of the babies brought from dark tenements to our sunny nursery, clothed in clean gingham and taught their letters—these are some of the things we try to carry on. The life of a little mother is the essence of sadness of the entire tenement-house district.

"At half past five o'clock they come here mornings, and sit on the steps and on the lions on either side of the door, waiting patiently to get in. The home opens at 8 o'clock.

"By that time we have from a dozen to twenty little women, carrying one-year and two-year-old baby brothers and sisters, all waiting for their breakfasts. We let them in and feed them, and send the babies up to the nursery where there is a wonderland of toys, such as most of them never dreamed of. Then for a little while we 'mother' the little mothers.

"Every one of them has successfully to pass inspection before she can go to school, and their markings for both appearance and conduct mean money to them. Their markings earn their clothing.

"When we look over a little mother and find her hair brushed and neatly braided, a hat on her head, no rips in her clothing, and every button on her shoes, then she gets eight marks. Eight is the highest number she can get in one day. Deductions are made for any defect in cleanliness or tidiness.

"They are taught to count their marks as they would pennies, for we give the marks definite purchasing power. Eight marks will buy a handchief; twenty-four will buy a waist; forty-eight will buy a petticoat; and seventy-eight will buy an entire dress. This system preserves their independence and wonderfully improves their personal appearance and their deportment.

"One of their traits is their wonderful unselfishness. Often when twenty-four or forty-eight marks have been patiently won and entitle the little holder to a new waist or skirt, I have seen her go out in the ragged dress she wore when she came in, but carrying a warm flannel skirt for baby, or shoes and stockings for the little sister at home.

"While we are giving them summer outings this spirit is manifested nearly every day. 'Oh, yes'm,' said one of the little girls as we were starting on a day's trip last summer, 'we're poor, but I know somebody poorer.' And she darted off and returned presently with a forlorn little thing whom she tucked in her place in the line.

"Another time when we were leaving a little girl ran after us and said: 'Oh, I've got this afternoon off and it will be my last chance to go. Can't you take me?'

"We can only take a certain number, but I said: 'Is any one willing to give up her place to Millie?' And there, with our lunch baskets all packed and the sun shining, seven stepped instantly out of the line!"

The two hours between school and dinner time are busy ones at the home. Down in the basement a tableful are happy over the cooking lesson. They are taught to make simple, wholesome dishes, whose preparation by the children at home has revolutionized many an East Side dinner table. They are also taught to put together garments which shall bear more than a semblance of fitting.

Against the drunken and shiftless among the fathers and mothers the association does it best to protect its little mother members. Often late at night the doors are opened to admit a tired little girl, who comes demanding admittance, and to the question with which she is met there is always one answer;

"Father and mother are both drunk. They turned me out."

There are on the third floor of the big house thirteen tidy white rooms, always ready with fresh linen for those who come up out of the dark streets from the darker homes they have been forced to leave.

They are harbored until morning. Before breakfast they creep back to their homes for the small charges, to whose care they are absolutely loyal. After breakfast, they spend the day in the usual inspection and school and afternoon classes, and then they go quietly home as if the night before had not happened. But often they return for shelter, with the news that "they ain't over it yet."

EFFECTING A SETTLEMENT.

BY FRANK S. CHISWICK.

[Published under special arrangement with the S. S. McClure Co., New York.]

WHEN Orrin Payton left the law school, he decided that he would confine himself to criminal cases as offering better pay and greater credit than the usual work which falls to the lot of the beginner. An ample fortune enabled him to decline cases which less fortunate young lawyers might have been glad to take up.

He had already figured in one or two trials of considerable importance, but his practice was not large, and his principal occupation consisted in wondering about the pretty girl in the office across the court. By a judicious expenditure of tips among the elevator boys, who, in turn, questioned the letter carrier, he finally discovered that her name was Maude Kingdon, and that she was a stenographer for Massey & Keller, architects.

This information, while of interest, did not materially aid him in forming her acquaintance. He could think of no excuse for intruding on the architects, and Miss Kingdon was not the sort of girl one could get acquainted with in the elevator. Both dress and manner indicated an amount of refinement and acquaintance with social customs that necessitated a formal introduction.

Payton moved in good society, but he had acquired an intense dislike for the girls with whom he came in contact and whose god was Mammon, not Cupid. The little typewriter across the light shaft was of far greater interest to him, and her apparent inaccessibility made him the more eager to form her acquaintance. Once he met Massey in company with a business friend and exultingly told himself that this would at least afford him an entrance to the office. But even this hope was dashed to the ground when, in saying good-by, Massey expressed a desire to meet him on returning from a business trip that would occupy several months.

He had about given up all hope when one afternoon the young clerk who formed his entire office staff broke in on his solitude.

"There's a lady outside," he said, handing Payton a card, "who wants to see you about taking up a claim against the street-car company."

"Tell her," said his employer, "that we don't take up damage suits." And then as the clerk turned to go he accidentally turned over the bit of pasteboard between his fingers and with a gasp caught his retreating assistant by the coat tails. "Tell Miss Kingdon to come in," he commanded. "The case may be worth looking into." A moment later Maude Kingdon was seated by his desk.

"They told me, Mr. Payton," she said quietly, "that you take up only criminal cases, but I work for Massey & Keller on the same floor, and I thought you might be—er—neighborly enough to consider my case."

Payton bit his lips. Her eyes had said so plainly, "And you don't seem to be very busy."

"Quite right of you to come over. I'll be very glad to look into the matter. I did start out with a sort of definite policy, and I can afford to wait for something good——"

Something in his tone offended the girl and she rose.

"In that case I beg your pardon for my intrusion," she said icily. "Probably my suit would not appeal to you."

"Quite the contrary!" he cried, alarmed. "I am sure—er—that is to say, I assure you I wasn't referring to your case."

Half appeased, the girl sat down again.

"It is a comparatively simple matter. While my mother was alighting from a car last night the conductor signaled the motorman to go ahead, and she was thrown heavily to the street. She fractured two ribs and was severely bruised. I should like to make the street-car company pay the expense of her illness, for, to be frank, we can hardly afford to let the matter pass."

Payton jumped up excitedly. "They ought to be made to pay punitive damages. We'll sue them for $25,000."

Miss Kingdon did not share his enthusiasm. "I should prefer," she said quietly, "to compromise the matter without resorting to the courts."

It was finally agreed that Payton should see the claim agent and endeavor to rush the matter through as quickly as possible. This afforded him an excuse for a daily visit to Miss Kingdon, and the more he saw of her the more he was satisfied that she was the one woman who could make him happy. The claim progressed slowly, as claims always do, but finally he secured from the company an offer of $650, the maximum payment in cases settled out of court.

"This is outrageous," said the girl, when he communicated the decision. "They know we need the money, and that we will have to take this rather than wait several years until the case has been finally settled on appeal."

Something like a sob ended the sentence, and then she smiled bravely.

"You must not think me mercenary, Mr. Payton, but my salary is all we have, and mother has never been strong, and the hospital bills must be paid."

The office was empty, and Payton's sympathetic brown eyes looked straight into her own. She could stand anything just then save sympathy. Two great round tears rolled down her cheeks.

Payton suppressed a wild inclination to kiss away the tears, and took her hand gently in his.

"Believe me, Miss Kingdon, I have done my best. The greatest lawyer in New York could do no more. Six hundred and fifty is little enough to win from a corporation; but, whether you have guessed it or not, you have won something more—the heart of your attorney. If you'll marry me, you—you won't have to worry about the street-car company."

She looked at him with brimming eyes. "You are very good, Mr. Payton," she said simply, "but I could never permit you to make such a sacrifice. You have done as much for us as any man could do. Don't think that because you failed to get more you must offer yourself in marriage."

Payton was nonplussed for a moment. "Sacrifice," he echoed, "If you argue along those lines, you'll be accusing me in a moment of marrying you for your money. Can't you realize that I've been interested in you more than a year, and that I've loved you ever since you came into my office?"

The looked up, a smile breaking through the tears. "In that case"—she said softly.

"In that case," he retorted jubilantly, "I think I'll take my fee."

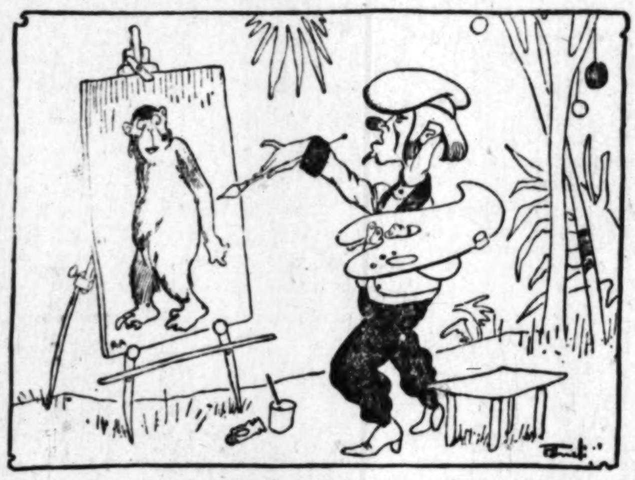
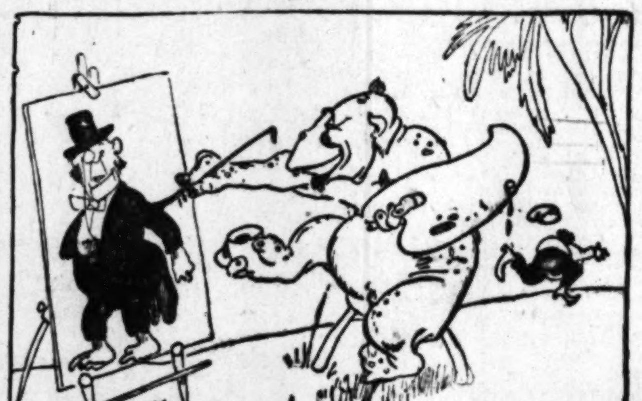
AN IMPROVEMENT ON NATURE.



"How wonderful are the works of Nature!"



"You bet! Ah there, Chelly!"

"I'm Simply all Worn Out."

Overworked Women.

Fatigue is the natural result of hard work, but exhaustion results from weakness.

Hard work for a weak woman is traffic in flesh and blood.

It makes little difference what the field of work is, whether at home or elsewhere, if there is weakness, work brings exhaustion.

Ability to stand the strain of hard work is the privilege of the healthy and robust.

How our hearts ache for the sickly women that work for daily bread at some ill-paid factory employment!

How distressing also to see a woman struggling with her daily round of household duties, when her back and head are aching, and every new movement brings out a new pain!

If the mere looking on at these suffering women touches our hearts, how hopeless must life be to the women themselves!

Their devotion to duty is a heroism which a well person cannot understand.

Can these ailing, weak women, who are called upon to do work which would tire a strong man, be made to see that they can easily and surely better their condition!

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, convince them of the virtues of this medicine!

How shall the FACT that it WILL HELP THEM be made plain!

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me"!

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Read the letters from women in the opposite column of this paper, and when you go to your drug store to buy this sterling medicine, do not let yourself be persuaded to accept the druggist's own valueless preparation because it is a few cents cheaper than Sultan's Dressing Table.

The wonders of the "Arabian Nights" live again in three large halls which compose the great treasury of the Sultan of Turkey. Priceless jewels gleam on every side, rare and costly curios, coins from all lands, and furniture studded with precious stones.

It is very rarely that any but royal eyes are permitted to look upon this magnificence. At the entrance of the first hall stands a throne, which was captured from the Persians; it is nearly covered with pearls and precious stones. An enormous emerald adorns the center of another jewel-studded throne. A dressing table studded all over with pearls is among the furniture.

In this room is also a marvelous collection of gold and silver cups, plates and dishes, jewelled daggers and knives, suits of armor, and cases containing hundreds of necklaces, brooches and rings. In the midst of all this splendor, ancient and modern, are very up-to-date dressing bags, cameras, telescopes, and even a case of razors, all with fine silver mountings, but in our own warm homes in city, a full appreciation of and distress of a terrific the coasts cannot be had, splendid work of the Amer- coast guard. The ef- winter's storm were shown here recently, yet the terrors of the elements along the coasts are increased a hundredfold, and during all that period of gales, snowstorms, hail and rain, the hardy life guards were patrolling day and night practically the entire coast line of the United States from Maine to Texas.

A HUMAN CORDON OF POLICE.

"No storm is too fierce, no weather too bad, no cold too intense, and no opposing forces of nature too severe, that this human cordon of protection to mariners is not stretched along our coasts. A braver body of men cannot be found in the entire world, while their faithfulness to duty, their skill at their hazardous calling, and their utter and unselfish disregard of their own safety when engaged in the work of rescue ought to make, and I believe it does, the heart of every American glow with pride that these heroes so nobly typify the dash and courage of our own race.

"In the big gale of November last the admirable service of the life-saving crews was exemplified in many instances, but one instance, the wreck of the German ship Flotbek, should not be lost sight of, as the wonderful efficiency of the men and apparatus in use was well illustrated. We save lives from wrecks nowadays by lights, that is, but for the use of our powerful Wells light many a sailor would go to the bottom in the wrecks at night.

"The Flotbek went ashore at Monmouth Beach, N. J., during the night in a heavy gale. Our crew cast the rays of the light through the inky darkness of the night upon her, and shot a life line, the line attached to the shot being about as thick as a pencil, over her decks. This small line is attached to a cable, and upon being hauled aboard the breeches buoy brought ashore the entire crew of twenty-four men without injury. The difficulty heretofore in these awful wrecks at night has been to have the crew on the ship find the line when shot to them. The Wells light has solved the problem. The crews along the North Carolina coasts in the January gale of this year rescued thirteen men from an Italian bark, and seventeen men from a Norwegian steamer, both wrecks occurring at night in heavy storms, and the men covered themselves with honor in making the rescue in the surfboats in heavy seas, without the loss of a single man.

INCIDENTS AMUSING AND PATHETIC.

"Passing from these greater efforts of life-saving crews to minor incidents of interest, the occasions our men are called to take part in are decidedly diversified. Thus, at the Sabin (Tex.) station, they were summoned to assist in putting out a fire at a hotel, and while thus engaged their own station caught fire, and was burned to the ground. During the Galveston flood our men rendered valiant service, though their station was swept away, and two of the men in a boat landed high and dry nine miles inland. A signal and noteworthy recent act of individual bravery was where Keeper Griesser at Buffalo swam out into the lake to rescue a drowning man from a wrecked scow, throwing him a line to fasten around his body, and hauling him safely to shore in a heavy sea. Keeper Griesser was given a gold medal.

"Individual acts of conspicuous bravery might be instanced without number, as where a surfman dived beneath a tugboat and effected a rescue. During the past year our men have saved from drowning from wrecked vessels on shore fifteen persons by plunging into the surf. Seventeen more unfortunates who had fallen off piers, landings, etc., were hauled out in safety. Thirteen bathers who would have been drowned but for our men's assistance were rescued. Men and boys are often caught out by the incoming tide on flat rocks, cribs and other points, but cut off from the mainland, and last year we saved a dozen who might otherwise have suffered a most horrible death. Again, men, such as clam diggers and hunters, are often mired in mud flats, and are unable to extricate themselves from what would be certain death without assistance. Our men rescued recently two persons in this unpleasant plight. A surfman along the lakes one snowy night while on patrol stumbled over an object on the beach hidden by snow. It was the body of an old man who had fallen unconscious and been overcome by the cold. He was carried to the station and saved. An aeronaut whose parachute had fallen into the sea, was saved by a near-by life crew.

WHAT THE SERVICE IS DOING.

"In many respects, however, the past year has been a favorable one, as there have only been seventeen lives lost, while the annual average number of lives lost during the past twenty-five years has been thirty-seven. The number of casualties for the year to registered vessels is 377, having on board 2848 persons, of whom seven were lost, and the total value of vessels and cargoes was $7,354,300, and of this amount 6,400,000 was saved. Then there were 393 casualties among smaller crafts, such as sailboats, rowboats, etc., carrying 927 persons, ten of whom were lost. Over 600 shipwrecked persons received succor at the stations and forty-three vessels were totally lost.

"I noticed a dispatch recently in the Star stating that three French and two English vessels were so long overdue at San Francisco the insurance rates were raised. Disasters on the Pacific do not compare with the horrors on the Atlantic and Gulf seaboards and the lake coasts. Only twenty-seven disasters occurred on the Pacific last year, as against 285 on the lakes, 458 on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. But one life was lost on the Pacific Coast within the scope of the life-saving service, as against six on the lakes and ten on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. In the wrecks on the latter coasts the ships had on board 2220; on the lakes 1236 and on the Pacific only 219 persons, while the value of the ships and their cargoes on the Atlantic coasts was $7,500,000, on the lakes $6,560,000, and on the Pacific $1,000,000. These facts are of value and are worthy of preservation.

"Cape Cod and Cape Hatteras are the two great graveyards for ships on the Atlantic, and thousands of brave sailors and hundreds of stanch vessels have perished and gone down, as will others for all time to come go to their final resting places on these deadly shores, while the sandy coast line of New Jersey ranks third as a burying ground for sailors and ships.

"I am sure that the great work accomplished by the life-saving crews is not fully understood. It should be remembered that during the past thirty years there have been 12,633 disasters on our coasts, representing ships and cargoes worth $186,700,000, and on those vessels there were 93,791 souls, of whom 978 were lost. Such a comparatively slight percentage of lives lost when compared with the very heavy total number of persons on board of the wrecked vessels speaks louder than words as to the great and good work of the American live-saving coast guards."

Automatic Street Calls on Cars.

There is a local inventor at work upon a device which, if perfected, should prove of great convenience to surface-car patrons. So far the inventor is merely in the experimental stage, and for obvious reasons does not care to make public the details of his plan. The purpose of the device, however, is to record the name or number of the cross-town streets upon a dial a block before the car reaches the street. The inventor believes that his device is mechanically practicable, and that it is only a question of time before it will be at least on the market, if not on the cars.—[New York Post.

As I Treat Men's Diseases.

Original and Distinctive Methods and Why They Cure.

Fifteen years devoted to the study and treatment of a few ailments have made me master of them.

O. C. JOSLEN, M. D.
Strictly Reliable.

I advertise under my own name and use my own likeness in my advertisements.

There is not another physician or specialist anywhere who treats men's diseases as I treat them. This is a fact that should be duly considered by those who have repeatedly been disappointed in their efforts to obtain a cure. In no other branch of practice has medical science so lagged and the forms of treatment now commonly employed among the profession are largely based upon theories that have been handed down through generations of doctors. An evidence of this is the prevalent inability to successfully cope with several of those ailments peculiar to men, and in a majority of instances to change physicians is to swallow the same remedy from a different spoon.

I early recognized the need of scientific investigation and study as to the real nature of those diseases I now so successfully treat. For fifteen years I have devoted my entire attention to them.

I have learned nature's laws applying to their cause and cure. Through this knowledge I have perfected forms of treatment wholly original and distinctive. Every requirement for a thorough cure is scientifically met, and as a result I am able to completely master cases commonly regarded as incurable. I especially invite those who have been long afflicted to consult me. My success in curing difficult cases has brought my marvelous growth of practice and made me the foremost specialist treating men's diseases.

Such helpful advice as I am able to render in consultation is freely given. Under no circumstances will I urge my services, nor will I offer treatment where a case is hopeless. But if a case is offered and accepted, the patient can feel assured of such treatment as I alone can render.

Varicocele.

Many men afflicted with varicocele are endangering their general health, their manly power, and even life itself by allowing the disorder to remain uncured. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibers that have a part in controlling local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins, being deprived of nervous communication and control, become inactive, weaken and relax. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within, the circulation in the parts becomes sluggish, and frequently stagnant pools form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues. The possibility exists that clots may form in these stagnant pools and then pass out into the general circulation. Should one find lodgment in a valve of the heart the result might be instant death, or should it be carried to the brain, general paralysis would follow.

I guarantee to cure varicocele in one week by a method that involves no cutting, no ligature, no caustic. No other physician employs a like method, and so thorough is my work that there need not be the slightest fear of a relapse into the old condition. Those who have been long afflicted with varicocele will never realize the injury it has caused until they feel the vim, energy and buoyancy of spirits that a complete cure will bring.

Stricture.

My treatment for stricture removes the necessity for surgical operations, even in severe cases of long standing. I do no cutting or dilating. No other physician employs my methods of overcoming this disorder, so the service I offer you is original and distinctive. Do not give up hope because others have failed. I will cure you and the cure will be a prompt and painless one. My treatment dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, subdues all inflammation, relieves all irritation or congestion that may exist in the kidneys or bladder, reduces enlargement of the prostate gland and restores health and tone to all organs affected by the disease.

Piles.

No matter how severe or of how long standing, I will permanently cure every case of piles that comes to me for treatment. Though I have heretofore made little mention of this troublesome affliction, I am constantly curing cases that other physicians have been unable to relieve. My treatment is mild, gentle and certain, and my practice in this disease constantly grows as a result of recommendations from those whom I have cured.

"Weakness."

I have conclusively demonstrated the fact that derangement of the masculine functions is a curable ailment. That there has been considerable diversity of opinion upon this point among the profession, is but an evidence that functional weakness has not been thoroughly understood and has been unscientifically treated. Though commonly regarded as a nervous disorder, it has never yielded when treated upon this theory. I have ascertained by the closest observation in thousands of cases, that only in rare instances is the general constitution or nervous system involved to any noticeable degree whatever, and that "weakness" in all its phases is merely a symptom of nervous disorder. In by far the greater number of cases the functional derangement is due to a single cause, a chronically inflamed condition of the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or lingering as a result of some improperly treated contracted disorder. Such cases may show temporary improvement under stimulating processes of treatment, but ultimate relapse is certain to follow all such methods. The only radical cure is the absolute removal of the abnormal condition responsible for the functional disorder, and this I positively accomplish through carefully-directed local measures. My treatment is entirely distinctive and original. No other physican employs like methods, or approaches my success in curing. The results I obtain are thorough and lasting, and strength and vigor are restored in the full and normal degree.

Specific Blood Poison.

This most hideous of all venereal diseases can no longer be classed as incurable. The idea that the limit of medical aid is to keep the disease dormant by persistently dosing the system with mineral poisons, is as incorrect as many other ancient theories to which many of the profession cling. Such treatment not infrequently results in the virus being driven deeper into the system, where it attacks and destroys even the very bones of the sufferer. I positively drive the very last taint of poison from the system in sixty days. The cure is thorough and permanent, and every symptom of the disease vanishes forever. I employ no dangerous drugs or mineral poisons, but use harmless blood-cleansing remedies heretofore unknown in the treatment of this disease. I regard my success in overcoming this frightful leprosy as the crowning triumph of my professional career.

Contracted Disorders.

To but partially cure a contracted disease is almost as dangerous as to allow it to go untreated. Unless every particle of infection and inflammation is removed, the probability exists that the disease will gradually work its way into the general system. Still greater is the danger of the prostate gland becoming chronically inflamed, which always brings partial or complete loss of sexual power. Perhaps twenty-five per cent. of the cases of so-called "weakness" are a direct result of some improperly treated contracted disease. During the past five years I have treated over 6500 cases of contracted disorders and have effected an absolutely thorough and safe cure in each instance. There have been no relapses or undesirable developments whatever, and my patients have been cured in less time than other and less thorough forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results.

Reflex Ailments.

Often the condition appearing to be the chief disorder is only a reflex ailment resulting from some other disease. Weakness sometimes comes from varicocele or stricture; skin and bone diseases result from blood poison taint, and physical and mental decline follow long-standing functional disorder. My long experience in treating men enables me to determine the exact conditions that exist and to treat accordingly, thus removing every damaging cause and its effects.

My diplomas from the most celebrated medical colleges and hospitals in the world, together with my license from the State of California, are hanging in my office where my patients may see and examine them.

Every patient who comes to me for treatment receives my personal attention. Though all my assistants are graduates of the best medical colleges, they act only under my supervision and assist me in minor work.

All necessary X-Ray examinations are absolutely free to patients. My equipment for X-Ray work is the finest and most complete ever produced, and equally perfect results are not possible with an inferior apparatus.

All remedies are prepared from standardized drugs in my own private laboratory and are supplied to patients free of cost.

Inability to come to my office for consultation and treatment need not deprive you of my services. My knowledge of men's diseases enables me to treat most cases with absolute success at a distance. Write describing your symptoms in full, and I will advise you free of charge, and tell you whether I can cure you without your calling in person.

My office and hospital occupy the entire building of twenty-two rooms over the Wells-Fargo Express Office, and are thoroughly equipped with everything modern and scientific for the cure of men's diseases.

My colored chart should be in the possession of every man. It is interesting and instructive as a study, and is helpful in making a home diagnosis. Sent free upon request. Consultation and advice free at office or by mail.

CANDY CATHARTIC ..... CASCARETS taste good. Eat them like candy. They remove any bad taste in the mouth, leaving the breath sweet and perfumed. It is a real pleasure to take them instead of nauseating liquids or cannon-ball pills.

PURELY VEGETABLE ..... CASCARETS are purely vegetable and contain no mercurial or other mineral poison. They are made of the latest remedies discovered and are a scientific combination never before put together in any form.

ANTISEPTIC LAXATIVE ..... CASCARETS are antiseptic. That means they stop undigested food from souring in the stomach, prevent fermentation in the bowels and kill disease germs of any kind that breed and feed in the system.

LIVER STIMULANT ..... CASCARETS tone the stomach and bowels and stimulate the lazy liver, making it work. They strengthen the bowels and put them into vigorous healthy condition, making their action easy and natural.

BOON FOR MOTHERS ..... CASCARETS increase the flow of milk in nursing mothers. A tablet eaten by the mother makes her milk mildly purgative and has a mild but certain effect on the baby, the only safe laxative for the babe-in-arms.

PLEASE THE CHILDREN ..... CASCARETS are liked by the children. They taste good and do good, stop wind-colic and cramps, and kill and drive off worms and all kinds of parasites that live in the bowels of the growing child.

CURE GUARANTEED ..... CASCARETS taken patiently, persistently, are guaranteed to cure any case of constipation, no matter how old and obstinate, or purchase money will be cheerfully refunded by your own druggist.

HEALTH FOR 10 CENTS ..... CASCARETS are sold by all druggists for 10c, 25c, 50c a box, according to size. A 10c box will prove their merit and put you on the right road to perfect and permanent health. Don't risk delay.

Don't judge CASCARETS by other medicines you have tried. They are new, unlike anything else that's sold, and infinitely superior. Try a ten-cent box today, if not pleased get your money back! Larger boxes, 25c or 50c. Sample and booklet mailed free. Address

Sore Throat and Bronchial Troubles

A sore throat is the beginning of a dangerous ailment—it is the beginning of an ailment that will end in death unless it is checked in the beginning, and there is only one medicine that will check a sore throat, only one medicine that you can take to get immediate relief and prevent a serious illness, and that is Dr. Halpruner's Wonderful Medicine, a medicine that is prescribed and compounded to cure sore throat, and cure it at once; a medicine that will cure it, because it is made right, made to act on the afflicted parts. It will drive out the pain and allay the inflammation.

Inflammation is the cause of nearly all our troubles, and Halpruner's drives out inflammation like water puts out fire.

If you have a sore throat send to your druggist and get a bottle of Halpruner's Wonderful Medicine and rub it into the throat and chest well—rub it until the throat burns, until you know the medicine has penetrated deeply, and then take a couple of teaspoonfuls in a glass of milk or water every two or three hours, and it will be only a short matter of time until your sore throat will disappear entirely.

In bronchial troubles more continuous treatments are required, but it will eventually give you the cure you seek.

All druggists sell Halpruner's Wonderful Pain Remover—50c and $1 a bottle—the $1 size contains three times the quantity of the small size. But demand the genuine

CHARTER DAY AT BERKELEY.

Alumni to Raise Half a Million Dollars.

Wheeler Starts Fund With Five Thousand.

Wild Man in Captivity—A Big Mining Deal—Girl Stricken Dumb.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BERKELEY, March 22.—The University of California will be greatly enriched, financially, as a result of one of the largest alumni meetings in the history of the institution, which was held this afternoon in the students' observatory. President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, who appeared before the graduates, did not make a formal address, but requested that the alumni ask questions of him.

The following questions, which embodied the sense of the entire meeting, was: "How best can the alumni body help you in the administration of the university?"

President Wheeler replied that they could best aid their Alma Mater by lending their moral support, and refraining from adverse criticism.

The newly-appointed regent, Charles S. Wheeler, signified his intention of giving a proportionate share of $500,000 for the construction of a new alumni hall. He further explained that he would endeavor to interest ninety-nine other graduates in the erection of the proposed building, making the pro rata for each $5000.

Regent Wheeler, who addressed the graduates, said, in part: "I am tired of a sentiment that would place the university on its knees at Sacramento; go not on your knees, but with the consciousness that what you demand is right. We owe a great debt to the community, and I know of no way of paying back other than by giving freely to the university."

Letters of regret were read from Gov. Gage and Dr. George C. Pardee, who were unable to be present.

CHARTER-DAY EXERCISES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERKELEY, March 22.—With full academic pomp, the thirty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the University of California was celebrated with Charter-Day exercises this morning and afternoon. Never had a larger assemblage gathered on the State University grounds to observe the natal day of the institution, and never had more elaborate exercises been arranged for the occasion.

In Harmon gymnasium, where the general exercises were held, a concert by a string orchestra was held, commencing at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. At about that hour the students of the university assembled on the walk between North and South halls, that they might form in a procession to the gymnasium. At the head of the column, in which there were many hundreds of collegians, were the graduates. Then came the students of the professional colleges, seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen.

The regents of the university, members of faculties, officers of the alumni ...s and many distinguished guests of the university assembled at the acon Art Gallery and library building.

The procession of scholars made an imposing appearance as they marched solemnly, clothed in cap and gown, toward the hall. Upon a large stage in the vast auditorium the regents, professors and guests took their places, while the students and citizens to the number of nearly four thousand completely filled the hall. The gymnasium had been prettily and lavishly decorated under the directions of the members of the art department.

A striking feature of the programme was the rendering of songs by young ladies of the university, all attired in cap and gown. President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, who presided, introduced Bliss Perry, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, as the speaker of the day. The noted litterateur was greeted by the slogans of the male students.

Dr. Perry, whose oration was a masterpiece, discussed the expression of American feeling in literature, with particular reference to the period since the Spanish war. He considered some of the general questions that enter into the problem of an adequate expression of national character by means of literature, and more specifically by means of poetry.

FRESHMEN HELD THE FORT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERKELEY, March 22.—Although the sentiment of the University of California authorities is stronger at the present time than it ever has been against "rushing" among the members of the student body, one of the liveliest conflicts that has ever taken place on the campus occurred at an early hour this morning.

Following out the custom of the night preceding Charter Day, members of the freshmen class assembled on the hill back of the college buildings and put up their class number. Assembled at the bottom of the hill were the sophomores. They waited until 4 o'clock this morning before they made an attack upon the freshmen, and attempted to remove the number. The freshmen proved to be superior in numbers, and succeeded in tying their adversaries with ropes.

In view of the faculty rule against hazing there seems to no doubt but that the affair will result in the wholesale expulsion of collegians who are known to have participated in the melee. Prof. Kendrick Babcock and Jo...ph Eshelman, president of the associated students, were on hand to take the names of the offenders against the faculty edict.

Several of the students were painfully injured during the rough sport, one receiving a dislocated shoulder, and another a contusion of the head.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—The discovery made today that of the twelve jurymen who last night adjudged Ed...ard Duncan guilty of murdering ...eorge W. Rice, a non-union machinist, in Judge Lawler's department of the Superior Court, one had impersonated his son all through the trial, and answered to the calling of the latter's name, caused a memorable stir at the Hall of Justice, and will go into history as one of the strangest complications that ever arose in a court of record.

The fact was laid bare today that ...ernard Sherry, senior member of the well-known dairy produce firm of Sherry & Co., had appeared in court as a substitute for his son, John H.

was laid bare today that Sherry, senior member of the & Co., dairy produce firm of had appeared in court as substitute for his son, John H. Sherry whose name appeared on the jury panel, and who was believed to be serving until the affair was exploded today.

Judge Lawler would not pass upon the matter today, but the intimation is given that the court will incline to the theory that the verdict rendered last night will stand.

H. W. Hutton, a police commissioner, acted as one of Duncan's counsel, and today admitted that he know of the substitution on the jury.

The District Attorney makes the point that had Duncan been declared not guilty the State could not have instituted a new trial upon the showing that Bernard Sherry served instead of John H. Sherry, and that the rule must apply the other way now that the defense has sprung the joker.

It is said an effort will be made by the District Attorney to show, when the defense makes its formal motion to set aside the verdict, that Hutton in failing to apprise the court of the irregularity committed an act of contempt.

BRAVE WOMAN PROSPECTOR.

REPORT OF DEATH UNFOUNDED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]
TACOMA (Wash.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Emma Scott, sister of the wife of Atty.-Gen. John Sheets of Ohio, proves to be living, though her friends have mourned her as dead since November. In that month word was received that she had succumbed to starvation and exposure at Nome in September. The information was to the effect that while on a prospecting expedition she became stranded with one other person, 150 miles from Point Blossom, and that her condition was desperate.. Provisions sent her were not received, and her death was reported to have followed.

Miss Scott originally came from Ohio, and had lived in Tacoma fourteen years. For two years she taught school. She went north in May two years ago as book-keeper for H. O. Blankenship. After a year spent in Nome, she started on a prospecting tour. Under her power of attorney, Blankenship located claims in her name, and later disposed of her share in four claims for $40,000. This she will receive in cash.

News that Miss Scott is alive and well was received today in a letter from her written at Candle City, December 7.

ENORMOUS POCKET OF ALMOST PURE GOLD.

REMARKABLE STRIKE IN JUMPER MINE REPORTED.

Rumor Says That a Million Dollars Has Been Taken Out or is in Sight, but Great Secrecy is Maintained at the Mine.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]
STOCKTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A report has reached this city of a big strike said to have been made on the mother lode. It was in the famous Jumper mine that a pocket of almost pure gold was uncovered Friday, and while every effort has been made to keep the matter quiet, it leaked out and is now the talk of the mining district. It is claimed that almost $1,000,000 has been taken out, or is in sight.

The Jumper has always been a peculiar mine, and one that has defied all laws of mining. There is a vein of free milling ore, which the men work on all of the time, but every few months a large pocket is uncovered. Two or three of these large caches of gold have been taken out before, but the one just found exceeds anything of the kind ever reported.

The men were working on the vein when a big pocket was opened. The deeper the men dug into it the richer it appeared, and most of it was almost solid gold. The Jumper is owned by an English and Scotch syndicate, and it has always been a big-paying proposition.

STRIKE AT CONGRESS.

MINERS PARADE STREETS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]
PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 22.—On account of a demonstration yesterday by the striking miners at Congress, Constable Peter Bozcha of that place found it necessary to swear in a number of deputies.

The company has been able to keep a small force of men at work in the mine, and also to keep the mill in operation in spite of the strike. Yesterday the strikers and their wives formed a procession and paraded the streets, led by an Italian band, for the apparent purpose of intimidating those at work. No violence was offered, and the strikers claim it is not their intention to offer any. The force of men in the mine is being gradually increased.

STRICKEN DUMB.

CASE PUZZLES PHYSICIANS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]
PORTLAND (Or.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most remarkable cases in the Northwest, and one that is attracting the attention of physicians is that of Miss Edna Levy of Union, Union county, Or., who became dumb while attending a wedding last Monday night. The wedding occurred at La Grande, and since that time Miss Levy has been unable to speak either audibly or in a whisper. This was noticed on her return home, and although physicians were called in, they were unable to do anything to assist her in regaining speech, nor have the doctors been able so far to diagnose the strange case.

It is hoped that in the near future she will regain her voice.

DAN BURNS'S DAUGHTER.

MARRIES CHARLES DUNPHY.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]
SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—At noon today Miss Rowena Burns, only daughter of Col. Dan Burns, became the wife of Charles Dunphy. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride by the Rev. George C. Adams of the First Congregational Church. Only about forty relatives and friends were invited to the wedding.

Miss Burns's wedding gown was of white panne satin, trimmed with lace and chiffon.

Seldom has a bride had such gifts showered upon her as has Miss Burns. From her father she received a collar of pearls with diamond clasps, besides other gems of remarkable size and brilliancy. The Dunphy family gave a massive oak chest, handsomely carved and filled with large silver pieces, platters, trays, a huge silver and cut glass vase, besides smaller pieces, spoons, knives and forks, etc. Among the other presents are silver cups, dishes, vases, cutglass pieces of unusual design, pictures and jewels.

After the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served, and about 2 o'clock the newly-wedded couple departed on their honeymoon. About six months will be spent traveling in Europe, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dunphy will make their home in San Francisco and San Mateo.

INJUNCTION REFUSED.

HAVE RIGHT TO DAMAGES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]
REDDING, March 22.—The granting of an injunction against the Mountain Copper Company restraining it from proceeding with the present method of treatment of ore at its Keswick smelter was denied today in the Superior Court by Judge Sweeney. Peter Stolberg, Frederick Mauer and L. Mauer brought suit against the corporation.

Judge Sweeney held that while the plaintiffs were damaged by sulphurous acid gas, in that it discolored the shells of the almond nuts in their orchards, and that while they will undoubtedly continue to be so damaged, the injury can readily be compensated in money, whereas a suspension of operations by the Mountain Copper Company would take away the cause of life of the town of Keswick, seriously crippling the mining industry in general in the county.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD.

MAKE A LARGE CATCH.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]
SAN JOSE, March 22.—Three hundred and twenty-five candidates were initiated by the Woodmen of the World here tonight, the ceremonies beng participated in by over a thousand members of the order from this county, San Francisco, Oakland and other bay points. A mammoth street parade was held, followed by the initiation ceremonies, drills, a programme, reception and banquet at Rose Carnival Pavilion.

Lemuel Chipman of San Francisco and State Organizer Temple were the speakers of the evening. Several thousand people attended.

LOS ANGELES CASE.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]
SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—The State law which provides that a contract between owners and contractors is void unless the price be in terms of money only was adjudged invalid by the Supreme Court today. The court's decision is far reaching in its effect, as it makes the contract price the limit on all mechanics' liens.

The decision was rendered in the case of F. W. Braun et al., owners of the Vickery Block in Los Angeles.

GRIBBLE CASE.

PROSECUTION RESTS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]
STOCKTON, March 22.—The prosecution rested in the Gribble murder case this morning, after showing that the story told by the witness Frank Allman, to the effect that May Wilson had offered to testify for the defense for $50, was a fabrication.

Counsel for both sides stipulated that no one connected with the case in any way had had anything whatever to do with the bribery matter, or was in any way blamable.

After a short opening statement, the defense put on a witness in an attempt to prove that the dead woman, Lena Young, had died as a result of acute alcoholic poisoning, that being the theory of the defense.

HIS FOURTH ESCAPE.

HOMICIDAL LUNATIC.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]
OAKLAND, March 22.—Chief of Police Hodgkins has received word from the Napa Insane Asylum to the effect that Frank H. Cheeseman escaped from that institution for the fourth time last night.

Cheeseman shot and killed Henry Brook in Oakland in 1898. Brook had gone to the assistance of his step-daughter, Ella Payne, at whom Cheeseman was shooting. The girl was shot twice, but recovered. Jealousy was the cause of the shooting. It was decided that Cheeseman was insane, and he was sent to Napa. Once when he escaped, he got as far as Montana before he was arrested.

BRIEF COAST DISPATCHES.

Change in Bank.

SAN JOSE, March 22.—The Security Savings Bank of San José has been merged into the Security State Bank, which filed articles of incorporation today. The new concern has a paid-up capital of $100,000, and will do a commercial and savings business. The directors are Henry Curtner of Warm Springs; W. S. Richards, Henry Booksin, H. C. Darby, S. Kirk, T. Kirk, A. H. Marten, E. T. Sterling, Frank Stock and C. M. Wooster of San José.

Dodge's Wounds Prove Fatal.

SACRAMENTO, March 22.—Van C. Dodge died this morning at the County Hospital from the effects of pistol-shot wounds received while he was engaged in a duel with Robert W. Woods on the Sacramento River bridge last Monday.

San Benito Improvement Club.

SAN JOSE, March 22.—H. D. Matthews and Paul Shoup of the Santa Clara Valley Improvement Club went to Hollister last night and organized the San Benito County Improvement Club, with a membership of 200. This club will coöperate with other clubs of like nature for the development of Central California.

Jane Thomson Insolvent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Jane Thompson of Wrights, Santa Clara county, filed her petition in insolvency today. She owes debts to the amount of $43,867. She has no assets. Mrs. Thompson lost heavily when the Union Savings Bank of San José failed a year ago.

Do Not Buy Drugs at a Soda Fountain

"The Owl" is a drug store first, last and all the time. We do not handle soda or cigars. Every salesman is an experienced druggist.

The soda water bar with a little drug stock attachment is not a good place to secure drugs, medicines and prescriptions. When you want good pure soda water go to a confectioner's. When you want medicines for loved ones at home, don't patronize soda water bars, as life and health are at stake.

GERMANY.

NAMED FOR MISS ALICE.

Handsome Yacht Owned by Kaiser.

Serious Sickness of Prince Henry's Son.

Germany is Again Engaged in Playing a Strong Game in China.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BERLIN, March 22.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The yacht which Emperor William has named Alice Roosevelt is beautifully decorated in the modern impressionistic style which His Majesty disapproved of in his recent art utterances. Nevertheless the Emperor was greatly pleased with the decorations, when he saw the yacht at Kiel this week. The artists were selected by Admiral Von Thomsen. The walls are done in serpentine effects, the woodwork is silver grain and the upholstery of strange, vivid tints.

The yacht was built for a torpedo boat, and why she was transformed into a yacht is not explained, but it is supposed this was on account of her rather too delicate framework, considering the British government's recent experience with torpedo-boat destroyers. The Alice Roosevelt, which is still at Kiel, will be transferred to Wilhelmshaven for the use of Admiral Von Thomsen, as commander of the North Sea squadron.

WALDEMAR'S SICKNESS.

Prince Henry, with the first squadron, will visit Spanish waters in May, when the young King of Spain is enthroned.

Prince Henry's son, Waldemar, appears to be more seriously ill than was supposed last week, when he went to the White Stage Sanitarium at Dresden. He has difficulty in walking, is carried about a good deal, and also rides in a pony cart.

Waldemar celebrated his thirteenth birthday on Thursday. His present included some of the things Prince Henry brought from the United States for him.

STRONG GAME IN CHINA.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Germany is once more playing a strong game in China, cables the Berlin correspondent of the Herald. According to private dispatches received by the owners of mining and railroad concessions here, large squads of laboring men have been ordered to the Shan Tung Valley, whither special freighters of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg-American lines are en route, with railroad material to complete the main portion of the Shan Tung Railroad, which connects the port of Tsin Tau with a rich coal and mining district in Weihsin, and which must be completed by June 1 of this year, according to the conditions imposed by the Chinese government.

No secret is made of the fact that special syndicates are being formed to obtain possession of the Weihsin mines, while railway lines are projected, not alone to all corners of the rich Shan Tung province, but likewise to Kng Su and Chi Li, lying beyond the borders of the German sphere of influence.

TO ARREST ANGLOPHOBIA.

BRITONS MAKING EFFORTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] British interests, presumably with official connections, have begun a systematic campaign to arrest the progress of Anglophobia in Central Europe. Next week 20,000 copies of Conan Doyle's history of the South African war, translated into German, will be distributed free to Cabinet officers, members of Parliament, pastors, authors, editors and university faculties in Germany and Austria.

The fund for publication has been contributed by Englishmen, who think Doyle's recital of the causes and conduct of the war will conciliate inflamed continental feeling.

Gute Studenden, a widely-read popular German quarterly, has been offered 5000 marks to substantiate a recent illustration, depicting British soldiers firing behind ramparts of Boer women and children.

AMERICAN ARTISTS.

Their Paintings at the International Exhibition in Vienna are Highly Praised by the Critics.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VIENNA, March 22.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Emperor Francis Joseph today opened the International Fine Arts Exhibition in the Kuenstler Haas. Prominent among the exhibitors is the Paris Society of American painters, including the works of Hitchcock, Stewart, Weeks, Bridgeman, McEwen and Humphreys. The Vienna critics highly compliment the American exhibit, and especially refer to the work of Messrs. Hitchcock and Stewart.

During the course of his visit, the Emperor praised the American works, and asked to see Mr. Hitchcock, who arranged the American exhibit, and expressed regret on hearing that the artist had gone to Paris.

BIG BOOM CARRIED AWAY.

BANGOR (Me.) March 22.—Some time last night a boom at Nowas Island, near Lincoln, containing 5,000,000 feet of logs owned by the Katahdin Pulp and Paper Company of Lincoln and the Jordan Lumber company of Old Town, was carried away by the ice from the Mattawamkeag and the west branch, and the logs have begun to run past Bangor to the sea. The logs are worth about $75,000.

Having a Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Between the hours of eleven o'clock a.m. and closing time at night on Jan. 25th, 1901, A. F. Clark, druggist, Glade Springs, Va., sold twelve bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says, "I never handled a medicine that sold better or gave better satisfaction to my customers." This Remedy has been in general use in Virginia for many years, and the people there are well acquainted with its excellent qualities. Many of them have testified to the remarkable cures which it has effected. When you need a good, reliable medicine for a cough or cold or attack of the grip, use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and you are certain to be more than pleased with the quick cure which it affords.—[Adv.

"Hello, Leonard," shouted the President, as he jumped up and rushed toward his friend.

"How are you, Theodore?" exclaimed the Cuban Governor.

"You are looking first-rate," said the President, after backing off to make an inspection.

"Never felt more fit in my life, and you seem in fine condition."

"Oh, I'm in my best form," said the President.

"I see you are busy now, Mr. President. I will go over to the War Department and pay my respects to the Secretary of War and Adjutant-General. This afternoon I will return for you, and we will have a great walk. We will walk thirty miles."

"No, sir," returned the President promptly. "We will not walk thirty miles. When you return, we will walk forty-two miles, exactly forty-two miles. Mind you, not an inch less."

Early in the afternoon Roosevelt and Wood started to walk. They had not returned at dark.

INSIDE TRACK.

FOR CALIFORNIA DRIED FRUIT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative Kahn today received the following letter from A. C. Tonner, acting commissioner of Indian affairs:

"In reply to your letter quoting from a communication of the Manufacturers' and Producers' Association, regarding the position of the office in the matter of purchasing dried fruit and beans for the Indian service, at the next annual letting, you are advised that the matter has been disposed of by arranging to purchase dried fruit during the month of September, but that beans have been left in the schedule, and will be purchased as heretofore. There does not seem to be the same reason for delay in purchasing this item as there is in the matter of fruit."

This means that hereafter California fruit producers will have the inside track in selling dried fruit to the government, as no other State can compete with California for fruit for September delivery.

FIFTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

REGULAR SESSION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—HOUSE—The House today entered on the consideration of the contested election case of Moss vs. Rhea from the Third Kentucky District. In this case the Committee on Elections divided on party lines, the majority supporting the view that Mr. Moss had been elected, and the minority that Mr. Rhea, the Democrat, was entitled to retain his seat. In the face of the returns Mr. Rhea had 156 plurality. According to the contention of the majority certain votes rejected under the Goebel election law would transform this plurality for Rhea into a plurality for Moss of 71. An agreement was made whereby the vote shall be taken next Tuesday. Before taking up this case the unanimous report of the committee in the case of Spears vs. Burnett from the Seventh Alabama District, confirming the title of the sitting member to his seat, was adopted.

When the House met today a joint resolution was adopted to allow a monument to be erected on the public grounds at Charlotte, N. C., to the memory of Lieut. William E. Shipp of the Tenth Cavalry, who was killed in the charge up San Juan Hill.

Among other bills passed was one to authorize the Secretary of War to lend tents for the use of the Knights of Pythias encampment to be held in San Francisco.

CHINESE EXCLUSION BILL IN DANGER.

OPPOSITION IN THE HOUSE AS WELL AS IN SENATE.

Speaker Henderson and Secretary of the Treasury Shaw Forninst the Measure in Its Present Form—Philippines Features Objectionable.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The danger that threatens the Chinese Exclusion Bill in the Senate is well understood, but it was not known till today that similar danger threatens the bill in the House. The first part of next week the Foreign Relations Committee will report the completed bill to the House.

On Monday next final revision of the bill will be made by the committee, and at that time all members of the California delegation have been invited to be present. In extending this invitation the Foreign Affairs Committee was unkind enough to stipulate that no member of the California commission shall be invited. Chairman Hitt declared he wanted to hear no more from that commission.

When the bill comes before the House it will meet opposition from Speaker Henderson, who is controlled in his opposition by Secretary of the Treasury Shaw. Mr. Shaw does not believe in all the sections of the Kahn-Mitchell bill, and has sent word to Speaker Henderson that the Treasury Department desires certain amendments made. The Republican members of the House said today that Mr. Henderson would antagonize the bill if the amendments that Mr. Shaw wants are not made, and it may be remarked that Mr. Shaw's amendments are mostly in line of taking from the present bill rather than adding to it.

In addition to the work being done by Secretary Shaw against the bill as it stands, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Taylor, who comes pretty near being an out-and-out opponent of Chinese exclusion, is finding fault with it, and this week Mr. Taylor exerted his influence with the War Department to have that department of the government make trouble for the bill.

Mr. Taylor, among other things, does not like the Philippine provision in the bill, so he had Judge Magoon, one of the War Department law officers, make a report to the Secretary of War, part of which follows:

"I have examined the bill with reference to the situation existing in the Philippine Islands. With certain amendments it seems calculated to prevent the passing of persons of Chinese descent from the Philippines to the United States. The objections to the bill are as follows:

"First—It confers upon the Secretary of the Treasury and Commissioner-General of Immigration, authority to adopt rules and regulations for carrying out numerous requirements provided by the bill. The bill specifically recites that its provisions shall apply not only to the mainland of the United States, but the insular Territories, and the authority conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury and Commissioner-General of Immigration is not restricted to the mainland of the United States, but extended by law over the Territories wherein government civil affairs are subject to the jurisdiction of the War Department. The authority conferred upon these two officials relates in most instances to the adoption of rules and regulations. The Chinese question in the Philippines differs in many essentials from the situation in the United States, and I think it doubtful if rules and regulations required to meet the situation in the United States be enforcable in the Philippines. Doubtless the Secretary of the Treasury would adopt such rules and regulations for the Philippines as were recommended by the Secretary of War, but that course would divide jurisdiction and withdraw from the War Department the authority which is indispensable in the promotion of the interests of the United States in that archipelago, and the government of the Philippines.

"Second—A number of provisions of the law require that certain action be taken by a proper officer of the treasury. It will be impossible to fulfill these requirements in the Philippine Islands, for the reason that there are no officers of the treasury exercising authority in the Philippines, unless amended so as to confer authority upon officers of the government of the Philippine Islands to perform the duties required by the act to be performed by officers of the Treasury Department."

The War Department suggests something like twenty amendments to correct these features of the bill to which it objects. If these amendments could be adopted the bill might be satisfactory, but there is certain to be trouble about adopting many of them, especially in the Senate. It is feared a great mistake has been made in allowing such an interminably long time for hearings, which were consumed almost entirely by the California commission.

CALIFORNIA MATERIAL FOR THE CABINET.

CONGRESSMAN METCALF'S NAME UNDER CONSIDERATION.

President Said to Have Him in Mind for Secretary of the Interior—California Senators Backing Horace Davis for the Position.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After casting about for some time for Cabinet material from the Pacific Coast, the President has hit upon one name that meets more general approval than any other that has been mentioned. That is the name of Hon. Victor H. Metcalf of Oakland, now Representative in Congress.

How much consideration the President has given to Mr. Metcalf's name is one of those secrets of Cabinet making that is never divulged to the public until the thing is all settled one way or the other. That Mr. Roosevelt has mentioned Mr. Metcalf in connection with the Cabinet and asked questions about him is known, and that he received a very favorable report is also known.

Mr. Metcalf himself said today that he had never heard a single word about the possibility of his being invited into the Cabinet, and of course that statement made it unnecessary for Mr. Metcalf to say what is well known here, that he is not seeking promotion for himself, and is at the present time a candidate for no position except for renomination for Congress.

Mr. Metcalf did not say whether he would accept a Cabinet place if it were offered him, excusing himself from making any statement whatever by declaring that he could not talk intelligently about a thing that he had never heard about.

Among members of the California delegation the news that Mr. Metcalfe was being suggested for Cabinet timber was greeted with delight, and there is no question that if he becomes a factor in Cabinet-making, he will receive the unanimous support of the delegation.

Both Senators, however, are now more or less committed to Horace Davis of San Francisco, although they have not endorsed him formally. Mr. Davis will probably seek no endorsement, for two reasons: He is not particularly anxious for the position, and the President probably will not ask him to take the place on account of his having reached the evening of life, where men lessen rather than increase their activities. Mr. Roosevelt, is looking for younger, more active men, who can keep pace with his own enormous capacity for work. Mr. Metcalf is just the type of man that Mr. Roosevelt has chosen for Secretary of the Navy; in fact, Moody and Metcalf are great chums. The next Cabinet change will be in the Interior Department, and for that place there is needed a lawyer, which Mr. Metcalf is.

Hanna Gives a Dinner.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Senator Hanna gave a dinner tonight at the Arlington to the Gridiron Club. The Senator has been a guest at every gridiron dinner since he has been in Washington, and the affair tonight was to get the members of the club together to acknowledge the many "roasts" that he has received at their hands, and he says, "to play a return engagement." It was attended only by members of the club who took occasion to see that the Senator did not escape being placed on the gridiron, even though he was the host. It was a thoroughly enjoyable affair, there being good speeches, songs and several "skits" which were a surprise to the host.

GREAT WAR MAY COME.

Conditions in Far East Threaten It.

Japan Can Set Fire to the Gunpowder.

Interesting Comment on the Recent Declaration of France and Russia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Sun's London correspondent says widely different views are being taken throughout Europe of the Franco-Russian declaration in regard to the Anglo-Japanese alliance. The easiest and simplest interpretation of the declaration is that it is an indorsement of the principles on which the Anglo-Japanese treaty was based, and that it furnishes an additional guarantee of peace. This apparently pacific utterance contains, however, an announcement which arouses grave apprehensions in England. These fears find clear expression in a serious article in today's Spectator, which says:

"The sting of the Russo-French communique is in the tailing; the last clause runs: 'Nevertheless, they themselves being also obliged to take into consideration eventual aggressive action on the part of a third power, or of fresh troubles in China, jeopardizing the integrity and free development of that power, and becoming a menace to their own interests, the two allied governments reserve it to themselves to consider in such case the means of assuring their protection.'

"This, obviously, can mean only one thing. The third power whose possibly aggressive action is contemplated is, of course, Japan. In other words, we are warned that if Japan, from any cause, gets involved in hostilities the war will be with two powers—that is, Russia and France. If it comes to war it will be a two-power war contemplated by treaty. In other words, the Russo-French declaration finally and entirely disposes of fond illusions which have been entertained so widely here that, in spite of the alliance with Japan, there is little danger of our being involved in dangerous complications. It has been urged that even if Japan got into war with Russia that it would be a cruel kindness for France to help her, and so bring England into the mêlee, and, therefore, as true friends, they intended to stand aside.

"The Russo-Franco declaration puts an absolute stop to all of this. It is a clear notice that there can be no single-power war in the Far East. We said, when the alliance was first announced, we must make up our minds to the alliance bringing with it possibly a war with France, and we pointed out how that alliance left our foreign policy to the mercy of Japan. Japan might and probably would prove merciful, for Japan is governed by prudent, astute statesmen, but that could not alter the fact that we have placed our foreign relations not merely in the Far East, but our foreign relations in regard to Russia and France, generally, at the mercy of Japan.

"We may disguise the fact by diplomatic sophistries, and we may refuse to recognize the fact, but the fact remains that we and Japan have ourselves ranged opposite to Russia and France, and that our interests may plunge us into a war which will be fought in the channel and Baltic. We do not, of course, suggest that the risk of war must never be run if vital interests so near home are involved, but we do think that such risks require grave thought and consideration."

This pessimistic opinion finds echoes on the continent. Thus the Cologne Gazette yesterday asserted that Russia and England were strenuously endeavoring to draw the United States to the side that they respectively represent in the conflict. The fact is that America's position in the present situation is an absolutely commanding one. France is completely committed to Russia, in the event of hostilities from any cause. Russia finds herself forced to decide definitely whether she will abandon her plans in Manchuria and the Far East, generally, or force them to fruition. If the latter, she must act quickly, while England is still engaged in South Africa and Ireland is seriously seditious.

One point must be settled before it is possible to make any decision that will lead to war. What will America do in the event of war? It is perfectly understood that no Anglo-American alliance is possible, but would America remain in strictly neutral attitude, if England and Japan were engaged in war in defense of principles with which America was in hearty sympathy? That is a question Russia and France would seek to have answered before venturing upon any bellicose policy.

The following dispatch from Berlin is from a source upon which reliance may be placed:

"Germany has been approached by both groups of allies, but the imperial government has declined to entangle itself in any way. Assurances have been received here from Washington which indicate that the American government will take a similar attitude. It is represented on behalf of both Russia and France that since the Anglo-Japanese treaty was made public, Japan has been detected in intrigues which seriously threaten peace."

RUINS OF GREAT CITIES FOUND BY DR. HEDIN.

THIBETAN EXPLORER OBTAINS RICH REWARD FOR TOIL.

His Discoveries Will Throw New Light on Questions Relating to Distribution of Various Races and Migratory Movements from Asia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VANCOUVER, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Oriental advices today by steamer say that a series of magnificent ruins of Chinese and Mongolian origin about 800 years old, have been discovered by Dr. Sven Hedin, Thibetan explorer.

Dr. Hedin lately arrived in Madras, India, after two and a half years' travel through Thibet, and told an interesting tale of discovery of ancient civilization. Making his headquarters at Lob Nor, he rummaged in all directions, and the discovery of these ancient cities will throw a new light on questions affecting the distribution of various human races and the migratory movements of Asiatic people, and also upon physical geography. This is the value set by Dr. Hedin himself upon his discoveries. He was bound by promises to publishers, and could not give all the details of his find.

He went through the whole of the northern and central portions of Eastern Thibet, traveled through Western China, and through a totally unknown part of the great desert of Gobi. He obtained a big collection at Ladakh of extraordinary sculptures, and extremely rare Chinese and Thibetan manuscripts, unearthed from ruins by himself. Hedin had a unique series of adventures and brought back 4000 photographs and a great number of sketches. Four of his men died from fatigue and privation. Some of the Thibet passes he had to go over were 20,000 feet above the sea level. He covered 5400 miles of unknown land and visited many places never penetrated by natives themselves.

COURT-MARTIAL HEARS TESTIMONY FOR WALLER.

OPENING STATEMENT BY CAPT. MARIX FOR DEFENSE.

He Promises to Show by a Review of Incidents Connected Therewith That the Executions Were Necessary, Lawful and Justifiable.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MANILA, March 22.—[By Manila Cable.] The prosecution in the trial by court-martial of Maj. Littleton W. T. Waller of the Marine Corps on the charge of executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, closed today.

Capt. Arthur T. Marix, of the Marine Corps, representing Maj. Waller, opened the defense by promising to show five things: The work of the firing party; the nature of Maj. Waller's services in Samar; the treacherous character of the natives; the conditions at the base, and Maj. Waller's status there, and that the executions were necessary, lawful and justifiable.

Capt. David D. Porter of the Marine Corps, testified that he was present when Gen. Smith gave Maj. Waller his orders, which Maj. Waller never executed. At the outset, Maj. Waller warned his command that they were opposed by a treacherous, brave and savage foe, and that all treachery should be punished with death, and closed with an appeal to the command to remember the fate of their old China comrades of the Ninth Infantry and avenge them.

TRYING TO CHECK CHOLERA.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MANILA, March 22.—The Board of Health is making a strong effort to prevent the spread of cholera. There have been sixteen cases and fifteen deaths among the natives in two days, and other natives are suspected of having contracted the disease. The importation of vegetables matter from China is prohibited; inspection camps are being established in every district; and leaflets are published advising the people to boil their drinking water before using it. Finally, every one is urged to coöperate in the destruction of this dangerous enemy.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WILLEMSTADT (Island of Curacao) March 22.—[By South American Cable.] During the past five days the revolution in Venezuela has broken out almost everywhere. The government cannot control the country east of Cumana. Barcelona is still beseiged by the revolutionists, and Carupina is partially in their power.

The mission of Minister Velutino to Barcelona has not been successful, and he is returning tomorrow to the capital. Gen. Estralante, with 1200 men, will replace him at Barcelona.

President Castro has sent First Vice-President Gomez with 1500 men against the revolutionists under Gen. Rioera, who is in the vicinity of Caparado, in the State of Falcon. Second Vice-President Ayala, who had previously been sent against Rioera, returned to Caracas without vanquishing the revolutionary general.

It is believed that if the revolutionists win one important battle, all Venezuela will rise against the government of President Castro. The latter is recruiting day and night, and every man and boy procurable is being pressed into the service. The villages are deserted, and the negroes and Indians have sought refuge in the woods, in the hope of cruiting officers.

This advantage the light blues retained for some time, but after passing Chiswick Eyot, Oxford made a magnificent spurt, in which the power and swing of J. G. PITCHER HODSON ARRIVES.

WILL PLAY AGAINST OAKLAND.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

FRESNO, March 22.—Hodson, the crack baseball pitcher from Hartford, Ct., has arrived in this city from the North, where he has been coaching a team for a few weeks, and will play with the Fresno nine tomorrow afternoon in the match between Fresno and Oakland.

The Oakland men have been making the best use of the fine weather during the week, going out for practice every morning and afternoon. When they lined up for the game last Sunday, they had had less than one week's training, but they will be in much better condition for the game tomorrow. Every one who witnessed the exhibition was pleased with it, though the men were not up to form, and it is safe to say that the game will be superior. One of the local bands has been engaged to aid in entertaining the crowd.

Frank Chance will be in the game with the Fresno boys, and this will be his last appearance in this city, as he expects to leave for Chicago on the following Wednesday to enter the National League games.

MONTANA MEET.

OFFICERS NAMED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUTTE (Mont.) March 22.—President Hugh Wilson of the Montana Jockey Club today named the secretary, starter and auctioneer for the race meetings in Butte and Anaconda. Ralph A. Tozier will be secretary and associate judge, being the selection of Judge J. A. Murphy, who will preside at the meet. Kitchinn was accepted as starter and W. H. MacGrane will be auctioneer.

President Wilson has received advices from California to the effect that a great array of stables is being prepared for the season at Butte. The Montana Jockey Club is offering $100,000 in purses, and the meet will include several big stake events.

EUGENES WON MATCH.

DEFEATED LOS ANGELES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

FRESNO, March 22.—The Eugene Bowling Club of San Francisco tonight won the match with the Los Angeles Bowling Club winning three games out of five. The scores for the different games were as follows:

First game: Eugene Club, 827; Los Angeles, 821.

Second: Eugene, 813; Los Angeles, 860.

Third: Eugene, 793; Los Angeles, 844.

Fourth: Eugene, 893; Los Angeles, 856.

Fifth: Eugene, 924; Los Angeles, 840.

Thorp of the Eugene Club made the highest score, 238 points. He made seven strikes.

HAMILTON BREAKS RECORD.

STANFORD-UKIAH GAMES.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 22.—The track meet held here today between the Ukiah High School and Stanford sophomores resulted in a victory for Stanford by a score of 61 to 47. The most exciting event was the 220-yard dash, in which H. L. Hamilton broke the Stanford record held by Bernhardt, '96. Following are the events and results:

The 120-yard hurdle—J. Weller, Ukiah, won; Taylor, Stanford, second; Thomas, Ukiah, third; time 17s.

High jump—Henley, Stanford, won; Seawell, second; Thomas, Ukiah, third; height, 5ft. 9½in.

One-mile run: Guy Weller, Ukiah, won; Burton, Stanford, second; L. A. Henity, Ukiah, third; time 5m. 14 2-5s.

One-hundred-yard dash: Hagens, Ukiah, won; Hamilton, second; Bubb, Stanford, third; time 10 2-5s.

The 880-yard dash: Holman, Stanford, won; Burne second; Wyckoff, Ukiah, third; time 2m. 15 3-5s.

Broad jump: A. S. Henley, Stanford, won, 21ft. 3in.; Hogam second; J. Weller third.

The 220-yard hurdle: Taylor, Stanford, won; J. Weller, Ukiah, second; Cox, Ukiah, third; time 26 2-5s.

The 220-yard dash: Hamilton, Stanford, won; Hogam, Ukiah, second; Luce third; time 22 1-5s.

The 440-yard dash: Dunn won, Crossman second, Watson, Stanford, third; time 53s.

Pole vault: A. S. Henley won, 9ft. 6in.; Whitaker, Stanford, second; Seawell third.

Hammer throw, twelve pounds: Briggs, Ukiah, won, 133ft.; Hyde, Stanford, second, 107ft.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

MAGNATES WILL MEET.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—That the National League Club owners will have a meeting in this city next week is no longer denied by the various magnates, says the World.

Two semi-official announcements have been made to the effect that the magnates will be in town on Monday and meet on Tuesday, and also that a schedule will be promulgated before next Saturday.

The magnates have been bothered about the legal way to call their meeting, but Col. Rogers of Philadelphia claims he has surmounted the difficulty. One plan is to resolve all the representatives who attend the meeting into a committee of the whole. The dates will be discussed in open meeting, and a sub-committee appointed to get up the schedule.

SLOAN WILL BE GOOD.

WANTS LICENSE NEXT YEAR.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—Tod Sloan hopes to get his license from the Jockey Club renewed next season by pursuing a blameless course as a trainer and rider in trials, says a dispatch to the World from London.

The King, the Duke of Devonshire and Earl Cadogan are said to have backed Sloan's petition for a renewal of the license, but Lord Durham, a steward for this year, threatened to resign if the license was granted.

Alumni Won Ball Game.

BERKELEY, March 22.—A baseball nine composed of the alumni of the University of California defeated the 'varsity in a Charter Day contest on the campus this afternoon. The score was 14 to 4.

Olympic Lost to Stanford.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 22.—The Stanford 'varsity defeated the Olympic Club nine on the campus this afternoon by a score of 18 to 7.

FITZSIMMONS WON'T FIGTH.

The "Has Been" Pugilist Shows His Hand.

Says Jeff is Trying to Put Up Job on Him.

Corbett Anxious to Jump into the Arena—Sharkey not Yet Heard From.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fitzsimmons declared this afternoon that he will not now fight at Los Angeles on any terms, and if he does not hear from Jeffries or from some other club by tomorrow he will quit. Friends tried to persuade him to hold off until April 1, but Fitz said in reply:

"So far as Los Angeles is concerned, I'm done, and unless there are indications tomorrow that some other club comes forward, I'll do no more training. I am under very heavy training expenses and all to advertise this stiff of a champion, who is trying to force me to fight in his own club, on his own terms, to say nothing of any chances of getting 'done' as happened at 'Frisco when the Earp gang robbed me. There is no doubt in my mind that Jeffries and Delaney are members of this Century Club. That is why he wired me we could draw a $60,000 house there, and that the 'Frisco clubs were 'very bad.' Yet out of that $60,000 house we can't get a $25,000 guarantee."

Fitz directed that a telegram be sent to Jeffries telling him of his decision.

Jim Corbett is anxious to meet either Jeffries or Fitzsimmons. Jim is filling an engagement at Richmond, and, according to a dispatch from that place, he has telegraphed his brother, Harry Corbett at San Francisco, that he is ready to take the place of Fitzsimmons and box Jeffries there, August 1. He also offers to bet $5000 on the side.

Corbett also said that he would box Fitzsimmons under any reasonable agreement.

CORBETT'S CHALLENGE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

RICHMOND (Va.) March 22.—James J. Corbett, who is appearing here as a member of a theatrical company, today telegraphed Harry Corbett to challenges James Jeffries to a fight with him, should Robert Fitzsimmons refuse to fight him under the offer of the Los Angeles club. Corbett puts up a $1000 forfeit and a side bet of $5000.

"DE CHAMP" STANDS PAT.

SAYS CORBETT IS BLUFFING.

When Jeffries's attention was called to Corbett's challenge yesterday, he said:

"I would rather fight that fellow than anybody, but he won't fight. He is only bluffing for the sake of a little cheap advertising."

Nothing has been heard yet in response to the Century Club's offer to take Sharkey on instead of Fitzsimmons. "Absent treatment" of "the sailor" is eing continued, with very little prospect of awakening signs of life in his inert carcass.

There were no developments yesterday tending to show that the proposed battle is any nearer being pulled off in Los Angeles, or elsewhere, than a fortnight ago. The only man who seems willing and anxious to enter the ring for a great championship battle, is the champion himself. Idleness does not agree with Jeffries, and he pants for the fray.

Gracefully the New Ship Hermosa Rides Briny San Pedro Bay.

With a movement as graceful as that of a swan the new hull of the steamer Hermosa descended the ways on Mormon Island, near San Pedro, yesterday morning, and made its first acquaintance with the briny.

The building of the new craft marks a sort of transmigration of spirits. The old Hermosa, which for many years has plowed the main, has yielded up its best in order that its name may be perpetuated in another craft. With engines and boilers removed, with her deckhouse yielding to the unsentimental saw and hammer, and with her proud form undergoing the dismantling process, the old hull looks gloomy and lifeless.

But the loss of the old is the gain of the new. The engines and other power equipment are being overhauled and put into the finest trim for the runs that are to be, and the best of the furnishings are being made ready for the craft that now rides the seas.

The launching party included about twenty people from Los Angeles and elsewhere. The party went to Brighton Beach Friday evening, and was entertained at the Brigton Beach Hotel by the Wilmington Transportation Company, which owns the new boat.

After an early breakfast the party was conveyed to the launching place. Hancock Banning and Miss Anita Patton, a daughter of Joseph Patton, stood on the platform built over the new craft's bows. The ceremony was simple, but pretty. Miss Patton poised a bottle of wine from the old Hermosa and flung it against the side of the new vessel. As the glass was shattered and the bottle's contents baptized the neatly-caulked surface, the blocks were knocked loose and the big structure was on her way to the water.

The slant of the ways was slight, so that the momentum when the stern struck the water was not great. The hull slowed appreciably, and, although the channel at that point is narrow, she stopped before touching the bank on the opposite side.

The tug Sea Witch, with Capt. Alex Smith, the veteran skipper, at her wheel, took a line from the Hermosa and soon the christened hull was neatly moored beside the parent boat. Over the new craft was a long line of banners, fluttering to the breeze and showing a handsome play of colors.

The new Hermosa is the biggest craft of all that have been built in San Pedro Bay. The steamer Eureka, built there several years ago, has a somewhat greater official tonnage.

The lumber in the Hermosa is of Oregon pine. The cabin will be finished in mahogany. The boat's length is 150 feet over all. Her breadth of beam is 28 feet, and her molded depth is 13 feet 10 inches. Her engines are of 325-horse power. Her wheel, or screw, is of tobin bronze, and weighs 3600 pounds. Her electric generators will have a capacity of 150 incandescent lamps.

The boat was designed and constructed by William Miller, who formerly served under John Dickie of the Fulton Iron Works as foreman. Mr. Miller also designed and built the Eureka at San Pedro.

The engines, which have oil-burning furnaces, are being overhauled and rebuilt by Andrew Young. The oil-burning device was designed by Mr. Young and differs from that commonly used on locomotives and other engines where oil is used for fuel. The oil is blown into the furnace with compressed air instead of with steam. By employing that scheme the constant loss of water from the boilers such as would follow the use of steam for the blowers is obviated, and there is much less danger of flares or puffs, such as might seriously burn the firemen.

The new Hermosa is to be in commission for the Catalina Island run on June 15.

IN THE AIR.

The Germs of La Grippe are Conveyed Through the Atmosphere.

No one can escape the la grippe germ because when an epidemic of the disease is prevailing the air is laden with it.

The reason that everyone does not have the disease at the same time is because the persons who are enjoying perfect health are able to successfully resist and throw off the infection, while those, who for any reason are not in the best of health, fall ready victims.

The first symptoms are those of acute catarrh, resembling a hard cold and if prompt treatment is applied at this time it can easily be broken up; one of the best remedies at this stage is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, sold by druggists everywhere and if taken freely, say one tablet every hour or two for two or three days, the danger of pneumonia and serious complications will be averted.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist clergyman of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and catarrhal troubles from which I have suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them."

Persons who suffer from catarrh of the head and throat are very susceptible to La Grippe and such will find a pleasant, convenient and safe remedy in this new catarrh cure.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed entirely of harmless antiseptics and may be used as freely as necessary as they contain no cocaine, opiate or poisonous drug of any kind.

LIFE CRUSHED OUT.

J. C. Kenward, Laborer in Lumber Yard, Killed Almost Instantly by Falling Mass of Timbers.

J. C. Kenward was killed yesterday morning while engaged in unloading a car of lumber at the yards of the L. W. Blinn Company, corner Second and Alameda streets. Kenward and a fellow-laborer named Reinhart, had started to take the timbers from the flat car, Kenward being on the ground and Reinhart on top of the load. Kenward removed one of the stakes that held the lumber in place, and was about to remove the other, when the entire mass of timbers fell on him. Assistance was soon at hand, but when the lumber was removed, the man was in a dying condition, his chest being crushed, and death followed almost immediately after his release. A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Kenward was 38 years old and unmarried. His home had been at No. 120 Wilmington street. His father and sister live at Roberts, Ill., and when notified of the accident, they gave instructions to inter the body in this city.

LINARES ARRESTED.

Los Nietos Man, Charged With Assaulting Junk Man Fisher, is Placed in the County Jail.

Bleto Linares, who is charged with assaulting Henry Fisher, a junkman, at Los Nietos Friday, was arrested yesterday at the home of his grandmother by Deputy Sheriffs Werdin and Davis. Linares was in bed when the officers arrived, and declared emphatically that he would not submit to arrest without a warrant. He offered vigorous resistance, but finally was subdued and landed in the County Jail. Werdin and Davis searched in vain for the $44 which Fisher claims the man took from him.

Linares has a bad reputation, and is said to have been involved in a fight with a Mexican named Martinez at Whittier, a few months ago. Linares was shot at this time, and Martinez, who was cut with a knife in the hands of his opponent, is now awaiting trial for assault.

Although Fisher has the reputation of telling gauzy stories, the officers believe that he told the truth when he related the account of his encounter with Linares, and his wagon, which is covered with blood, seems to bear out his statements. The vehicle is covered with blood from front to rear.

Fisher, who is bruised badly, and who has a fractured rib, is in charge of Dr. C. E. Stoner.

It was reported that Constable John Taylor of Los Nietos had witnessed a part or all of the encounter between Fisher and Linares, but that he refused to perform his duty in making an arrest. Taylor declared yesterday that he saw absolutely nothing of the fracas, and says he is guiltless of any dereliction of duty.

MIND DISEASED.

Gusta Thielkuhl, Once Government Clerk and Boer Sympathizer, in City Jail With Weak Brain.

Gusta Thielkuhl, who at one time was a clerk in the Pension Department at Washington, and whose wife is employed as a stenographer for the Philippines Commission at Manila, was placed in custody yesterday, suffering from an affection of the brain. It is said that Thielkuhl's wife has instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, and that this has caused the collapse of his mind, which has been affected before.

Before Thielkuhl was employed at Washington, it is said, he had been confined in an insane hospital near that city, but had been discharged as cured. At the outbreak of the Boer war he became deeply interested in the cause of the burghers, and went to South Africa with Webster Davis of Kansas City, who was an active pro-Boer agent. Thielkuhl, it is said, was instrumental in forming the Irish brigade that went from Chicago to join the field forces of the Boers, and in many other ways he espoused their cause. He had in his possession at one time letters from 60,000 Boer sympathizers in the United States and Canada.

It is said that Davis promised to share equally with Thielkuhl the money, amounting to $400,000, that, it is alleged, was given to the Kansas City man by President Kruger of the Transvaal. In this Thielkuhl was disappointed, and this, together with his domestic troubles, again unsettled his mind.

Coming West, Thielkuhl obtained employment with the Union Iron Works at San Francisco, working for a time as a draughtsman, but he soon left that position and came to Los Angeles, where his malady developed so rapidly that it was found necessary to place him under restraint.

Beautiful Suit $35.

We've seen many a suit at $50 that wouldn't please you half so well as these. Not only is it a wonderfully becoming costume, but the style and the material has such an expensive, exclusive appearance and it is so dressy. Jacket comes in a new poplin style with high flare collar and a deep dip front effect. It is trimmed with solid bias bands of taffeta. The sleeves come in the newest bell style, and the jacket has a charming individuality. The skirt is in a straight ore style with a flare, circular flounce. Finished with bias bands of taffeta and crocheted rings finished in loops. $35 is a price that seems far too low for such a creation.

Swell Costume $27.50.

The material used in this suit is a handsome gray broadcloth. The jacket comes in the pepiin style with a vest of embroidered velvet. The sleeves are in the new bell style. Skirt comes in a serpentine effect with a clever circular flounce. The suit is handsomely and effectively tailor finished, and is both dressy and becoming.

New Suit $45.00.

This is a swell costume of pebble cheviot in navy blue or black. The skirt is made with two circular flounces finished with tailor stitching with a separate drop skirt of black taffeta. The jacket is one of those short, tight fitting styles with a deep roll collar and cuffs. It is trimmed with handsome applique in black moire. The suit is one of those refined, dressy costumes that are particularly suited for the Easter season, and it is one of those suits that always seem new and attractive, no matter how frequent and long it is worn. You would be less satisfied if you paid some little suit store $60.00.

Lovely Suit $27.50.

This is yet another one of those exclusive costumes that have made this suit department so famous among critical women. It is made of choice Venetian cloth and comes in either navy blue or black. The skirt is made in the serpentine effect, trimmed with a heavy silk braid. The jacket comes with a double breasted coat effect, reveres, collar and cuffs richly appliqued in black and white moire silk. We may as well tell you that we have seen the identical suit marked $40.00 in a suit store that prides itself on low prices.

Spring Suit $26.

You may have this in brown or tian cloth and it is a quality that you immensely. The "Cecilian" Piano-Player.

Our experience with mechanical players dates back over a period of nearly 16 years. We have sold various makes and have changed our agencies only when we found a superior article. This is progressiveness. We are quick to discern improvements—the first to recognize the shortcomings of an instrument! After careful research—close investigation into detail of construction—unprejudiced judgment of the musical and artistic results obtained, we unreservedly pronounce the "Cecilian" pre-eminently

The Standard of Comparison.

Its superiority is based on the following facts:

THE "CECILIAN" has every point of merit possessed by every other player, besides distinctive and individual features, which make it incomparable with similar inventions.
THE "CECILIAN" does not pound! It does not wear the mechanism of your piano any more than a delicate human touch.
THE "CECILIAN" does not drown the treble by a predominating and rumbling bass.
THE "CECILIAN" is capable of producing a musical quality of tone and accentuating a melody—in other words, it produces a "singing touch!"
THE "CECILIAN" owing to its simple construction, is instantaneous in responding to your "moods."
THE "CECILIAN" in short, is nearly human in its renditions. Its technique being simply the means to an end! That end is to make MUSIC and MELODY!
THE "CECILIAN" does the difficult work for you while each and every composition, be it a Beethoven sonata or a modern dance, is played as you would play it if you had the technique.

With the Aid of the Cecilian Musical Temperament and Individuality have full sway, for you have only one thing to think of,
"HOW WELL CAN I PLAY THIS?"
"WHAT EXPRESSION CAN I GIVE?"

A cordial invitation is extended to you to visit our "Cecilian" parlors, where courteous salesmen will thoroughly demonstrate the instrument's merits.

Other piano players taken in exchange for "Cecilians" and liberal allowances made.

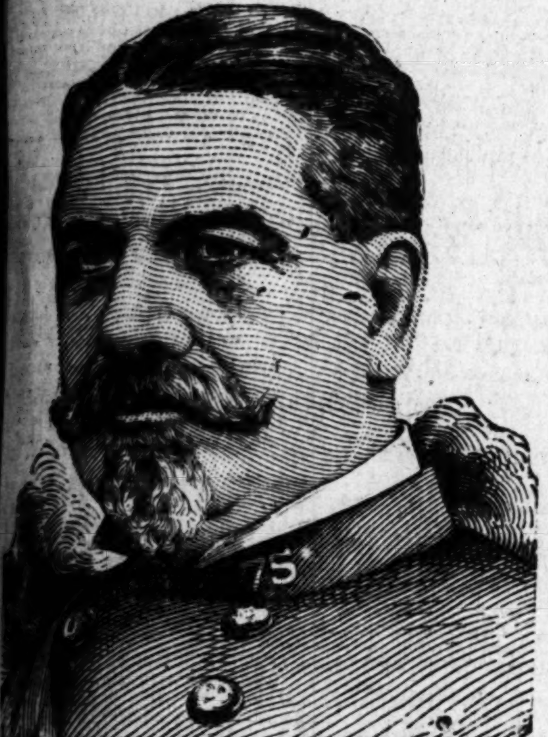
ROMINENT MEN AND WOMEN SAY: WELL-KNOWN BISHOPS TESTIFY:

AT PE-RU-NA LEADS THE WORLD AS A REMEDY FOR CATARRH, WHETHER ACUTE CATARRH OR CHRONIC CATARRH.

An Effective Remedy for Catarrh.

al James R. O'Beirne, 290 Broadway, Washington, D. C., late ioner of Charities of New York City, N. Y., and Assistant Com- of Immigration, writes as follows:



GENERAL JAMES R. O'BIERNE.

"As many of my friends and acquaintances have successfully used Peruna as a catarrh cure, I feel that it is an effective remedy, and recommend it as such to those suffering from that disease as a most hopeful source of relief." JAMES R. O'BEIRNE.

rna For All Catarrhal Complaints.

William A. Deane, Clerk of the city and county of San Francisco, letter written to Dr. Hartman, January 28, 1899, has the following of Peruna:

"I would not be without Peruna, as I have found it to be the best rem- catarrhal complaints that I have ever used. I have tried most all

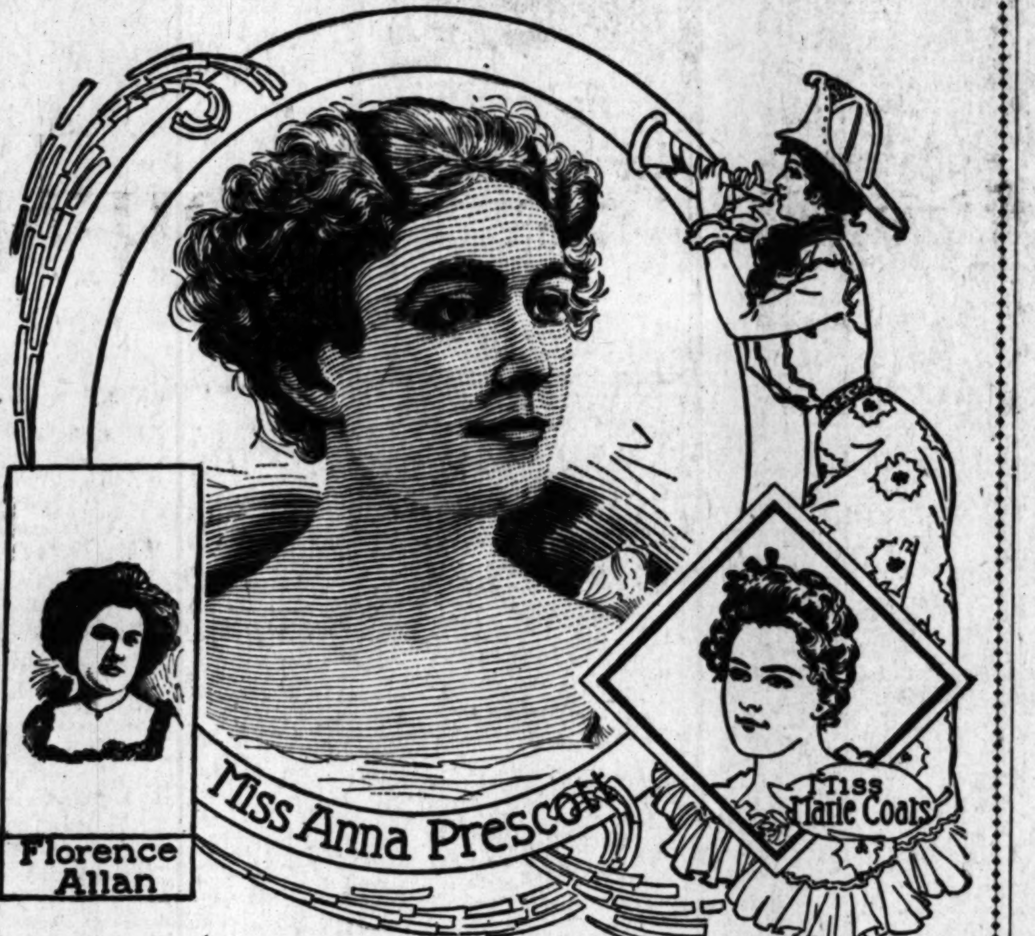
Thousands of Fair Women Herald Praises for Pe-ru-na.

Catarrhal Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration Make Invalids of More Women Than All Other Diseases Combined.



Peruna is the woman's friend everywhere. It is safe to say that no woman ever used Peruna for any catarrhal derangements but what it became indispensable in her household.

Letters From Women.

Every day we receive letters from women like the following. Women who have tried doctors and failed; women who have tried Peruna and were cured.

Miss Katie Klein, 6125 Bartmer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good for catarrh than the best doctors could. I had catarrh so bad, but after taking Peruna it is entirely gone, and I feel like a different person."

Miss Anna Prescott's Letter.

Miss Anna Prescott in a letter from 216 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I am sincerely grateful for the relief I have found from the use of Peruna. I was completely used up last fall, my appetite had failed and I felt weak and tired all the time. My druggist advised me to try Peruna and the relief I experienced after taking one bottle was truly wonderful.

"I continued its use for five weeks and am glad to say that my complete restoration to health was a happy surprise to myself as well as to my friends."—Anna Prescott.

A constant drain of nervous vitality depleting the whole nervous system causes the mucous membrane surfaces to suffer accordingly. This is the condition called systemic catarrh. It very nearly resembles, and there is really no practical difference, between this condition and the condition known as neurasthenia, or nervous prostration.

Peruna will be found to effect an immediate and lasting cure in all cases of systemic catarrh. It acts quickly and beneficially on the diseased mucous membranes, and with healthy mucous membranes, the catarrh can no longer exist.

Peruna a True Friend to Women.

Miss Florence Allan, a beautiful Chicago girl, writes the following from 75 Walton Place:

"As a tonic for a worn-out system, Peruna stands at the head in my estimation. Its effects are truly wonderful in rejuvenating the entire system. I keep it on hand all the time, and never have that 'tired feeling,' as a few doses always make me feel like a different woman."—Florence Allan.

Peruna is equally efficacious in curing catarrh of the pelvic organs as in curing systemic catarrh or catarrh of the stomach. Catarrh is essentially the same wherever located.

Peruna Makes You Feel Like a New Person.

Miss Marie Coats, a popular young woman of Appleton, Wis., and President of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, also speaks in glowing terms of Peruna. A letter recently received from her by The Peruna Medicine Company, of Columbus, Ohio, reads as follows:

"I am glad to call the attention of my friends to Peruna. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week.

"I have now used it for three seasons, and find it very valuable and efficacious."—Miss Marie Coats.

Diseased nerves are traceable directly to poor digestion, and poor digestion is directly traceable to catarrh. With the slightest catarrh of the stomach no one can have good digestion.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes catarrh from the stomach the digestion becomes good, appetite regular, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—poor digestion. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause: Nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause.

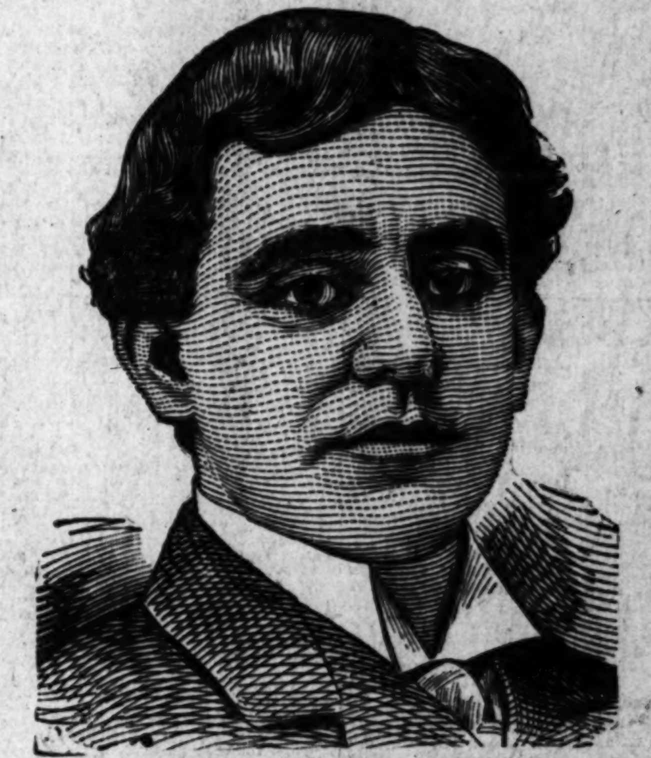
Peruna Fortifies the System Against Colds.

Judge Francis Dean Syrick, of Richmond, Va., is a prominent attorney of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter written from 1341 L street, Washington, D. C., he says:



JUDGE FRANCIS DEAN SYRICK.

"I have for some time been troubled with a malarial condition of the system, thus making me susceptible to colds and rheumatic conditions.

"A friend recommended Peruna to me some time ago and I commenced taking it, and after a few days I felt the beneficial effects of the medicine. I am going to continue taking it, for I can say without hesitancy that it is one of the best tonics that I ever took." FRANCIS DEAN SYRICK.

Peruna a Cure for Catarrh.

Hon. A. T. Goodwyn, Congressman from Alabama, in a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, has the following to say in regard to Peruna, the national catarrh remedy:

"I have now used one bottle of Peruna and am a well man today. I could feel the good effects of your medicine before I had used it a week, after suffering with catarrh for over a year." A. T. GOODWYN

CONGRESSMAN A. T. GOODWYN.

Over forty members of Congress have given their written indorsement to Peruna. Men of national fame recommend the national catarrh cure, Peruna. Write for free book of testimonials.

Catarrh is the Continual Scourge of Christendom.

Catarrh hovers ominously over every city, and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient.

Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage, lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold.

No tissue, function or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult of cure is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages.

Is it therefore any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chornic catarrh by Peruna are so lavish in their praise of this remedy? That the discovery of Peruna has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

CITRUS FRUITS IN THE EAST.

GOOD DEMAND IN NEW YORK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] California orange receipts showed a decided falling off this week, only seventy cars being received as compared with 129 cars of oranges and two cars of lemons last week. The supplies have been far from sufficient to meet the demand and prices jumped at each sale, closing from 50 to 75 cents higher than last week on navels, and 50 cents on seedlings. Sstrictly fancy navels on Friday brought as high as $4.20 for 96's. Considerable decay was in evidence, but even wasty fruit was well taken. Well-colored bloods are selling well, and fancy tangerines are bringing high prices for half boxes. Unsettled weather on the Coast has reduced shipments, and with the output running considerably behind last year, prospects are good for continued high prices. Up to date 1199 cars of oranges and 129 cars of lemons have been sold in New York, while during the same period of last year 1376 cars of oranges and 72 cars of lemons were disposed of.

Chicago Market.

CHICAGO, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Demand for oranges is good and the market firm. The call for navels runs to 176's and 200's principally. One of the features of the orange business last week was the arrival of a straight car of Corona bloods packed in half boxes, of very fine quality. The lemon market is quiet, being pretty well stocked on f.o.b. cars, which have come in, although prices have not materially decreased. Almost a straight car of peas arrived here from California last week under ice, and it came through in a splendid condition and the buyers have made a good profit.

Pittsburgh Prices.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.]] As indicated by quotations, oranges show more activity at better prices. Arrivals are now light and further improvement is expected for fruit in good condition. There has been very little sound fruit offered. Most oranges showed decay, some being particularly wasty.

Shipments are now being made under refrigerator. With the advance on navels, other varieties will improve. Lemons are not so active, probably the condition of both Californias and Messinas has something to do with this. Sixteen cars of California oranges were sold this week.

Philadelphia Quotations.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twenty-five cars of California oranges, mostly high-class navels, were sold during the week. Prices ranged from $1.85 to $3.55 and on the up grade. Half boxes of tangerines are in demand at $1.70 to $2.25, Mandarins, $2.20 to $2.25; seedlings, $2.25 to $2.55; Ruby bloods, $2.35 to $2.80; grapefruit, $2.80 to $3.20.

The estimates of the commercial press of he wheat in farmers' hands on March 1, are reported as follows: Orange Judd Farmer, 182,000,000 bushels; Daily Trade Bulletin, 186,000,000 bushels; Cincinnati Price Current, 190,000,000 bushels; Modern Miller, 195,000,000 bushels.

PRUNES GOING EXPORT. The San José Mercury of March 12, says: "Ten carloads of prunes have been sold this week for export to Europe. All the fruit but two or three cars goes from this valley. The two or three cars go from San Joaquin Valley points. The exact destination of the fruit was not given out, but it is understood that it goes to Germany. A big local packer and shipper says: 'The market for fruit is strong. There is decidedly more activity in the East. There is every reason for saying that the country is consuming the fruit as it is going out of the hands of the dealers.'"

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

CITRUS-FRUIT SHIPMENTS. Shipments of oranges from Southern California for Friday were 114 carloads, and 6 of lemons. The total for the season, November 1, 1901, to date, is 9883 carloads, of which 705 were lemons.

FOR DEVELOPMENT. When the State Board of Trade was officially notified of the action taken Monday at the meeting of the representatives of the local commercial bodies, Joseph A. Filcher, who is the secretary and general manager of the board, said:

"This is the best news we have heard since we were organized ten years ago. It means that from now on our work will reach the high level that we have hoped for, and we can do things that in the past we could only dream of doing. We have been spending about $10,000 a year in promoting California's interests; now we shall be able to spend $50,000 a year. And I don't think we shall have much trouble in raising the money. A few months ago it would have been impossible to collect any money at all on the streets for this purpose, but the merchants of San Francisco, as well as the people in the country, are thoroughly awake to their magnificent opportunity, and I do not think $50,000 a year is at all an extravagant figure. It will be the purpose of the State Board of Trade to make every dollar count, and we shall introduce methods of publicity and promotion never used in the past."

San Francisco is going the right way about the thing now. The northern and central counties have great natural resources. The southern counties have been marvelously developed in the past twenty years by just such means as the north is now adopting.

STRIKES IN CHINA. People generally suppose in this country that there are no laboring organizations in China, that the working Chinaman takes what he can get and holds his job at the mercy of his employer.

This is a mistake. In at least some of the Chinese cities laborers have better organizations than in any other part of the world. The city of Foo-Chow has more trades unions than any city in the United States, and the discipline is better. The fact is that the unions practically control the business of the town. Foo-Chow is bigger than Boston, and is the labor center of China. Round about the city all kinds of silks and satins and cotton goods are manufactured. There are 100,000 people in and about Foo-Chow engaged in the manufacture of embroidery. There is also a great fur business. Tens of thousands of workmen are employed in making fans. Altogether, there are 350 trades, and nearly every trade has its union.

Every once in awhile these unions go on a strike, and when they do, they make it mighty lively for the employers. Some years ago the Gold Beaters' Union went on a strike, and decided that they would take it out on the boss. The gold-leaf capitalists had taken more apprentices than the rules of the union allowed. This was the cause of the strike. They consulted lawyers and found that there was no law in China to punish a workman for biting an employer. The next morning 123 of them waited for the boss, and as he came in, each one took a bite out of him. In about ten minutes they had him chewed down to the size of a soup bone. He died, and the strikers went unpunished.—[Topeka Merchants' Journal.

Now, let Jim Gray and Andrew Fuhreseth emigrate to China, and be at home.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS.

It is, broadly speaking, a very quiet time all around in produce dealings. The movement is right in most lines, it being a jobbers' market in these and prices are steady in most cases.

Fancy potatoes and onions are firm, choice are steady, and poor to fair easy.

Celery and cauliflower are passed excepting in a small way. The demand for cabbage is still light.

Receipts of spring vegetables and small fruits are not increasing and will not until these chill nights and blustering winds give place to warm sunshine. Peas are steady, string beans scarce and firm. Asparagus and rhubarb are coming in more freely, from the North.

All live stock and fresh and cured meats are firm.

Dried fruits are firmly held for full prices by jobbers. If spring is late an advance is not improbable, after apples are gone and oranges become scarce.

The orange market is strong at all points. The navel crop is cleaning up quite rapidly. Valencias are beginning to go. Lemons are somewhat scarce and likely to become more so as the weeks pass.

Three weeks will see apple stocks exhausted as the movement is now.

Alfalfa hay is weak and barley easy excepting fancy grades, which are firmly held.

No changes are quoted in any cereals.

Live poultry is exceedingly scarce. Fine young stock would sell above quotations.

Fresh fish of all kinds are scarce. The demand will be active all the current week.

Butter is generally lower. Dairy is slow at over 40 cents, and the best northern creamery can be sold here at a profit at 50 cents.

Eggs are firm at 17 cents. The demand is active and will be all the current week, then it will be less. Receipts up to the close were not free.

Cheese is firm, and not likely to decline immediately.

Honey is pretty nearly out of producers' hands. A carload here and there is still held above the market.

Beans are quiet, unchanged.

There is every prospect for a fine crop of beans next fall.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—There was a good deal of activity in today's market, but it was congested in a few stocks. St. Paul was the favorite and there was some demand for Union Pacific. The action of the wheat market gave a hopeful feeling regarding winter wheat, but it is not clear why St. Paul should be picked for the leader on that score.

The receipt of a favorable bank statement was a factor in buying, but the traders took profits in St. Paul before the appearance of that document, perhaps on confirmation a few minutes in advance, that it would disappoint expectations. The early market for railroad stocks was firm, in sympathy with St. Paul and weakened with it, but the total range was very moderate. The active specialties were irregular, but mainly reactionary. Those that were strong lost a good part of their gains. The market closed irregular.

There have been some extraordinary price movements this week among stocks which are rarely traded in to a large extent. The movement has been especially conspicuous among stocks that are closely held at high prices by the class of holders who keep aloof from the stock market and pay little attention to the price movements, but hold their shares through advances and declines. Such movements are viewed with suspicion by experienced traders, because they are easy to manipulate, owing to the small floating supply of the shares in the market. This feeling is emphasized when low-grade, non-dividend-paying stocks with no known prospect of early dividends, share in the movement, while the large mass of important representative stocks, are left neglected and sluggish. That has been the state of affairs in the stock market during the past week. The neglect of the standard stocks is, in fact, accentuated by the erratic movements of the less prominent stocks. It is very notable, however, that while there is almost no demand for stocks there is a marked disinclination to sell, so that prices are remarkably firm. The week's price changes are mostly gains, although small ones. This firmness of undertone in the market is attributable variously to the confidence in the future prosperity of business conditions and to the fact that the bulk of securities are held by powerful capitalists and syndicates, as the proceeds of organizations and reorganizations who have adequate means to hold them and bide their time for favorable opportunity to market them.

The actual promise for the outcome of the year is in the normal period of doubt and development. This is undoubtedly the real season for the dullness and neglect of the stock market, which is only varied in years of extraordinary conditions, such as those of last year. The critical period of the growth of the country's great staple crops is always a period of hesitation and cautious speculation. The outcome of the winter wheat crop is looked to with especial interest this year, owing to the shortcomings of last year's crop in the winter wheat belt. The rains of last week in the Southwest have been taken as a promise of a favorable outcome and have helped to keep the market for stocks firm. The current returns of railroad earnings from that region are showing the effects of last year's short crop in the falling off in traffic. The obstruction to railroad traffic in the Northwest by snowstorms has ben partly offset by the belief that the coming crop there is favored by the snow.

The usual spring settlement of labor questions are a repressive influence on speculation. They are brought into prominence by the convention of mine workers at Shamokin and the differences with operators disclosed. The agreement with the textile workers in the New England mills was a helpful factor. The iron and steel outlook is regarded as highly encouraging, although authorities in the trade have been inclined to deprecate urgent buying for future delivery, and the difficulties of securing raw material and transportation of finished products are complained of.

But the condition of the money market alone would account for the dullness of speculation. The enormous credit commitments of the country are due in part to the large tie-up of capital in syndicate projects and in part to the great activity in business. The low surplus reserves which result make the market sensitive to demands upon reserves for the needs of circulation. The country's large indebtedness to lenders, makes our money market vulnerable as well to the exigencies of foreign markets. Large government loan operations in prospect there are beginning to have an effect. The Russian loan announced this week of over $90,000,000, to be subscribed for in Russia, Germany and Holland, was something of a surprise to the financial world and leaves behind it a large Russian loan to be placed in Paris. The week's fall in British consols is in anticipation of the coming British loan to provide for the coming year's war needs in South Africa, and it is not regarded so certainly as the last requirement for that purpose as was the case some weeks ago. Foreign money markets are hardening under this influence, and a high money rate here is all that wards off further demands upon us for gold. Finally, the suspension of the Secretary of the Treasury's offer to redeem government bonds removes a safety valve from the money market which has been relied upon for relief in any possible time of pressure and which has been a sentimental influence in keeping confidence, even when it was not availed of. The conviction is general that if money stringency is to be avoided it must be by avoiding extensions of credits in stock market speculation.

Some of the semi-speculative bond issues have been in active demand during the week, but the general market was rather dull and irregular. United States bonds were all unchanged as compared with the closing of last week.

WEEKLY BANK STATEMENT.

SLIGHTLY OUT OF HARMONY.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—The Financier says: "The statement of the New York Associated Banks last week showed a gain of $358,350 in surplus reserve, which, though small, may be regarded as satisfactory from the borrower's standpoint. The surplus now is $3,411,350, or $6,501,175 below the amount at the corresponding date last year, when it was $10,272,425. This loss in cash shown by last week's statement was $2,425,500. This considerably varied from the sum which was estimated from the traceable movements of money during the week, and the difference compared with the estimated amount was probably due to remittances to Boston and Philadelphia of gold certificates through the mail. The loans were reduced $7,777,000, making $22,149,000 for the fortnight ending with last week. This comparatively sharp contraction of loans would seem to indicate commendable conservatism on the part of bank managers, in view of present monetary conditions, and those which will probably result from the movement of money to the interior for farming purposes, which is now actively in progress. The deposits were reduced $11,135,400, which, together with the reduction of $21,296,700, as shown on March 15, makes a decrease in this item of $32,432,100 during the fortnight. The reduction in deposits last week was $932,900 larger than the total of the loss of cash and of the decrease in loans, therefore the statement is slightly out of harmony. The reduction of $2,783,850 in reserve requirements resulted in the gain of $358,350 in surplus, as above stated. It is noteworthy that in the corresponding week last year the loans were only $2,174,000 less than those reported last week, while the deposits were $27,223,700, and the total cash $13,607,100 greater. Five of the downtown banks last week reported a total reduction of $6,600,000 in loans out of the $7,777,000 shown by all the banks, and of these five, one indicated a decrease of about $3,200,000. Seven of the larger banks showed a net gain of $600,000 in specie. The important losses in this item by two of those banks were $5,000,000, one reporting $2,200,000 and the other $2,800,000.

THE WEEK'S TOTAL.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—The statement of the associated banks for the week ending today shows: Loans, $912,933,100, decrease, $7,777,000; deposits, $973,234,600, decrease, $11,153,400; circulation, $31,424,500, decrease, $73,400; legal tenders, $69,947,500, decrease, $67,000; specie, $176,872,400, decrease, $2,358,500; reserves, $246,779,900, decrease, $2,425,500; reserve requirements, $243,308,650, decrease, $2,783,850; surplus, $3,471,250, increase, $358,350.

London Wool Market.

LONDON, March 22.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today numbered 12,730 bales, most of which were sold to the home trade and the continent. Prices generally were unchanged, but crossbreds occasionally fell off slightly. The offerings during the present series have been 129,000 bales, of which 4500 bales were withdrawn, owing to the firmness of holders. A fair supply of Punta Arenas was offered today. Fine grades were firm, but low sorts were easier and a farthing lower.

Metal Markets.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Copper was slow of sale today but the undertone was fairly steady while prices were unchanged. Lake closed at 12 to 12⅛, and electrolytic and casting at 12 to 12¼. Tin was about steady with a moderate jobbing demand, but there was no speculative inquiry. Spot was quoted at 26¾@27. Lead was steady and unchanged at 4⅛, and spelter was firm at 4.35. Iron ruled steady. Pig iron warrants were nominal. No. 1 foundry, 18.50@19.50.

Cotton Market.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Cotton close, 6@17 points lower.

LIVERPOOL, March 22.—Cotton, uplands, 4 13-16d.

Exports and Imports.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The imports of specie this week were $43,741 gold and $14,728 silver. Exports of specie from this port to all countries aggregated $65,307 gold and $476,390 silver. The imports of dry goods and merchandise at the port of New York for this week were valued at $10,548,390.

London Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The Commercial Advertiser's London financial cablegram says: "The stock market was quiet and irregular but generally steady. The attendance on the floor of the exchange was small, owing to the university boat race. Consols were easy at 93⅝. American shares were idle but firm. St. Paul, Atchison and Illinois Central were higher, but still below parity. Rio Tintos were weak at 42⅝."

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, March 22.—There was nothing but bear talk from start to finish in the wheat pit. The opening was very weak on confirmation of the rains in the Southwest and additional showers in the West and Northwest. Cables also were weak and turned weaker as the day advanced. Receipts both local and Northwestern were still small, but this influence, together with that of some fair early export trade, was lost sight of in the mad rush to throw stuff overboard. Bulls were nearly in a panic. There was a general desire to sell both by shorts and longs. May opened ⅝@¾ to ⅞@1 lower at 73c to 72⅝. May touched 72½ after the early rush quieted down. Shorts here began taking profits and the market steadied, though there was still a marked bearish feeling prevalent. Then corn, which was very weak at the start, turned still weaker, and May was dropped to 71⅝. May continued very weak and closed 1⅝@1¾ depressed at 72c. This price is the lowest for May since early in October.

Corn took a headlong tumble at the opening. Nearly every house on the floor had selling orders and stop loss orders were soon reported. May opened ¼ to ⅜ lower, at 59⅝ to 59⅛ and sagged to 58¼ before it steadied on profit-taking by the bears. It sold off again, touching 58⅛, and hung very heavy, closing weak, 2¼ lower, at that figure.

From the start oats ruled weak in sympathy with wheat and corn. May closed weak, 1½ lower at 41⅜.

Provisions early developed a very strong tone in the face of the grain weakness. Toward the close, however, when the big break came in corn, provisions lost some of their gains and closed only about steady. May pork 2½ lower, lard a shade higher and ribs 2½ up.

The leading futures closed as follows:

LOS ANGELES TAKES CUP.

INTER-CLUB GOLF VICTORY.

The closing matches in the golf tournament, in which teams of four men each from Los Angeles, Pasadena, Redlands and Riverside participated, were played yesterday on the Pachappa links, Riverside. The total score by points for the two days' play follows: Los Angeles, 24; Riverside, 14; Pasadena, 13; Redlands, 4.

In yesterday's matches the Los Angeles players defeated the Redlands team by 12 points, and Riverside beat Pasadena by 2 points. Los Angeles wins the cup.

BASEBALL.

HIGH SCHOOL LOSES.

The Throop Institute ball team beat the Los Angeles High School team at Pasadena yesterday by a score of 10 to 7.

The Los Angeles ball club played a practice game yesterday at the Chutes grounds with the St. Vincent nine. The State leaguers showed up well. McPartlin, Slagle, Hartwell and Waddel took turns at pitching, but Waddell was knocked out in one round, a pitched ball hitting him on the back of the head.

SCHEDULE ARRANGED.

The schedue of games for the present season of the State League was received here yesterday and will be published in full tomorrow morning. According to it San Francisco will play 197 games, of which 98 will be at home; Los Angeles 185, of which 98 at home; Oakland 199, of which 46 at home, and Sacramento 184, of which 53 at home. The season opens April 5 and closes December 7, and San Francisco and Los Angeles will open and close at home, playing against Sacramento and Oakland, respectively.

OUR HOUSEWIFE WANTS RECIPES FOR MAKING COOKIES.

For the Best One Sent to "The Times" Before Wednesday Next, $5 Reward Will Be Paid.

The Household Editor of The Times wants, for the benefit of all its readers, the very best recipe for making cookies that any living person knows about, and for the best one received before Wednesday next will pay $5 in cash.

The recipes should be carefully and legibly written, on but one side of the paper, and as tersely worded as is consistent with clearness.

A number of them—those that seem to be worthiest—will be printed in The Times of Thursday morning, after which a week will be allowed for determining which one of these is the best, the decision being left to a popular vote, particulars concerning which will be explained in these columns in due season.

The result will be announced in The Times one week after the recipes first appear in the paper, and the prize of $5 will then be due and payable.

The widest competition is solicited, and the award will be made entirely on merit.

It is fully expected that some wonderful ways of making the toothsome cooky will be developed, and that every California household, and especially every California youngster, will be thereby a gainer.

Remember, all recipes must be in The Times office before noon of Wednesday, March 26. Address communications to

HOUSEHOLD EDITOR,
Los Angeles Times.

P. S.—Recipes, when first published in The Times, will be designated by numbers, instead of by the names of the persons furnishing them. That is, they will be numbered, in the order received at the Times office—No. 1, No. 2, and so on. This precaution is taken against the possible danger that the prestige of a name might unduly influence the voting. The names will be supplied after the award has been made.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Remarkable Remedy That Quickly Restores Lost Vigor to Men.

A Free Trial Package Sent by Mail to All Who Write.

Free trial packages of a most remarkable remedy are being mailed to all who will write the State Medical Institute. They cured so many men who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of lost vitality that the Institute has decided to distribute free trial packages to all who write. It is a home treatment, and all men who suffer from any form of sexual weakness resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, or weak back, can now cure themselves at home.

The remedy has a peculiarly grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, giving strength and development just where it is needed. It cures all the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has been an absolute success in all cases. A request to the State Medical Institute, 502 Elektron Building, Fort Wayne, Ind., stating that you desire one of their free trial packages will be complied with promptly. The Institute is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to be cured of sexual weakness when the proper remedies are employed. The Institute makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that its recipient need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

OIL EXCITEMENT STRIKES PRESCOTT.

DETERMINED TEST TO BE MADE IN ARIZONA FIELD.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange Put on Airs Yesterday—Summary of Closing Quotations—San Francisco Oil and Mining Stocks.

The first carload of material for a well-boring outfit to be used for prospecting alleged oil lands within fifteen miles of Prescott, Ariz., arrived there yesterday. It consists of timbers for derrick, framed ready to be put up. The boiler, engine and boring tools are expected in a few days. Douglas, Lacey & Co. of New York are behind the enterprise and announce that the field will be thoroughly prospected, as it has been favorably reported on by several experts. Preparations for sinking a well have created considerable excitement and a large scope of country has been located.

STRICTLY RELIABLE

Specialists for Men
We Guarantee
TO CURE

Weakness and diseases of Men. We treat absolutely nothing but genito-urinary diseases of the male, such as Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Wasting Drains, Loss of Vital Force, Nervous and Chronic Diseases, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, Hydrocele, Stricture and all contracted diseases.

Contracted Disorders.

Every case of contracted disease I treat is thoroughly cured. My patients have no relapses. When I pronounce a case cured there is not a particle of infection, or inflammation remaining, and there is not the slightest danger that the disease will return in its original form, or work its way into the general system. No contracted disorder is so trivial as to warrant uncertain methods of treatment, and I specially solicit those cases that other doctors have been unable to cure.

Stricture.

Our permanent cure of stricture is accomplished by our own local Ozo-Chemic method by completely dissolving and removing the mass of contracted tissue known as stricture; and we guarantee you no pain or inconvenience whatever.

Our Treatment.

First, we make an unerring diagnosis, without which successful treatment is impossible. Then by our special local process the diseased centers are relieved and cured. Vitality and complete strength at once return.

No cure can be effected without the cure of the diseased local conditions, brought about by a correct diagnosis and strictly scientific local treatment. Our OZO-CHEMIC process for curing local diseased conditions and contracted disorders of the reproductive organs in the male is our own; controlled and used only by us.

We will send free on application our 40-page Medical Journal, and colored plates describing fully the different diseases we cure.

[NEWS REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.]

NEW ORDER OF THINGS IN SAN BERNARDINO.

MAJORITY RULE PREVAILS IN THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Body Formerly Dominated by Its Chairman Suddenly Calls the Turn on the Mayor, Who Signs Papers Within Stipulated Time.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 22.—Things in the City Board of Trustees have undergone a sudden and startling change. Hitherto, President Hanford has practically dominated the doings of the body, but last Tuesday night the other four members sprung a surprise and took the Mayor unawares by voting to enter into a contract for another year with the electric light company for lighting the streets. They also voted in favor of paying the bill for electric lights for February, amounting to about $300. The Mayor disapproved of both propositions, and expressed his determination to sign neither the contract nor the order in payment of the bill. At a special meeting of the board last evening, Mr. Hanford was given to understand that if he did not sign the papers, he would be mandamused and impeached. After warm words had passed, the City Attorney, by direction of Trustee Wixom, prepared the following:

"Resolved, that the president and secretary of this board be, and they are hereby directed, to execute the contract now in the hands of said secretary, the same having been already executed on the part of the San Bernardino Gas and Electric Company, by its president, W. S. Hooper, and its secretary, E. W. Boxall, and providing for furnishing the city with electric street arc lights for one year, from April 1, next."

When asked whether he still refused to sign the contract, the Mayor intimated that he was not prepared to sign it just then. Trustee Wixom asked the City Attorney what would be a reasonable time to allow the Mayor, and the Attorney thought about twenty-four hours. Then the meeting adjourned. If Hanford had not signed within the twenty-four hours, the other Trustees proposed to make it red hot for him, but he affixed his signature to the contract and warrant this afternoon, and temporary peace prevails.

SAN BERNARDINO BREVITIES.

Col. John Feudge, who was recently taken to the Highland Asylum, was removed to his home on East Sixth street yesterday. He is partially paralyzed, and his death seems to be a question of only a few days. He is a veteran of the Civil War, and a member of the G.A.R. Post.

Arrowhead Parlor, No. 110, N.S.G.W., has elected the following delegates to the Grand Parlor, which will meet next month at Santa Cruz: J. E. Rich, R. E. Swing, W. E. Keir. W. D. Wagner will attend as Grand Trustee.

Rev. Isaac Jewell has returned from a trip on the desert with a party of friends, who went to inspect mining property near Salton.

Mrs. P. J. Chase left yesterday for Boston, where she was called by the serious illness of her sister.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Young died yesterday of pneumonia.

A regular night force resumed work at the Santa Fé shops yesterday.

Mrs. C. J. Gould of Los Angeles is visiting Mrs. J. G. Wood.

Mrs. W. G. Clute is visiting friends in Los Angeles.

Miss Georgia Kendall is visiting friends in Ontario.

J. W. Pell died here yesterday; aged 31 years.

REDLANDS.

BURGLARS ACTIVE.

REDLANDS, March 22.—Burglars are still at work here. Friday night the residence of P. Olesen was entered from the porch roof by opening one of the windows. The thief employed the same methods, and came at the same time as those who have been working at other houses. The family was at dinner, a little after 6 o'clock. A noise was heard in the room above, and one of the boys, Oscar Olesen, rushed upstairs and almost into the arms of the thief.

The intruder jumped for the window, and scrambled off the porch. People on the street heard the boy's shout, and, seeing the man running, thought the house was afire. The thief made good his escape before the police were notified. He was described as rather large, with dark complexion and black hair. He wore dark clothes.

The store of Brown & Seehorn, on Citrus avenue, was broken into Friday night, and several suits of clothes and a number of hats were taken away.

REDLANDS BREVITIES.

Twenty-two carloads of oranges were shipped today. This week's shipments were the largest for the season, amounting to 131 carloads. This brings the total shipments for the season to 1413 carloads. Last season's shipments to this date amount to 1535 carloads.

The rights of way for the new boulevard over the hills in the southeast part of the city, have all been secured, and the road building is progressing steadily. A number of teams are employed on the eminence known as Heron Hill, and it is expected that that part of the drive will be completed by the end of next week. The drive will be about seven miles long, and will command an excellent view.

Mrs. Nutter, wife of Frank W. Nutter, died Friday night at her home on East State street, after a lingering illness, aged 41. She was a native of New Hampshire. She was an active worker in several social and benevolent enterprises. The funeral, at the residence Sunday afternoon, will be private.

Miss Essie M. Ames of Craftonville left this morning for San Francisco to finish her studies in elocution and oratory. Her aunt, Mrs. Vada Johnson, accompanies her.

W. C. Hargraves returned today from Santa Barbara, where he had been for several weeks.

Hon. W. S. Williams of Berkeley, who has been a guest of J. H. Logie for several days, left this afternoon for his home.

L. G. Harvey of Forest Home, Mill Creek Cañon, is here today. He reports a rapid fall of snow, and says the ground was covered when he left there early this morning.

Tourists, attention! The Club Stables are the people who took President McKinley over the drive. We give all tourists the McKinley drive for $1 each. Beware of solicitors on the train. Our carriages meet all trains. Telephone 421. Singleton & Haskell, proprietors.

Redlands Trust Company takes entire charge of fruit property. Thorough work done under careful supervision. Ranches kept in the best condition. Fixed reasonable charges.

Spoor's Drug Store employs registered pharmacists only. Take your prescriptions there.

Try a loaf of bread from the Vienna Bakery. Always sweet, white and wholesome.

Alexander's peanut brittle is a toothsome dainty. Fresh stock always on hand.

F. B. King is showing some beautiful designs in jewelry suitable for Easter gifts.

Hight & Dunn have several bargains in orange groves. See them at once.

Randall & Merriam have a tasty display of new dry goods for Easter.

IDYLLWILD.

THREE INCHES OF SNOW.

IDYLLWILD, March 22.—Yesterday morning the mountains and valleys were covered with three inches of snow. The sun shone brightly and in a few hours it disappeared. This is the third experience of the kind in forty days, and the streams are all full.

IDYLLWILD BREVITIES.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan McFarland and daughter have returned to Los Angeles, after a month's stay here. Miss McFarland and her aunt, Mrs. Friesner, and James Friesner occupy a cottage, and will remain indefinitely.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Monroe have returned to their home, after a two weeks' stay here.

John Gray, a prominent lumber dealer of Toronto, Canada, has been spending a few days here visiting his son.

George A. Cook, connected with one of the leading electric supply houses of Chicago, is here for a few weeks.

M. A. Kildraff, a Mendocino county lumberman, is a guest here.

Mrs. Walter Lindley and two children returned to Los Angeles today, after being here a month.

The contract for building the casino has been let to D. F. Couplin, who guarantees to have it completed May 15. The contract for the laundry machinery has been let to L. Booth & Sons, Los Angeles, and the contract for the bowling alleys has been let to the Brunswick, Balke, Collender Company. The alleys weigh over 12,000 pounds, and will be a load to haul up the hill.

HIGHLAND.

MESSENGER COMES.

HIGHLAND, March 22.—This town has a new newspaper, the Highland Messenger, which is welcomed as successor to the Citrus Belt. The Messenger is published by Edward Wall and Opie L. Warner, who have discarded the "patent inside" of the old paper and aim to devote the space to fresh local news. The new paper, four pages, is well supported by business men in San Bernardino and Redlands.

RAISED WITH A RUSH IS HOTEL BONUS.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN TWO HOURS IN RIVERSIDE.

Large Amount Will Be Expended on Casa Palma Property—College Business Block Sold—Colored Voters Organize Republican Club.

RIVERSIDE, March 22.—The $25,000 bonus for George N. Reynolds's new hotel is being raised with a rush. A committee consisting of George E. Bittinger, H. T. Hays, W. G. Fraser, S. C. Evans and H. B. Chase, representing the banks, real estate and water interests of the valley, secured $10,000 in two hours today, and the full amount of the bonus desired is assured. The price paid by Mr. Reynolds for the Casa Palma Hotel property approximates $35,000.

It is proposed to expend from $50,000 to $75,000, enlarging and improving the hotel and on furnishings. The front will be entirely rebuilt, transforming it into the Mission style of architecture. The Ninth-street wing will be extended to the alley, and a new wing built on the alley. A basement will be constructed, where will be located the heating apparatus and elevator shaft. The whole interior of the hotel will be remodeled. There will be from thirty-five to forty suites, with baths, and over a hundred sleeping rooms. Inclosed by the wings will be a court, which will be made attractive with tropical plants and flowers.

Thus is solved the problem of a modern tourist hotel, something Riversiders have long been pleading for, but which would never have materialized as long as one man held a monopoly of the business, had not Mr. Reynolds taken up the matter, solely out of public spirit.

BUSINESS BLOCK SOLD.

Another important real estate deal was consummated yesterday, by which S. C. Evans, Jr., and P. T. Evans purchased from George N. Reynolds the College business block on the east side of Main street, between Seventh and Eighth, the consideration being $34,000. By this purchase, the Messrs. Evans come into possession of nearly all the property on the east side of Main street, between Seventh and Eighth. If the purchase of the Lloyd Block is effected a hallway will be cut through from the Evans Block, corner of Elizabeth street, to the Rubidoux Block, corner of Seventh.

RIVERSIDE BREVITIES.

At a meeting of colored voters held Thursday evening, a colored Republican club was organized. W. H. Reagan was elected president, and N. H. Williams, secretary. An Executive Committee was appointed, consisting of S. H. Goodwin, D. S. Stokes and W. H. Reagan. The candidates for city officers were discussed, but no indorsements were made.

The members of the real estate firm of Bettner & Osburn of this city are receiving congratulations on the success attending their efforts in putting through the million-dollar land deal in Ventura county, which was described at length in yesterday's issue of The Times. It is one of the largest land transactions ever consummated in Southern California.

The Riverside Water Company has entered into a contract with Ambrose Hunt to sink wells on the latter's land lying four miles southeast of San Bernardino. Mr. Hunt is to receive one-third of the water developed, free of expense, and twenty inches must be guaranteed to him, provided his third of the water developed does not amount to that much.

The Riverside-Highland Water Company yesterday sold the $50,000 worth of bonds recently voted for the purpose of buying up bonds of the East Riverside Irrigation District, improving the plant, increasing the water system and paying off all outstanding indebtedness.

The Y.M.C.A. gymnasium contests were run off last evening before a number of enthusiastic spectators. Some of the boys made a very creditable showing, and promise to develop into athletes of the first order.

The Security Savings Bank has brought suit in foreclosure against Eugene L. Kimball and the Perris Valley Bank to enforce payment of a note for $2100, executed April 1, 1896, which with interests, amounts to $3784.90.

Minerve Christmas was yesterday granted a decree of divorce from Frank C. Christmas in Judge Noyes's court. The case went by default.

The Modern Woodmen gave a box social and dance last night at Odd Fellows' Hall.

A quantity of new and modern furniture for the High School has arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. White left today for a month's stay in Los Angeles.

Alex McCrary has returned from an extended eastern trip.

J. R. Hillery of Dawson City is a guest of E. A. Day.

CORONA.

CONTRACTORS' TROUBLES.

CORONA, March 22.—The sub-contractor on the Temescal Water Company's tunnel at Temescal, notified the company Friday that, not having received money due from the contractor for work completed, he would hold the company responsible for the payment for all work hereafter. The contractor has been paid all sums due on the contract, but he says he will enter suit against the company for the collection of $1875 for extra work, that he claims is not in the contract, although the company holds that it is.

BUSINESS MEN ORGANIZE.

The Business Men's Association of Corona was organized Tuesday evening, with the following-named officers: George Austin, president; E. A MacGillivray, vice-president; G. R. Freeman, secretary; A. Ware, treasurer. George Austin, G. R. Freeman, Frank Geith, P. S. Gruendike and A. J. Smiley constitute the Executive Committee.

SANTA ANA.

ESCAPED PRISONER CAUGHT.

SANTA ANA, March 22.—Thomas Davis, who was sent to the County Jail from Anaheim for vagrancy proves to be Thomas Moran, who escaped about two years ago from the Preston Institute at Ione. Jailer Graham was suspicious of Davis and, believing that the man was living under an assumed name, he searched the criminal records with a view to locating him. Finding evidence that the man was from Ione the officials of that institution were notified. An officer was sent from there, and he will return north with Moran Sunday.

VENTURA COUNTY.

STABBER SAVED VICTIM.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VENTURA, March 22.—The Williams-Clarke stabbing case has reached an interesting point, and in all probability there will be no trial. When brought before Justice Boling the prisoner stated that he had no attorney or money to employ one, and further that he wasn't sure that he desired one, even if he possessed the necessary means. He expressed his willingness to accompany the District Attorney and judge to the County Hospital where he would make a statement before Clarke for the latter's corroboration. This was done. According to the story then told by Williams, there was a war of words at the table and the lie was passed. A few minutes later Williams went outside and got a lantern, and having extinguished it, was in the act of hanging up the lantern, when Clarke passed through the doorway and struck Williams with his fist. The latter then carved his assailant in the back with his pocket-knife. Clarke admits the attacks and declares that he will not prosecute. It was told and admitted how Williams turned around and aided his victim, staunching the blood and binding up the wound. Clarke said that without this assistance he would have bled to death.

VENTURA BREVITIES.

John D. McCarthy died at the hospital yesterday morning. He was the foreman of the Sexton ranch, east of this city. He leaves a widow and three children, and a brother in San Francisco.

The Native Daughters' Improvement Club has received the deed to a strip of land upon which stands one of the historic palm trees. This property was deeded by Bishop Montgomery for palm-tree park purposes. It is about forty feet square. The second tree stands upon the property of Mrs. Solari, with whom the Native Daughters have not yet made satisfactory arrangements.

MRS. MASCAREL'S DEATH.

One of the links of the old Spanish family connections of Los Angeles was broken yesterday by the death of Mrs. Jesus Felis de Mascarel, widow of the late José Mascarel, well known as one of the wealthy Spanish-American citizens, who died in 1899. He left a will over which there was a protracted litigation, and the fight for his large estate was so bitter that much attention was attracted to the case at the time. The estate eventually went to his heirs—two daughters, one son and six children of a deceased daughter. Mrs. Jesus Felis de Mascarel was a second wife, and though a native of Mexico, has long ben identified with the Spanish life of Los Angeles. She died at the family residence, No. 615 Ducommun steet. The funeral will be held from the house tomorrow at 8:30 o'clock a.m. and requiem mass will be celebrated in the Plaza church.

THIEF WANTED NO JEWELS.

A burglar entered the room of J. A. Fisher in a lodging-house at No. 138 North Hill street, early Friday morning, and took $2 from a trouser's pocket. Fisher and his wife awoke while the thief was at work, but remained quiet when the marauder drew a revolver. While Fisher and his wife looked into the muzzle of the gun, the thief continued his search for money, scorning to take a quantity of jewelry that was in plain sight. The man, who was masked, left the room quietly, and his victims devoted their attention to a sick baby, the awakening of whom seemed the only thing that concerned them during the operations of the burglar.

TO MAKE OCEAN SALT.

The San Pedro Salt Company is about to establish a large solar salt manufacturing plant on the lands west of Long Beach. A tract occupying over 1000 acres, it is said, has been selected for that purpose, and a large number of men are to start on the construction of tanks within a few days. It is understood that the salt will be manufactured from sea water pumped into big tanks.

BANKRUPT FARMER.

T. W. Standart, a farmer of Lemoore, Kings county, and his wife, Mary S. Standart, yesterday filed petitions in bankruptcy in the United States District Court here. The former's debts amount to $15,022, with assets of $2350, the larger amount of which is claimed exempted. Mrs. Standart states her liabilities as $10,727, with assets of $1520, all of which is claimed exempted.

MAYOR JONES PLEADS WITH UNION MEN.

"GOLDEN RULE" THE BEST LAW FOR DAILY LIFE.

Hobos and Idle Rich Equally Deserving of Pity and Work the Blessing of the Race—Hazard's Pavilion Well Filled.

Once hear Samuel M. Jones talk and it is easy to understand why the plain and modest little Mayor of Toledo, O., is nationally famous as "Golden Rule" Jones.

The chilly atmosphere and hard benches of Hazard's Pavilion did not cause one person in the audience of 1500 to leave during the hour that Mayor Jones spoke, so rapt was the attention held and so deep the interest and enthusiasm aroused. The meeting had been postponed one week on account of the Mayor's illness, and his thin face and frequent cough show he is still far from a well man.

The only untoward incident of the evening was a typically-rabid union speech by Editor Rogers, who wanted it distinctly understood that the meeting was under the auspices of the Council of Labor. The audience contained many union workingmen, but outside of the violent utterances of Rogers, unionism was scarcely mentioned. Mayor Jones referred to it but once, jokingly, and his speech was peculiarly appropriate for union ears. It was a sermon pointing to high ideals for the individual and for the nation; urging honesty, kindness, tolerance, forgiveness and regard for the rights of others; condemning brutality selfishness, greed, revenge and punishment; and recommending the "Golden Rule" as the law by which to guide our daily lives.

Mayor Jones is not an orator; his power is in his earnestness and sincerity. His speech was interspersed with numerous appropriate gems of poesy, inimitably recited, and all of them lending pathos to his word-pictures of the sad phases of our modern civilization. He did not denounce the predatory, or idle rich, but pitied them, and the world for its loss of their great possible usefulness. He believes the "Golden Rule" furnishes a scientific method of dealing with his fellowmen. After repeating a little rhyme entitled "Be Glad You're Poor," written by a wage-slave of a newspaper man in Toledo, the speaker said:

"I learn by the 'Golden Rule' that the best things in this world can't be bought; you can't buy happiness, you can't buy health, nor education. If you're rich you can drive about in rubber-tired carriages, eat twelve-course dinners and all that, but suddenly off you go with a stroke of apoplexy. The poor man is to be envied; he works his eight hours a day, keeps his circulation good, and enjoys his food and sleep without a care of mind of conscience. We must disabuse ourselves of this idea that the rich are all right and we are all wrong.

"The idle rich present just as pathetic a spectacle as the loafer, the bum or the tramp. Both classes represent lost souls and both are parasites on society, because they live by the labor of others. There is no real wealth but human life, and the capacity for producing useful and beautiful things for the progress and uplifting of the world. The most important thing in education is to know how to work. Many rich children are denied the great privilege of work."

Mayor Jones declared himself as opposed to punishment and in favor of restraint, only. He said no offender had ever been uplifted by punishment and told pathetic stories of the seamy side of life in the big cities. At the close of his address, Mayor Jones was given an ovation.

In response to the audience's insistent applause N. O. Nelson, the co-operative manufacturer of St. Louis spoke briefly.

CLINTON UNAUTHORIZED.

Directors of Stimson-Lafayette Industrial School State That He No Contract of Any Kind With Them.

DeWitt Clinton, who was arrested Friday, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, had no authority to solicit funds for the Stimson-Lafayette Industrial School, directors of that school state. No contract, verbal or written, it is said, was entered into with him, and he took advantage of his opportunity to hoodwink business men and others into subscribing, as they thought, for the benefit of a worthy institution, while he was, in fact, obtaining funds that would enrich himself, principally.

"Mr. Clinton came to my house shortly before the annual board meeting in January," said one of the directors yesterday, "and asked permission to publish the annual report, saying he would solicit advertisements to pay for the printing, and that he would divide any surplus with the school, and we would make at least $200 out of it.

"He presented a card bearing his name, and 'The Saturday Post' printed in one corner. He said he was employed on that paper and that was a guarantee of his reliability. I had no authority to make any arrangement, but told him he might appear before the board and present his proposition. He did so, and while the board debated the question, he waited at the foot of the stairs to learn their decision.

"He finally was told to draw up a plan of what he intended to do; their idea being that a written contract should be entered into. Mr. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, would not indorse Clinton, and advised that his proposition be given no consideration, showing that the scheme was dangerous. We took his tip. Members of the Advisory Board of the school also advised that the matter be dropped, and the secretary was instructed to advise Clinton to that effect. Clinton had said his address could be obtained through the office of the Saturday Post, and two days later notice was left there that we wished to consult with him.

"Nothing was heard from this, but Clinton finally was reached by telephone and told that the matter was dropped. He then asked permission to meet the chairman of the board, to whom he said he had incurred some expense in printing, and that he had collected $25 in $5 checks. He was told that he was not expected to do this, and replied that he was a young man who didn't let the grass grow under his feet.

"He exhibited the checks and was told he might retain them until members of the committee had been consulted. A week later he was told the bill he had incurred for printing would be paid, if it were reasonable, and that the board would return the checks to the subscribers. The time was set for him to accompany the chairman of the committee on a visit to the subscribers of the $25 in checks, but the next morning a telephone message from Clinton brought the information that he was sick and could not leave his room. He promised to send notice as soon as he was able to venture out, and he also said the bill for the printing was $7. Nothing more was heard from him until two weeks ago, when it was learned that he was soliciting more funds. Steps then were taken to have his operations stopped."

ORPHANS' HOME RECEPTION.

The Los Angeles Orphans' Home, at the corner of Yale and Alpine streets, will give a reception next Tuesday afternoon and evening, to which the public is cordially invited. The committee having the affair in charge consists of Mmes. J. S. Chapman, W. G. Kerckhoff, C. B. Woodhead, William Pridham, J. H. F. Peck, T. D. Connelly and T. J. Barkley.

ACTRESS MADE A STAR BY HYPNOTISM

Under the Strange Spell She Carried the Audience by Storm—Famous in a Night.

Dr. John D. Quackenbos, professor in Columbia University, New York, astonished his associates of the Medico-Legal Society the other night by telling them how a young actress bounded into fame in a single night under the hypnotic spell. It is the case of a Trilby in real life; not the trick of a charlatan, but a sober, actual accomplishment of latter-day science. The new Trilby is a favorite with theatergoers. Her first appearance on the stage was made at a New York theater, when, under the hypnotic spell, she carried the audience by storm; she was called before the curtain again and again—at a bound she was famous. The press of the city united in applauding her splendid work. This is only one of the many marvels of this wonderful power. The American College of Sciences of Philadelphia has recently issued a new book by twenty eminent hypnotic specialists which is being distributed free throughout the country for the purpose of educating and protecting the public. It is one of the most weird and fascinating works ever written. It is richly illustrated with the finest engravings, and its vivid descriptions of the practical uses and possibilities of this marvelous mind-power fill one with awe and amazement. Among the many intensely interesting subjects treated are: How to hypnotize instantaneously; how to influence a person secretly without his knowledge; how to develop Personal Magnetism and use it in business, society, etc.; power of the human will; how to cure the most obstinate diseases and bad habits by magnetic forces without drugs or medicines; how to make people like you; how to win in business, in society, in love; anyone can develop personal magnetism; rules which will absolutely develop this power within a short time; the transmission of thought; the development of soul power; how to make a business man listen to you when he would send any one else away; how to sell a man goods when he does not want to buy; a legitimate way to double your salary; how to keep people from influencing you; hundreds secretly influenced and controlled in body and mind without their knowledge; how to implant a suggestion or command in a subjects' mind that he will carry out a week, month or a year hence, just as the hypnotist may wish; how to hypnotize by mail or by telephone; how to develop within yourself that inward power, that force of character, which instantly gives you a control over people without saying a word or making a single gesture. For the benefit of the public we wish to state that if you will write the American College of Sciences, Dept. 11J., 420 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., a copy of the above book will be sent to you by mail absolutely free of charge. The college guarantees this offer to be absolutely genuine, with no conditions attached. It is proposed to give away several thousands of copies of the book so that the public may learn the wonderful secrets of this marvelous but much misunderstood science.

That Tired Feeling
Is a Common Spring Trouble.

It's a sign that the blood is deficient in vitality, just as pimples and other eruptions are signs that the blood is impure.

It's a warning, too, which only the hazardous fail to heed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove it, give new life, new courage, strength and animation.

They cleanse the blood and clear the complexion.

Accept no substitute.

"I felt tired all the time and could not sleep. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a while I could sleep well and the tired feeling had gone. This great medicine has also cured me of scrofula." MRS. C. M. ROOT, Gilead, Conn.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

FOR SALE—
DO YOU USE WOOD?
We are strictly first hands, running a gang of fifty choppers in the timber.
We can offer you best live oak wood in lots of one to one thousand cords, at the following low prices, f.o.b. Los Angeles:
Best live oak, stove wood, 12 in. in length, $8 per cord.
Best live oak, blocks for heating stoves and grates, $8 per cord.
Best live oak, 4-foot wood, $7.50 per cord.
Remember, live oak is worth 50 per cent. more than white oak, sold by many retail yards.
Remember, also, that we give 12-inch wood instead of 9 and 10-inch sticks, thus we offer 20 per cent. more wood for a cord.
We will sell you one cord or as much as you wish.
These are wholesale prices, on which we must have ten days' notice for shipment from the forest.

WE ARE INCORPORATING AND PLACing on the market a new patent-medicine company; the medicine has been manufactured and sold in Los Angeles and surrounding towns for many years; possesses unquestioned merit and can be marketed very profitably; it is the intention of the promoters to advertise the medicine and place it on sale all over the country; if you have a little money to invest, it will pay you to call for full particulars. As soon as our charter is received and organization completed the stock will be offered for sale at 25c. Right now a small amount will be sold at 15c, and you don't often find an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of such a proposition as this. MERCANTILE INVESTMENT CO., 227-229-231 Byrne bldg. 23

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY FOR A MAN OR men, with business push and willing hands, to join in making a fortune. On the 4th day of this month I was granted a patent, or an improvement on an express car, but owing to my health and age, I wish to exchange one-half interest in this valuable patent, and will accept in exchange a good residence in Los Angeles or Pasadena. If interested, call at 44 S. Euclid ave., Pasadena, any time from 9 to 12 a.m., for the next ten days, or if you prefer, write, and I will meet you at any place you designate in Los Angeles in the afternoons from 2 to 4. There is not an express car in use that should not have this improvement placed on them; if done, the express-car robbing would be a thing of the past. J. E. PORTER. 23

FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT PROFIT—

THE SOLAR FURNACE.

A wonderful new invention, furnishing heat, light and power from the sun's rays for almost every purpose, either day or night, without fire, fuel or expense.

STEAM ENGINES.

For running steam engines the sun's rays are concentrated by means of curved reflectors onto a specially-built high-pressure boiler, the heat being so intense that the water is turned into steam very fast, two square yards of sunlight furnishing sufficient heat to develop one horse power, the sunlight falling on a space 44 feet square furnishing sufficient heat to run a one-hundred horse-power steam engine. Any engine can be used, but a specially-built boiler is necessary. The reflector is mounted on a revolving base and moved by a clock-work attachment that keeps it in focus with the sun all day long.

PUMPING PLANTS.

The Solar Furnace will revolutionise the present irrigation system, especially in the Southwest, where water is scarce and fuel very high. Any amount of water can be pumped from either deep or shallow wells; no fuel is required, and when a plant is once installed the expense is ended. On all pumping plants requiring over five horse-power, a steam engine is used, the steam being generated by the heat of the sun, as above stated. On plants of five horse-power or less a "hot-air" engine with pump attachment is used. No fire, fuel, steam or water is used; nothing but sunlight and air. It is impossible for it to "blow up" or explode. It works automatically, and no engineer is required. Any ten-year-old boy can start it, and when once started it requires no further attention, but will go on pumping water as long as the sun shines.

A small plant may be made to pump sufficient water for a large tract by having reservoir and running the pump every day when the sun shines, using the water only as neded.

SMELTING ORES AND MINERALS.

Any and all kinds of minerals can be melted, or literally "burned up," if desired. A single yard square of sunlight will melt silver, copper, brass, gold, glass or wrought iron to a liquid, while only two yards square of sunlight will develop heat of over 25,000 degrees, or more than one hundred times as hot as boiling water. A greater degree of heat can be developed by the Solar Furnace than has ever before been developed by the greatest scientific men in their most powerful furnaces.

Of almost priceless value to miners, as it can be built in small sections and carried (even on pack ponies) into the almost inaccessible parts of the mountains, and used for "roasting" or smelting any kind of ores or minerals, saving all expense of fuel, of hauling to railroad, and of shipping, often several hundred miles, to smelter, requiring no fuel or water, and making paying properties of hundreds of low-grade mines that are now practically worthless.

HOUSEHOLD USE.

A small plant can be installed on the roof of the house at a cost of only a few dollars. Attached to the water hydrant it works automatically and carries steam down through pipes to the kitchen, where it is attached to a steam cooker cooking a dozen different kinds of food at the same time without fire, fuel or expense, and furnishing boiling water for the bath, the laundry and all other purposes without any expense for fuel, without any attention whatever except starting it in the morning, (which is done by pulling down a lever from the ground, without going on the roof at all,) and without any dirt, smoke or ashes. For use during nights and cloudy days, electricity is stored up by power obtained from the sun during the day time, and is carried from the storage batteries on wires into the house and attached to electric lights, cooking utensils, electric heaters, etc., furnishing light to light the house, heat to heat it and to cook any and all kinds of food, even at midnight, by power obtained from the sun during the day time.

STORING HEAT AND POWER.

Electric power is generated by a steam engine run by the heat of the sun during the daytime and stored up in storage batteries to run machinery nights and cloudy days. For small power plants air is compressed during the daytime and used at night to run engine or dynamo, requiring no storage batteries.

RUNNING AUTOMOBILES AND BICYCLES.

A dynamo is attached to a steam engine run by the Solar Furnace during the daytime, generating electricity, which is stored up in the storage batteries of electric automobiles, bicycles and other electric vehicles, furnishing power to run them from the sun, either day or night without fuel or expense.

400 PER CENT. YEARLY PROFIT. ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN.

Shares now 30 cents each will be $1 in a few weeks, and $5 in less than one year.

THE SOLAR FURNACE AND POWER CO.

A corporation organized and incorporated according to the laws of Arizona, with an authorized capital of $400,000, has purchased of the inventor the entire and exclusive right to the United States for the Solar Furnace, and will manufacture them and put them on the market for all purposes above mentioned, and all other uses to which they are adapted. A small working model is on exhibition at the office daily from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., running a small engine with sunlight and air alone without fire, fuel or water.

A factory will be built in Los Angeles, and to obtain the money to begin putting up a larger plant immediately, a few thousand shares will be sold at 30 cents each, cash, or 32 cents on the installment plan, at the rate of 2 cents per share per week for sixteen weeks. $1 per week buys 50 shares, $2 per week buys 100 shares; $3 per week buys 150 shares, $5 per week buys 250 shares, $10 per week buys 500 shares, and $20 per week buys 1000 shares. Only a few thousand shares will be sold at this price, and they are going fast. As soon as a larger plant is in operation no stock will be sold for less than $1 per share.

Investigate and invest today; tomorrow may be too late. Thousands of fortunes have been made out of inventions not one ten-thousandth part as valuable as this, which is without doubt the greatest invention of this century. We have moved our office to our permanent headquarters in our new building. Call and see us or send in your order for stock by mail.

PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT.

All the work of putting up the factory, of operating it and of building and operating pumping plants, smelters and power plants in various parts of the country will be given to those of the stockholders who want the work, and no one will be employed who is not a stockholder so long as there are competent men among the stockholders who want the work. $1.75 to $5 per day will be paid for eight hours work.

For names of persons in all parts of the city and other parts of California who have investigated and bought stock, call at office or write.

"DOLLARS AND HORSE SENSE." OUR business is strictly co-operative, and as such all interested share EXACTLY THE SAME, in proportion to the amount of their investment. We pay the same dividend from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, and from Canada to Mexico, as also our foreign subscribers. Concerns who claim to operate separate pools do so for no other purpose than to pay a larger dividends in one section of the country than another (their object is readily understood.) In brief, "rob Peter to pay Paul." You may be on the "Paul" list, but you are sure to get on the "Peter" list in the long run, and it is equally as sure that you will be on the losing, or wiped out list, some day.

We never have found it necessary to employ agents, pay commissions, or resort to trickery of any kind to secure business. Our booklet, tells how we do it, and the extensive references accompanying it is only a very small proportion of the hundreds of satisfied customers who have voluntarily written us letters indorsing our methods, and verifying every claim made in our literature.

"DOLLARS AND HORSE SENSE,"

Money placed with us is always subject to your control, and earns a LARGER PROFIT EACH WEEK than any other AS SAME investment pays in six months, or savings banks pay annually. Twenty years' experience as owners and commissioners, and two years under the present co-operative plan, with a record unequaled, enables us to have legitimate financial agencies report on us, in addition to bank and other reliable references. BUSINESS OPENING—

$300 A YEAR NET PROFIT ON AN OUTLAY OF $7500.

Such an opening is very rarely offered for sale. A portion of the purchase price could be paid out of the business, but no small payment would be considered. Long lease, and central location, in Los Angeles.

This is not a mercantile business, or a speculative enterprise, nor does it require any technical knowledge. It requires only good, ordinary business abilities. We are acquainted with the business from the inside, and can recommend it as a solid investment, which has been paying regularly about 40 per cent. per annum on the price asked.

WE HAVE FOR SALE RIGHTS FOR THE States of California, Oregon and Washington for the best locked-wire fence device ever patented. The owner of the patent is a practical ranch man who has 200 miles of barb-wire fence in the Panhandle, and who is now going over the entire fence system of his ranch, putting in the stays with this locked-fence device. The device has taken like wildfire in the Eastern States. The State of Iowa alone sold for $10,000. We have samples of the device at our office, where it can be seen. The principal advantage of this fence device is that it makes a fence that is almost indestructible; no power can move the stays when put on with our patent fastener and patent wrench. If this device were adopted in California, it certainly would revolutionize fencing. The fence is cattle proof, and by putting in enough stays you can fence against the smallest animals. The device can be used on ornamental fences or for office wire work. The wrench and clips and possibly some models of the fence can be seen at the City Wire Works, on Main, between Seventh and Eighth. Mr. Biescar, the proprietor, will be glad to explain its use. MINING INVESTMENT AND BROKERAGE CO., 345 Byrne Bldg., city.

FOR SALE—

EGGS FOR HATCHING FROM UP-TO-DATE TWENTIETH CENTURY PURE THOROUGHBRED FOWLS.

OUR BIRDS ARE DIFFERENT. THEY ARE NOT LIKE THE CHICKENS THAT YOUR GRANDMOTHER RAISED.

Our 200 SINGLE-COMB BLUE LACED ANDALUSIANS are absolutely the best in America. They are as large as black Minorcas, above standard weights; hens weighing 6 to 7 pounds, and the male birds from 7 to 8½ pounds. They are strictly standard, handsome and uniform in color, and their equals have never been seen.

Our ROSE COMB BLUE ANDALUSIANS are also prize-winners.

Our 100 SILVER SPANGLED HAMBURGS are simply perfect.

Our SINGLE COMB BLACK MINORCAS are the famous Northup Strain; hens weighing 7 to 8 pounds and male birds from 8 to 11 pounds; large, handsome and elegant-looking birds.

Our ROSE COMB BLACK MINORCAS are fine.

Our several pens of WHITE CRESTED BLACK POLISH are second to none in the United States, and quite as great a utility bird as they are handsome.

Our IMPORTED ENGLISH RED CAPS are strictly first-class.

Our BARRED PLYMOUTH ROCKS are barred to the skin and up to standard weights.

Our BUFF PLYMOUTH ROCKS are pure buff, with no black or white feathers, as is usually found in others of the same breed.

Our WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS up to standard weights and are extra fine. They are pure white, not brassy as is common with others.

Our WHITE WYANDOTTES are the "stay-white" kind, of large size and the Duston Strain.

Our CORNISH INDIAN GAMES are up to date.

All of our birds are pure thoroughbred, standard and line-bred for laying.

They have won first prizes in our leading eastern shows, such as Madison Square Garden, New York; Boston, Johnstown, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago and various other places.

We have had 16 years' experience with thoroughbred poultry, and there is no better stock than the birds in our breeding pens, as they are the best that good breeding and money will produce. Among them are more high-scoring and first-prize birds than can be found elsewhere in Southern California. In addition thereto, our offices and incubator-rooms are the finest and best-equipped in this country.

We have stock for sale and eggs for hatching from 35 popular varieties.

Eggs, $1.50 to $5 per setting; $8 to $35 per hundred.

In buying either stock or eggs for hatching, wouldn't you be better pleased with the results by patronizing an experienced and successful poultryman, who knows when fowls are properly mated for best results, properly fed on the best of grains and properly housed in clean quarters, than to buy of those with little or no experience, who keep a few old hens of doubtful ancestry, dragging out a miserable existence. "A word to the wise," etc.

Cut this advertisement out and stick it up behind the clock.

As you will need it when you desire to purchase either eggs or thoroughbred stock;

It is with poultry, as with all the rest. You will be better pleased when you buy the best.

YARDS CLOSED SUNDAYS.

B. H. POTTER, importer, exporter and breeder of pure thoroughbred poultry. Offices and incubator rooms, 225 (residence 824) E. 27th st., Los Angeles, Cal. 23

FOR SALE—

EGGS THAT MUST HATCH.

WHY?

BECAUSE we not only have PRIZE-WINNING STOCK, but we have the HEALTHIEST BIRDS in Southern California; OUR BREEDERS are MATED with the UTMOST CARE and are not in pens 2x4, but in large, roomy ones, 20x86, WITH ALFALFA RUNS 20X20 IN REAR OF EACH PEN. There are also TREES which are constantly CULTIVATED; this brings WORMS, GRUBS AND OTHER LIVING MATTER to the surface; our WATER is PURE and CLEAR and COMES direct to us FROM THE MOUNTAINS; our CLIMATE is IDEAL for chicken raising; we are 300 FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL and close to foothills, avoiding FOGS, FROSTS and DAMPNESS, NO ROUPE, SORE HEAD or other diseases, which are so prevalent in OTHER LOCALITIES. Our 15 YEARS of EXPERIENCE was acquired in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA EXCLUSIVELY. NOW, DON'T YOU THINK with our EXPERIENCE, our THOROUGHBRED STOCK, our CLIMATIC CONDITIONS and our UP-TO-DATE BREEDING PENS, that we ought to give you ENTIRE SATISFACTION if you place your orders for settings of eggs WITH US? Try a SETTING OF 15 EGGS from ONE OR ALL OF OUR FOUR THOROUGHBRED PENS OF FOWLS—

BLUE-LACED ANDALUSIANS (Kentish strain,) $2.00.

WHITE ROCK (Thoroughly white,) Thomas Strain, $2.00.

BUFF LEGHORN (Thorough buff,) Arnold Strain, $1.00.

OIL PROPERTY—
Miscellaneous.

OIL—OIL—OIL—

A grand opportunity to make money; we have several hundred acres of fine oil land, with a 500-foot vein of oil running through the center of said land.

We will deed a portion of this land to a responsible party, or company, if they will put down one well on said land; the party putting down the well will own it after it is down.

This land is located in Kern county, and within three miles of a station on the S.P. R.R.; the oil could be piped to station, as it is down grade all the way. There is lots of water for drilling and drinking purposes.

MARKET LETTER.

INTERNATIONAL INVESTMENTS COMPANY'S WEEKLY MARKET LETTER NO. 32.

The record of the stock laundry for the week does not show evidence of booming business, despite the new governing board and the addition of two bank presidents to its membership. No business was done on Monday, and $20 worth was the record for Friday! A month ago some of the washing-machine brokers urged their clients to buy Reed Crude on 30-day contracts at around forty (40) cents. The thirty days are up, and anyone who was foolish enough to take this advice has the pleasure (?) now of seeing Reed Crude quoted at 32 bid, and quoted as selling at 33 cents, or a loss of $70 per thousand shares for any "sucker" who took the advice above referred to.

This week, there has been inquiry for Providence gold stock; which has been offered at around ten and twelve cents. As a result of our inquiries we look for good developments in the property of this company; but think the capitalization is high, it being $3,000,000; which makes the 25 cent stock equal to a 75 cent share in a $1,000,000 company. It is most unfortunate that this stock was started as it was; for it was first sold at two cents and then at five cents; and so by sudden leaps to 25 cents. This method of promotion is too common in Los Angeles; but then almost everybody hereabouts feels competent to promote companies; and too often the first stock issued is sold at any old price to get money; the promoters not realizing (possibly because of inexperience in such matters) that the stock is certain to come out sooner or later, and is sure to be a menace to the market price of the stock; with the inevitable result that the promoters must either buy it back at an advance in price, or have the office price at one figure and the market price at fifty or seventy-five per cent less. Either horn of the dilemma is uncomfortable.

We still have for sale, at attractive prices, some Verde King, Lincoln Gold, and Union Oil. Our orders for Loma Verde have been filled; and we so state, as we have had offers of this stock, and desire our correspondents to be notified herein.

As to the Loma Verde property itself; we are pleased to be able to report continued development with continued good results. The company informs us that both the work of sinking the double compartment shaft is so far advanced, and that of driving the first level on the West of No. 1 shaft, that they expect that the juncture of these two workings will be reached within a day or so. Sinking in the winze in the 200 ft. level east of shaft No. 2 has been continued and a depth of over 50 ft. has now been gained in the winze; the showing being good all the way down.

We have said nothing of late of any Poso being for sale; as we are not offering any at this time. The bulk of the treasury stock is in our hands, and the developments on the Loma Verde (which immediately adjoins the Poso property) are such that we prefer to retain what we have. Any stock that may be offered is the property of those who purchased of us at the start; and such orders as we receive, from time to time, we are filling as this stock happens to come on the market.

A JUDICIOUS USE OF SURPLUS CAPITAL can be made in a reliable manufacturing establishment, where the plant is new and a local demand for the output, with valuable property secured for future expansion. There is offered to the public a small block of stock for working capital by the
to carry a stock of fruit jars and packers' goods, to meet the demand when the rush comes in the canning season. Only staple goods will be manufactured, on which the freight alone is a fair profit, and the local consumption is equal to the output.

L. A. TRACTION SECURITIES. THE ANnouncement by official authority, in the daily journals, of the acquisition of the control of Traction interests by Senator W. A. Clark and associates, of the Salt Lake Railway, and the intention to bring their powerful influence and capital to bear in promoting and expanding such interests, will certainly and greatly enhance the market value of Traction securities and take them far above the low level of present low prices.

For a 5 per cent. 40-year gold bond (without optional redemption) intrinsically as good as any in the market, the price at which I can offer a block make them incomparably the best investment in the market.

I also offer 10,000 Edison Electric Company's 5 per cent. 30-year gold bonds.
$5000 Visalia City Water Co., 20-year 6 per cents.
$5000 Los Angeles-Pacific 30-year 5 per cents.

THE BEST LANDS IN SAN JOAQUIN county have been listed with us; at the present low price of $15 to $100 per acre, in tracts of 16 to 2000 acres; no safer, better investment can be offered to those interested. These lands are certain to double in value in the near future. Call for information at office of H. C. NORRIS & CO., 247 Wilcox Block.

FOR SALE—
Country Property.

FOR SALE—WE SELL THE EARTH—
BASSETT & SMITH.

Say, now, reader, we had a letter yesterday from a man we know, and who we believe speaks the truth; it should interest you, when he says: "You can say that for the past three years the property has paid better than 20 per cent. on price asked, and will pay this year 25 per cent."

We know the property, and have always regard it as first-class. It lies along the foothills, escapes the frost spells, and is located less than quarter mile from railroad depot and postoffice; in a delightful settlement.

IT IS AN ORANGE ORCHARD.

15 acres, all planted to Washington and Thompson improved navels; except 21 St. Michaels; trees 7 to 11 years old; 258 hours of water per month; which is an extra-large supply; fine soil and orchard; good hard-finished house of 8 rooms; barn, etc; this place cannot be duplicated in the district; it is a bargain; look this up Monday.

PRICE $12,000.

20-ACRE ORANGE ORCHARD.

Planted two-thirds to Washington navels and one-third Valencias, 8 years old, and in good bearing; very well located; good soil and orchard; nice, roomy cottage; barn, etc., near to railroad and packing-house; neighborhood well improved; considerably below neighboring values, a good purchase at $16,000.

A MODEL CALIFORNIA HOME.

Now that may be an indefinite phrase, but let us describe what we call "a model California home," and see how it strikes you for instance, a tract of land, say 12 to 15 acres, located on the foothills, not over 1 or 1½ hours ride by buggy from the center of a good active city; about the size of Los Angeles, so you can live in the country, yet have near-by city advantages; not too far inland, where it is hot, but just far enough to get the gentle sea breeze, tempered by passing over the hills and valleys for 15 or 20 miles; it should be a comparatively frostless location, for, of course, it must be in oranges and lemon trees, in bearing, with good yearly income; decomposed granite soil, that is easy to work; and holds moisture, good water right for the orchard and house, a model climate, unsurpassed in this world; fine view of mountain and valley; a good 2-story house; plenty of closets, large bathroom, porcelain bathtub, large halls; wide verandas, above and below, good cement cellar; house tastily, neatly and completely furnished, a well-built, barn large enough for a spanking team and auto; say, reader, if you want something like this, yes, and more, just telephone us, Black 1284, Monday morning to have our team around to your hotel at 1:30.

ALFALFA RANCHES.

Call on us for particulars relating to first-class productive alfalfa farms, raising 8 to 10 tons alfalfa hay per season; we have good bargains in tracts 10 acres up to 80 acres; $1000 to $16,000; alfalfa growing is the best bread and butter proposition in Southern California; crops always ready to meet the monthly bills.

ONLY 2 ACRES, YET HOW NICE.

One acre in full-bearing navel oranges and the other has a fine variety of other fruits; with plenty of water for irrigation; a good 6-room story-and-half house; good barn, nice shade trees; lawn, flowers of all kinds; located in pretty little settlement, only six miles from the city, 1 mile from railroad; this is a nice little home; do you want it? Price $2500.

ALSO ONE ACRE.

Most all in fine bearing Washington navel orange trees; neat 5-room cottage, only $1500.

BASSETT & SMITH.
23 202½ S. Broadway, rooms 207-8.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

As agent for a corporation known as the "Phoenix Savings Building and Loan Association of San Francisco," making loans upon real estate, I desire to call the attention of prospective borrowers to this little circular, and to the explanation of a method by which they can borrow money at reasonable rates, and upon easy terms.

Our plan of making loans allows the repayment of the principal with interest in equal monthly installments, and as each installment is paid the amount so paid is divided into two parts; one being the interest upon the balance due, the other being a credit upon the principal sum secured by the mortgage. By this process the borrower pays interest ONLY UPON THE SUM OF MONEY UNPAID, and not interest upon the whole sum for the whole time, as has been the common practice of building and loan associations in California during the last decade of years.

Our loan relieves the borrower from any stock liabilities, and from the dependence upon the maturity of stock, as is usually the case with building and loan associations, for the purpose of determining the duration of the mortgage or the number of installments to be paid. The loan is a plain, everyday contract, stripped of all verbiage and technicalities, and incomprehensible details, and any schoolboy with an ordinary knowledge of mathematics can figure out the balance due upon one of our mortgage contracts.

To render the loan entirely flexible the following options are given to borrowers;

(a) The corporation will permit borrowers to pay in any sum of money in excess of the agreed monthly installment. Such additional payments will be applied to the principal on the 20th of the month next succeeding the date of payment, and interest will only be computed upon the balance ascertained after crediting said amounts.

(b) Another option is presented. The borrower may reduce his original loan in sums of $100 by the payment of an amount sufficient, together with the previous amounts paid upon each $100, to equal the said sum of $100, and by this means reduce the monthly installment of both principal and interest to be paid thereafter.

(c) After one year from date of the mortgage, the borrower may repay the entire sum then remaining due.

ILLUSTRATION.

Showing monthly cost for the repayment of a loan of $1000, including interest from three to ten years, as explained in the foregoing circular, and including the payment of the mortgage tax by the corporation will be cheerfully furnished in this office.

FOR SALE—
We beat the entire Pacific Coast on fine cottages, barring none. Why? I have had 40 years' experience, have built here and in Chicago 2400 houses in the last 40 years, and know my business.

First—We use nothing but No. 1 material.

Second—We size all of our timbers that go into a frame.

Third—We build all of our cottages by the day's work and employ nothing but the best mechanics, and I superintend all the work myself, and we finish a house complete.

Fourth—We use nothing but oil and lead in painting and the best of filler and varnish on inside finish.

Fifth—We try and save a woman all the steps we can in doing her work.

Sixth—We believe in ventilation. We ventilate the kitchen over the stove to carry off all the smoke and all odors.

We ventilate our clothes closets to keep the clothes from mildewing.

We ventilate our toilet-room to get rid of disagreeable odors or any sewer gas that might arise.

Seventh—We have wired every single room in the house, including pantry, toilet-room, bath-room, front and back porches; also switches for all the main rooms.

Eighth—All rooms have curtains and galvanized wire screens.

Ninth—Cove ceilings, decorated ceilings and beautifully papered with ingrain; kitchen finished in granite; front porch and large back screen porch.

Our pantry has flour bins, ice cooler, sets of drawers, and pantry is well shelved.

Bath-room contains heavy porcelain tub, marble slab and bowl; all work bronzed; hot and cold water, and everything strictly up to date.

Also a fine cellar.

We are selling these houses from $1950 to $2800; $200 down or more; $12.50 per month to $20 per month.

We also have two fine houses on Washington st., not papered, for $250 down and $25 per month, including interest.

There is no cheaper interest in California than we charge—6 per cent.

Our motto is—"Square dealing. Live and let live."

Come and see me and talk with owner.

We open Sunday (today) to accommodate those that cannot come week days. We will not open Sundays after today.
